THREE CHINESE OFFICIALS SLAIN AT WASHINGTON

T. T. Wong, Head of Educational Mission, and Two Aids Found Dead in Their Home.

MARKS LEFT ON THE SAFE

STUDENT MAKES DISCOVERY

Tragedy Occurred in Fashionable Columbia Heights Section of the City.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Three members of the Chinese Educational Mission to the United States, in charge of handling the work of the education of Chinese students in the United States, were found murdered in their home and headquarters at 2,023 Kalorama Road, in Columbia Heights, in the fashionable northwest section of Washington today.

Those killed were Theodore T. Wong, [illegible] years old, chief of the Chinese Educational Mission; C. H. Hsia, 35 years old, and Dan Sen Woo, 21 years old, both secretaries of the mission. One of the younger men was a student at George Washington University.

The bodies were found by Kong Li, a student at George Washington University, a friend of the members of the mission, who had been puzzled over the absence of one of the secretaries from the university classes, after he had been missing several days, and who went to the headquarters of the mission to investigate.

The tragedy stirred Major Pullman, Chief of Police, and the headquarters detectives to great activity, on account of the peculiarity of the circumstances, the Oriental elements involved, and because of the prominence of the chief of the mission.

Alive Last Tuesday.

Wong, Hsia, and Woo were last seen alive last Tuesday. Kong Li after discovering the bodies reported the matter to the police. According to Kong, he went to the Kalorama Road residence shortly before 6 o'clock tonight. He said he went there because one of the secretaries had been absent from the university. Failing to obtain any response when he rang the door bell, he entered the house through an open window and once inside made the discovery and then notified the police.

When the police reached the house they found the body of Wong, the chief of the mission, in the library. There was a bullet wound in his left breast. In the basement of the dwelling were found the bodies of the two secretaries, Hsia and Woo. Hsia had been shot in the back and Woo in the left breast.

The pistol with which the men had been shot was found on a chair near Wong's body. Traces of a death struggle were in evidence. A heavy brass table lamp lay on the floor among the shattered remnants of the shade and bulb. A chair in the dining room adjoining was overturned, and a brown-colored elastic from a garter was on the floor.

The bodies of Hsia, who was secretary and treasurer of the mission, and Woo, confidential secretary to Wong, were found lying head to head in the furnace room, and evidently had been dragged there. A gas water heater still was burning when officers entered the kitchen, which also is in the basement. Blood stains were on the kitchen floor and the narrow stairs leading down to it.

The police are at a loss for a motive for the triple murder.

Kept Large Sums in Safe.

It was reported tonight that the members of the mission, from time to time, kept large sums of money in a safe in the house, and that there had been rumors that the safe had been tampered with and that some of the money had been missed. It is possible that this will result in establishing the motive for the murders.

Detectives made a careful examination of the safe to-night, and, it is said, found fingerprints about the combination which were not identical with those of any of the murdered men.

Practically all the money which the members of the mission used in carrying out their work was kept in this safe, the mission having few if any banking transactions of importance. No definite information could be obtained as to the amount of money which had been kept there, however. Detectives are endeavoring to obtain information of a definite character concerning any sums which may have been missed.

It also was said late tonight that there had been reports to the police several days ago that an effort had been made to tamper with the safe and that a detective had called at the house. He did not find any member of the mission at the time, according to this report. Whether subsequent investigations were made is not known.

A theory was advanced tonight that the murders had been committed by a Chinese who had had access to the mission. This man is reported missing tonight and Detectives Burlingame and [illegible] have gone to New York in search of him. Definite information has been received that a Chinese answering the description of the fugitive left Washing-

For Mixed Commission to Aid Austria

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The American commission to Austria and Hungary, headed by Professor Coolidge, according to Az Est of Budapest, as quoted in a Vienna dispatch received here, proposes the formation of a mixed commission to settle all economic, financial, provisioning, and national questions in the former monarchy.

The commission will be composed of representatives of the various States formed from the former monarchy.

BARS EXTRA RATE ON HOTEL PHONES

Burleson Orders Service Cut Off from Those Charging Ten Cents a Call.

SENDS ORDER TO BETHELL

Hotel Association Spokesman Says They Will Obey, Though Extra Charge is for 'Service.'

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Postmaster General Burleson has instructed Chairman Union N. Bethell of the Wire Operating Board to cut off telephone service in any New York Hotel charging more than the regular exchange rate for use of the telephones. This means that the hotels will be unable, in future, to charge an extra 5 cents "for service" in addition to the 5 cents charged for a telephone call.

The Postmaster General's telegram to Chairman Bethell was as follows:

> Washington, Jan. 31, 1919.
> Mr. Union N. Bethell, Chairman, United States Telegraph and Telephone Operating Board, 195 Broadway, New York:
> I notice from the papers that certain New York hotels have determined to charge 10 cents for telephone messages, in violation of my Order No. 2,349. You will direct officials operating the New York Telephone Company's lines to discontinue service to any hotel, apartment house, club, or similar institution, which shall charge any guest, tenant, or member for telephone messages an amount in excess of that charged for such service at the public pay stations in the same exchange.
> A. S. BURLESON,
> Postmaster General.

When the text of the Postmaster General's order was read to Mr. Bethell over the telephone last night he was not inclined to comment upon it. He did say, however, that if the order reached him today he would act upon it. It had not arrived when Mr. Bethell left his office yesterday afternoon.

"Will you give the hotels and other places making the additional charge an opportunity to conform with the Postmaster's order before cutting off their service?" he was asked.

"Oh, I imagine they will conform with it," was Mr. Bethell's reply.

Fred A. Muschenheim, Chairman of the Telephone Committee of the New York Hotel Association, refused to comment upon the message last night on the plea that it had not reached him officially.

Copeland Townsend of the Hotel Majestic in discussing the situation last night said:

"We are absolutely charging only a 5-cent toll for telephone calls from our rooms and booths, but we are adding the 5 cents extra for service, which I deem reasonable. However, if the Postmaster General rules that this extra tax is to be prohibited I shall forthwith obey his order without any quibbling.

"I believe that when he gets all the facts in the case he will not peremptorily deprive hotels the right, for telephone usage, of making a charge that even the guest is in most cases glad to pay. It is the person from the outside, who could just as well go to a pay station, who makes all the fuss."

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 31.—Supreme Court Justice Rudd granted an order today on application of the Public Service Commission of the Second District, directing the New York Telephone Company to show why it had the right to change its rates without first filing with the Commission a complete schedule of the changes and receiving permission to make them. The order is returnable here on Feb. 8.

WILSON SWINGS HOUSE COMMITTEE FOR BIG NAVY BILL

Unanimous Report Follows Receipt of a Vigorous Message from the President.

POWER TO SUSPEND PLAN

President May Defer It if Instrumentality for Peace Is Set Up.

NO BUILDING FOR ONE YEAR

Measure Is Submitted by Padgett, and Its Early Passage Is Predicted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Influenced by a vigorous message from President Wilson in support of a three-year naval building program, the House Naval Affairs Committee today dropped all opposition to the proposal for enlarging the navy at this time and unanimously reported the bill for the $600,000,000 program.

With a modification deferring the actual construction of the ships until Feb. 1, 1920, and also a proviso by which the program may be suspended if a competent instrumentality for international peace is set up, the bill was unanimously reported to the House, where its passage is expected.

Opposition to the program had been unalterable until today. Even the stubborn opposition of Representative Thomas S. Butler of Pennsylvania, and Representative William J. Browning of New Jersey, leading Republicans on the committee, disappeared, and five Democrats—Representatives Venable, Vinson, Hensley, Oliver, and Connolly—joined with others in making the report unanimous.

Great secrecy was maintained as to the message that induced the unanimous report.

Representative Butler said that he would do all he could to further the passage of the bill through the House.

"I have without variation up to this time opposed the building program asked by President Wilson," said Mr. Butler, "but I have received information this day which compels me to assume responsibility for voting for the bill and for the enlarged navy program."

Text of the Amendment.

The text of the amendment which provides that the Secretary of the Navy shall award no contracts on the authorized vessels prior to Feb. 1, 1920, a compromise, which, with other reasons, won over the opposition, follows:

> For the purpose of further increasing the naval establishment of the United States the President is hereby authorized to undertake prior to July 1, 1922, the construction of the vessels enumerated below:
> Ten first-class battleships, carrying as heavy armor and as powerful armament as any vessels of their class, to have the highest practicable speed and greatest desirable radius of action; two of these at a cost, exclusive of armor and armament, not to exceed $21,000,000 each, to be begun as soon as practicable, subject to the limitations herein contained.
> Ten scout cruisers carrying suitable protection and armament suited to their size and type, to have the highest practicable speed and greatest desirable radius of action; two to cost, exclusive of armor and armament, not to exceed $8,000,000 each; to be begun as soon as practicable, subject to the limitations herein.
> And for the purpose of further increasing the naval establishment of the United States in accordance with

Viscount Grey, Famous British Diplomat, All but Sightless, Student in Blind School

Viscount Grey, the former British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who played such an important part in the world's diplomacy at the beginning of the war, is going blind, according to Sir Arthur Pearson, Bart, G. C. B. E., founder of St. Dunstan's Hotel for Blinded Sailors and Soldiers, himself blind, who is at the Hotel Plaza. Viscount Grey's sight has been failing for several years until now he can no longer see to read or write, and is learning to typewrite as the only civilian pupil at St. Dunstan's.

"Viscount Grey's sight has been going for three or four years," said Sir Arthur, the success of whose methods in aiding the blind are world famous, "and he has been unable to read for about three months. In fact, he can no longer see to write."

Sir Arthur was asked whether he thought Viscount Grey had permanently retired from public affairs in Great Britain.

"He never told me that he was going to retire because his sight was failing. He is only 56 years old, and I would not feel at liberty to discuss that, because I have not been so informed by Viscount Grey himself," Sir Arthur replied.

Every man who enters St. Dunstan's is taught to read Braille print and to operate a typewriter. This last requirement has a psychological effect, Sir Arthur declared, as it aided a man in regaining his lost independence. Every man is presented with a typewriter as soon as he has passed the required test, which is as stringent as that given in any commercial school to students who can see.

Viscount Grey, who as Sir Edward Grey, was the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs for more than eleven years, has been often called the ablest diplomat of the present generation. He was credited with having done much toward keeping the great powers of Europe at peace during the troubled period of the Balkan wars and with having done his utmost to prevent the great war. In Germany he was denounced as a "sinister conspirator" and was regarded during the war as one of those chiefly responsible for the Entente coalition against the Central Powers.

He backed France unhesitatingly in the Morocco episode which almost plunged France and Germany into war. One of the main principles of his policy as Foreign Secretary was to support France. At the same time, up to the outbreak of the war, he worked toward reaching a better understanding with Germany and removing all possible causes for friction between the two nations.

He ruled the Foreign Office longer than any other man since Canning.

Bolshevist Leader Hanged in Rumania

VIENNA, Jan. 29, (via Geneva).—Dr. Bermann, head of the Bolshevist mission to succor Russian war prisoners in Hungary, who was expelled and deported from Budapest in company with forty members of the mission, is reported to have been hanged on reaching the Rumanian frontier.

Bermann was prominent in the Moscow Soviet and leader of the Bolshevist agitation in Hungary.

RIOTS IN GLASGOW; 40 PERSONS HURT

Police and Strikers Clash and Clubs and Bottles Are Used with Serious Effect.

MANY TRAMCARS WRECKED

Soldiers' Defiance of Mob Starts Fight—Two Strike Leaders and Others Arrested

GLASGOW, Jan. 31.—Serious conflicts between the police and strikers developed today in which at least forty persons were more or less seriously injured, among them Sheriff Mackenzie, Chief Constable Stevenson, Deputy Constable Reunie, and several policemen. These were all injured by bottles thrown by strikers when the police were clearing the streets in baton charges. Two of the strike leaders, William Gallagher and David Kirkwood, were arrested and were charged with inciting to riot. Both are still in custody.

During the height of the disorders the riot act was read, and it was contemplated to invoke military aid. But the order was canceled when Gallagher and Kirkwood were permitted by the authorities to address the strikers and exhort them to march off in orderly procession as nothing more could be done today.

Despite this advice, however, there were wild scenes of disorder, and in various parts of the city looting was indulged in. One jewelry shop had goods to the value of $10,000 stolen, while other shops were pillaged during the course of the riot. About twenty-four tramcars were so badly damaged that they had to be withdrawn from the service.

Matters quieted down late in the afternoon, but at night dense crowds again gathered before the City Hall. The police made several baton charges and dispersed them.

The rioting today developed with great suddenness. It was due in part to the Provost's refusal to accede to the appeal of the strike leaders to withdraw the police and in part to a dramatic incident when a soldier boarded one of the tramcars that the strikers were attempting to stop and defied the strikers to touch the vehicle. The police dealt vigorous blows with their batons when attacked by the rioters, and some serious wounds were inflicted.

The clash occurred in George Square, where the strikers had been called to meet at noon.

The police charged a crowd of strikers with their batons, the mounted police were called out, and a number of arrests were made.

With a view to stopping street-car traffic the strikers attacked cars and twelve of them were thrown from the tracks and smashed in the Salt Market. Other cars were attacked in other parts of the city.

The shipbuilding firms have notified the strikers that unless they resume work tomorrow on a forty-seven-hour week basis the employers will institute a six-week lockout.

RIOTS CONFINED TO GLASGOW.

London Hears of No Disorder Among Strikers Elsewhere.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Except for serious developments in Glasgow, the labor situation was not materially changed today. It was reported that some Belfast firms had threatened to institute a lockout, but as yet this has not been officially confirmed.

The Belfast concerns affected by the strike, however, issued a joint statement contending that any change of hours must be a national affair, and asserting that they were willing to adopt whatever standard might be nationally decided upon. They declare that if a shorter working week than forty-seven hours is adopted only in Belfast, that city will be unfairly handicapped.

The Belfast linen mills are still running, but it is considered not impossible that they may eventually become involved. Order has been maintained up to the present through the Strike Committee having agreed that its pickets might assist the police in keeping the peace, and the pickets are patrolling the streets wherever disorder is likely to arise. Strong efforts are being made to induce Dublin to join the strike.

As an instance of the novel phases of the strike movement, 2,000 strikers at Edinburgh today demanded that the Edinburgh Corporation should grant £2,000 for a strike fund, and the Leigh Corporation £500, and threatened unconstitutional acts if their demands were refused.

There is a prospect of a strike in the electrical trades in South Wales tomorrow. Representatives of the Miners' Federation were in conference today with the Labor Ministry and the Board of Trade concerning the miners' demands for a 30 per cent. increase in wages, a six-hour day, and nationalization of the mines. The Labor Minister promised to place the whole matter before the Cabinet. The executive of the federation has in the meantime issued an order deprecating any local strikes to secure these demands.

The seriousness of the situation is not being ignored by the Government. It was the subject for discussion at a special meeting of the Cabinet, held yester-

COLONY PLAN STIRS SENATE

Lodge, Borah, Knox, and Johnson Denounce Internationalizing Project.

LODGE CALLS IT MEDDLING

Fears That It Will Involve America in Difficulties with Boers and Australians.

BORAH'S VIOLENT PROTEST

Would Oppose League if It Had Divine Sanction—Sees Peril to Monroe Doctrine.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Proposed participation by the United States in the control of former German colonies in South Africa and the Pacific was attacked in the Senate today as involving an impossible international situation. A press dispatch from Paris, printed today, predicting that under the plan suggested to the Peace Conference by President Wilson this country would assume an active part in their administration precipitated the debate, which gradually developed bitter criticism by Republican Senators, who alleged that the Senate was kept in ignorance by the President of what was happening at the Quai d'Orsay.

Senators Knox of Pennsylvania and Lodge of Massachusetts said that the situation pictured by the newspaper account was "preposterous," and that this country, if it undertook such administration, would be "meddling," while Senator Borah of Idaho resented an implication by Senator Lewis of Illinois, Democrat, that the Republicans failed to exhibit confidence in the President.

"We should not be charged with lack of confidence in the President," said Senator Borah. "It is not a question of confidence or lack of confidence.

"The President has said he is in favor of a League of Nations. If the Saviour of Mankind would revisit the earth and declare for a League of Nations I would be opposed to it. That is my position. It is not a question of personality. It is a question of policy for my Government, and that I will decide regardless of individuals."

Another Senator who said he was much dissatisfied with lack of news from abroad was Hiram Johnson of California.

Senators Kirby of Arkansas and Walsh of Montana, Democrats, defended the course of the President.

Knox Cannot Credit Report.

"One can scarcely read this dispatch," said Senator Knox, without reaching the conclusion that it is the purpose of the allied powers not only to allow us to conduct operations in these German colonies and take them over under a trusteeship or receivership, but that the maintenance of the peace of the world is to rest upon us. If that is true, of course, there is no army which this country could raise that would be sufficient for such a purpose, and there is no burden of taxation that could be laid upon the people of the United States that would be adequate to maintain such a force. I hope that these stories are not true; I cannot believe that they can be true; I cannot believe that without consulting the Congress of the United States the members of the committees that have charge of these special matters or the people of the United States can be pledged to any such stupendous and preposterous undertaking."

The Pennsylvania Senator was followed by Senator Lodge, who said he had always felt that the most important thing to do at Paris was to make peace with Germany.

"But, instead of that," he continued, "the time has been spent over there in discussing questions not one of which has been essential to the making of peace with Germany. And now come these reports of the last two or three days which seem to be absolutely unbelievable. I know that the dispatches are colored—almost all of them colored for a certain defined purpose—and yet it seems incredible that some of the things should be pure invention. We apparently are being involved in some sort of guarantee, either with force or without force, to take care of the German possessions in Africa and in the Pacific Ocean.

"We seem to have involved ourselves already in serious difficulties with the Australians and the Boers of South Africa—populations with which we have always been friendly and sympathetic. Our good relations with Australia are of tremendous importance. I do not know exactly what we are doing, but we seem to be annoying them very much; and in some method we are apparently going to guarantee and sustain and watch over republics or states made up of Bantus and Hottentots, and we are to be meddling with them all the time in an indefinite future.

"Now, I do not think the safety of the world or the making of peace, which is our first duty, is concerned very much with what happens in Africa or in-

Council Takes Up Serbian and Rumanian Claims; Will Send Delegates to Hold Czech-Polish Area

PARIS, Jan. 31.—President Wilson and the allied Prime Ministers in the Supreme Council session this afternoon examined into the Balkan problems, notably the disputes between the Serbians and Rumanians, and also considered the Polish question.

This communiqué concerning the council session was given out:

> The President of the United States of America, the Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers of the allied and associated powers, and the representatives of Japan met this afternoon at 3 o'clock.
> The delegates of the great powers, composing the Interallied Commission, which will shortly proceed to Poland, were introduced to state the conclusions which they had reached after hearing the representatives of Poland and of the Czechoslovak Republic regarding the provisional exploitation of the industrial district of Teschen.
> After listening to the reports made by M. Noulens and by General Gothe, in the name of their colleagues, the allied Ministers decided to send to Teschen allied delegates for the purpose of assuring a peaceful exploitation in agreement with the Czechs and the Poles, pending a territorial settlement of the question by the conference.
> A statement of the views of the respective interests and rights of Rumania and Serbia in the Banat of Temesvar was then heard. M. Bratiano and M. Mishu represented the Rumanian Government, and the Serbian delegation was composed of M. Pachitch, M. Vesnitch, and M. Trumbitch.
> The next meeting was fixed for tomorrow (Saturday), at 3 o'clock.

The commissions, charged with an examination into the labor problems, compensation, and damages, shortly will begin their work.

BRITISH TO CLEAR WAR-STREWN LAND

Troops Will Remove Mines and "Duds" So That French Farmers May Plow.

TO SALVAGE WAR MATERIAL

Vast Benefits Expected to Accrue to Inhabitants Through Systematic Co-operation.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—The British Army will co-operate actively in the reconstruction of French territory devastated by the Germans. The British High Command has informed the French military authorities that it will do its utmost to put the ground in condition for cultivation and to facilitate the return of the inhabitants and will also undertake the removal of unexploded projectiles from the fields, as well as of other war material which would hinder cultivation.

It is difficult for any one who has not visited the battlefields to realize the importance of such work. There are not only "dud" shells, but land mines and anti-tank charges that were laid by both sides in the flux and reflux of battle. Inhabitants who have just returned from the region of Cambrai—to take one instance only—say that explosions are constant. Some are deliberate, as the result of the work of the specialists cleaning up the ground, but many are accidental and attended with loss of life and damage to property.

The British will obviate all this by thorough demarkation of all danger points, which will be followed by expert removal or blocking up of the charges. They purpose to organize working companies in the various armies of the northern region, from Amiens to Valenciennes, and from Bapaume to Roubai.

The British High Command has also announced its desire of satisfying in every way possible the requirements of the local civilian authorities with a view to repairing war damages. All material gathered from the land will be stored in proximity to railroad depots, to be handed over as required to the inhabitants for building and other constructive work. Finally, all expenses of the maintenance and payment of the working companies will be borne by the British Army.

It is doubtful if any decision could be of greater benefit to the devastated regions. Hitherto the confusion of powers between the French military and civil authorities—not to mention the further complications between the functions of the State and local bodies—combined with transport difficulties, has resulted in the regions concerned being little better off materially than during the German occupation. The prime necessity is to clear the land, not only of projectiles, but of barbed wire, concrete, and thousands of wooden structures that might be useful elsewhere, but which in their present position are merely obstacles.

It is hoped that the British initiative in the north will be followed by similar action on the part of the French Army in other sectors. Once the ground is cleared agricultural work, which is not the least important feature of reconstruction, can be resumed speedily and without danger.

SAY DOMINIONS ARE PROTECTED

London Correspondents in Paris Now Look for Acceptable Scheme.

STILL SOME DIFFICULTIES

Morning Post Editorially Reminds Wilson That He Is No "Dictator."

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The Press Bureau last night issued the following statement:

"We are authorized to state that the account of the proceedings of the Peace Conference regarding the disposal of the German colonies and the territories of the Turkish Empire, which appeared in certain papers today is mischievous, inaccurate, and entirely misleading."

As there were almost as many different accounts of the proceedings in question as there are newspapers, it is difficult to say to which one the statement was intended to apply. The Morning Post says:

"If it was meant for us, we can only say that we have complete confidence in our Paris correspondent, and that we believe his report to be substantially correct."

Again this morning several Paris correspondents professed themselves able to outline the decisions of the Conference on the German colonial question. Major General Sir Frederick Maurice, who represents the Daily News in Paris, says:

"I have good reason to believe that the reports that serious difficulties over the settlement of the colonial question have arisen are exaggerated and that the prospects of acceptance of the mandatory principle are very encouraging.

"The representatives of our dominions have, I understand, accepted the view that their interests will be adequately protected if they are nominated as mandatory authorities under the general supervision of the League of Nations for those territories. The Dominion of South Africa will become the trustee for German Southwest Africa and East Africa, New Zealand for Samoa, Australia for those Pacific islands formerly in Japan's hands, which lie south of the equator.

"It may be taken as certain that France will be trustee for the greater part of the Kamerun and for Togoland, and, I understand, that Japan is prepared to apply the same principle to Kiao-Chau, which, under certain reservations, will revert to China. At the moment of writing there remains only the question of the destination of Pacific islands, north of the equator which are claimed by Japan.

"So far, then, from giving cause for anxiety, the discussion promises to develop as favorably as the friends of the League of Nations hope."

Says Wilson Is Very Firm.

The London Times Paris correspondent says:

"It has been proposed that in case of a country becoming the mandatory for contiguous or nearly contiguous territory, it should be allowed to apply to such territory its own regulation for such things as immigration. This idea, if adopted, would meet the chief objections of Australia and South Africa to any mandatory system, which might result in bringing on to their thresholds large numbers, in one case of Japanese and in the other case of Indian immigration.

"Discussion on the colonies is likely to continue for a little time yet. It is known that on this President Wilson

DIFFERENCES WERE ACUTE

President Said to Have Spoken Plainly Against Any Peace of "Loot."

PARIS, Jan. 31.—After the adjournment of today's session of the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference, information was obtained that, despite the fact that Japan had not yet assented to the principle of no annexations and the government of the German colonies through a mandatory system, a settlement had been reached which gave assurance that the Wilson plan for the government of the surrendered and conquered enemy possessions would be put into effect.

This means that the great powers will be able to undertake the administration of these dependencies under a scheme of economic management proposed by the American plenipotentiaries. What that scheme is has not yet been disclosed, but those acquainted with the plan says that it will be satisfactory.

Evidently the agreement over this perplexing problem was arranged through private conferences and not in the sessions of the Supreme Council, which have proved that it is difficult for any considerable number of men to reach an understanding.

Colonel House, Lord Robert Cecil, and General Smuts have been able to accomplish more in the way of bringing about an agreement and harmony on all phases of the League of Nations program through their private interviews than have the principal plenipotentiaries in their formal sessions.

It is becoming patent that efforts to adjust troublesome questions through private conversations between a few men are being resorted to more and more, and that this policy will be followed from now on.

President Busy on Details.

PARIS, Jan. 31, (Associated Press.)—While the Supreme Council of the great powers was occupied today with some lesser controversies the chief business was in private conference as a sequel to the decision on the German colonies.

Having accepted the American plan for supervision of the colonies by the League of Nations, it has now become necessary to give body and substance to a League of Nations in order that it may perform the important tasks which are committed to its care. This is regarded as the chief business immediately ahead, and President Wilson is giving it his main attention.

The President called to the Paris White House last night and entertained Colonel Edward M. House and the other members of the League of Nations Commission, and tonight he went to American headquarters for another discussion on this subject with Lord Robert Cecil, the British representative; Colonel House, Secretary of State Lansing, and others.

It is the President's personal desire with regard to the colonies, with the League of Nations supervising the mandatories, that the details to be presented will prove workable. There is every expectation that the President's plans will be carried out acceptably to him.

The crisis in the negotiations over the disposition of Germany's colonies seemed today to have passed, momentarily at least. It is too early to say that President Wilson's view has prevailed in its entirety, but in American quarters there is confidence that a compromise plan will be worked out with details which will be acceptable.

The net result of two days of discussion on the colonial question, in the opinion of many Americans here, has been to clear the atmosphere generally and force a clear definition of aims on all sides.

The opinion is rather generally expressed that with this question settled it will be much easier to go on to other subjects which are awaiting attention.

When the Supreme Council met today it had before it the very plain statement, made by President Wilson at Wednesday's late session. So particular was Mr. Wilson to have an exact record of what he had said that soon after entering the meeting he summoned one of his personal stenographers and kept him at his side during the session.

What he said did not appear in the official communiqué, nor has it been disclosed with any official authority, but it may be stated that it was a very clear reaffirmation of the principles for which the President has previously contended.

In phrases stripped of diplomatic niceties, it is understood, Mr. Wilson told the members of the Supreme Council that he would not be party to a division of Germany's colonial possessions among the powers which now hold them, and then become party to a League of Nations which, in effect, would guarantee their title. There are inferences that the President even referred to a peace of "loot."

The general public will probably not see a full report of yesterday's session, which will probably have historic significance, until after the treaty of peace is signed, if at all.

In the discussions President Wilson contended in no uncertain terms that to divide the colonies among the Entente nations would be in direct contravention of the "Fourteen Points," which were accepted as a basis of peace. Such a division, he is said to have added, would also violate the principles of the League of Nations as laid down at the Peace Conference Saturday.

President Wilson, it is understood, still holds to his original opinion that it would be scarcely worth while for the United States to participate in the negotiations unless a League of Nations, with the accompanying principles, were provided for in making peace.

The only Government that was continuing to make formal objection yesterday afternoon to the compromise plan ofadministering the colonies was the Australian Government, said the plan of administering the colonies was. Her delegates were said to regard the ownership of New Guinea as vital to the existence of Australia. Premier Clemenceau, however, the newspaper adds, promised Australia full support in safeguarding her position. There is no possibility now, The Daily Mail declares, of Australia continuing her independent opposition to the plan.

One result of the attitude taken by Italy in yesterday's discussions, The Daily Mail states, was the decision that the mandatory system of administration should only be applied to non-European territories. Thus the fate of the Adriatic coast, the Balkan Austrian lands, and the French territorial claims against Germany, which include, it should be noted, the Saar Valley, adds the newspaper, remains for independent consideration.

Another Secret Treaty Found.

Two Premiers, Bratiano of Rumania and Pachitch of Serbia, were heard by the council today, on the boundary issue—the last question lying between them. It developed that another secret treaty was signed in August, 1916, as a condition of Rumania's entry into the war, under which Rumania was holding all the territory within designated river boundaries.

M. Pachitch, on behalf of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, said that the Rumanian treaty was made without the knowledge of Serbia, which was largely concerned in it. He invoked the principle of nationality, which President Wilson has enunciated, in support of the claim of the Serbians to the region, where, he asserted, the Serbs largely exceeded the Rumanians.

Although the hearing showed a sharp difference in views, there is reason to believe that mutual concessions will lead to an agreement between Serbia and Rumania, or, if not, that a commission will be appointed to deal with the subject.

The hearing given to the Serbs today is expected to be followed by the early presentation of the Jugoslav claims to the Eastern Adriatic, which involve delicate questions and render probable a formidable issue with Italy over the Adriatic coast.

Adriatic Situation Acute.

In anticipation of this question Prince Regent Alexander of Serbia will arrive here tomorrow for the special purpose of personally laying Serbia's case before President Wilson. Meantime reports from the region in controversy show increasing tension there.

One dispatch from Laibach says the Italian troops have withdrawn from Fiume, the central point of the controversy, and that an interallied commission has taken charge of the city. Another dispatch, from Agram, announces that Serbian battalions have entered Fiume and that the Italians have retired to a point near Volosca. These dispatches are unofficial, but they are taken as indications of the growing acuteness of this issue on the Adriatic coast.

There will be no plenary session of the Peace Conference tomorrow, according to an announcement made today.

BRAZIL WILL PRESS CLAIMS.

Demands 120,000,000 Marks from Germany for Commandeered Coffee.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—Brazil has two matters of particular interest in the settlement of war claims—payment by Germany for coffee which Brazil was forced to sell to her a little while after the war began, funds for which are still on deposit in Berlin, and a decision as to German ships interned in Brazilian waters and seized by Brazil when she entered the struggle. These claims were outlined by Dr. Epitacio Pessoa, head of the Brazilian delegation to the Peace Conference, in the course of an interview printed in the Temps today.

After saying that Brazil would "follow the lead of the great powers, to whom she owes her rapid progress and prompt development upon matters of general interest," Dr. Pessoa said:

"When the war began, there were 2,000,000 sacks of coffee belonging to a Brazilian company stored at Hamburg, Bremen, Trieste, and Antwerp. This coffee was under contract between the Brazilian company and French, British, and German banks. It was commandeered. Brazil protested energetically, but was forced to sell the coffee to Germany for 120,000,000 marks, which was deposited in the S. Bleichroeder Bank, in Berlin, under the responsibility of Germany, and still remains there. Germany must pay this money at the rate of exchange obtaining at the time the coffee was requisitioned and interest from that date.

"After protesting many times against unrestricted warfare, which caused her heavy losses, Brazil seized all German ships interned in Brazilian ports. There were forty-three of these ships, thirty of which have been loaned to France.

"The Brazilian Government does not desire an exceptional settlement of these questions, but merely a settlement which gives her full justice and is in complete accord with the decision of the great powers in the matter."

FOR INTERNATIONAL DANUBE.

Serbian Delegate Strongly Favors Policy of Joint Control.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Serbia, which is perhaps more than any other country represented at the Peace Conference interested in the questions of waterways and railways as the conference will deal with them, is in favor of a policy of international control, according to Dr. M. R. Vesnitch, one of the two Serbian delegates to the conference. He informed The Associated Press correspondent today that his country was not only willing, but anxious, to have the conference adopt the principle of international regulation on international waterways.

This official expression, in view of Serbia's peculiar concern in navigation on the Danube, has increased the interest in the subject of waterway internationalization, which is to be one of the first considered by the special committee created by the Peace Conference to deal with questions concerning the regulation of ports, waterways, and railroads, when the committee effects its organization within the next few days. Serbia's adhesion to the principle, it is thought by those favoring it, will go far toward assuring its adoption.

Dr. Vesnitch said that Serbia would ask only that the principles adopted for waterway regulation be of general application, so that each nation through whose territories or along whose borders flowed natural watercourses common to more than one country should have an equal voice in the regulation of the traffic, and that there should be no discrimination.

The Minister pointed out that the Danube River Commission, which had for many years administered traffic on the stream and looked after its improvement from an engineering point of view, had ceased to function and might be regarded as finally abandoned. It would be for the Peace Conference to say what should replace it, and he felt that he could say that Serbia would be ready to accept the decision of the peacemaking body on that point.

SAYS BRITAIN HOPES FOR GAINS ELSEWHERE

Looks for Solution of Other Problems, Now That Wilson's Proposal Has Been Accepted.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail in a dispatch to his paper today says that Japan formally accepted yesterday the theory of internationalization of colonies, and that it was understood that South Africa had abandoned its opposition to the scheme.

"President Wilson," the correspondent adds, "undoubtedly won an immense diplomatic victory, but has had to modify his original proposals to some extent."

As a result of Great Britain's acceptance of President Wilson's proposal, the correspondent adds, she hopes for an easier solution of some other problems, especially concerning Mesopotamia, of which India expects to be the mandatory. India, the dispatch continues, also desires to be the mandatory for German East Africa, hoping that it will afford a field for emigration.

It will be found, says the Paris correspondent of The Evening Standard, that Italy is willing to withdraw her claim on the port of Fiume as part of Italian nationality. Italy will agree, the dispatch adds, to Fiume being made a free port as the port of Hamburg was a free city before 1870.

GERMANS WATCHING WILSON.

Paper Expresses Anxiety for Full Disclosure of League Plans.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 30.—The German press is following everything relating to the Peace Conference with acute interest, especially what it considers indications of the United States policy.

President Wilson's League of Nations speech is published fully in all the German papers, though as yet there has been little comment on it. The Rhenish Westphalian says:

"President Wilson's speech shows much enthusiasm, but little reality. The matter is highly important, because of what the European Entente powers have accepted of the league. The views of this American crusader should have been expressed concretely.

"The Paris Congress is supposed to be a Peace Congress. What is the President of the United States waiting for in order to expose the positive ideas of his league? If Wilson is only able to give such general phrases on such an important occasion, then the supposition that he is to give his Allies precedence and their aims a free road is probably correct."

Theodore Wolff reiterates the idea that Germany will only accept a peace according to Wilsonian principles, and that no obstacles must be raised if German-Austria wishes to join Germany.

NO AMERICAN TROOPS TO BE SENT TO TURKEY

Supreme Council Committee Is Planning Allotment of Forces on the Western Front.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Whatever forces may be sent to Turkey for garrisoning purposes, there will be no American troops among them, it came out today. It is pointed out that their use for this purpose would be inappropriate, as the United States had never been at war with Turkey.

The Military Committee of the Supreme Council expects to report within two days a plan for allotment among the nations of the troops to be retained on the western front. From data available it appears that by April 1 there will be fifteen American divisions remaining on the lines, with five divisions ready for embarkation homeward. A month later it is expected that this aggregate will be reduced by five divisions, of which ten will be on the lines and five ready to return.

The length of the stay in France of these ten divisions depends upon the time of the signing of the general peace treaty. It is said that as soon as that takes place all the American troops will probably be withdrawn.

The number of American, French, and British troops to be maintained in the occupied regions along the Rhine will be limited to 1,000,000 men, according to the Echo de Paris.

As to the troops for Turkey, the military representatives of the Supreme War Council, in accordance with instructions given them yesterday by the council, are taking steps to arrange for the distribution of Entente forces.

Fresh reports of maladministration of the Armenians and other subject races by local Turkish Governors and the refusal by the Porte to apply necessary corrective measures are said to have been the reason for the action of the council yesterday in taking means toward supplying troops to maintain order in the Turkish area.

NO BARGAIN ON GIBRALTAR.

Paris Daily Mail Denies Reports That It Will Be Returned to Spain.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The report that some arrangement between Great Britain and Spain was in prospect through which Gibraltar would be turned over to Spanish jurisdiction is denied by the Paris edition of The Daily Mail in today's issue.

"Statements are being circulated in Paris, and it is feared also in England," says the newspaper, "that Great Britain is considering a bargain with Spain for the return of Gibraltar. The fact is that Spain made certain tempting offers, which were at one time considered by the British Admiralty on behalf of the Government, and which were for various reasons declined. No discussion of this matter is now taking place."

"ITCH" AFFLICTS ATTACHES.

Annoying Ailment Was Brought to Paris by Soldiers.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—The newest irritation at the Peace Conference is what the French call "gale" but is known elsewhere as the "French itch." It is an annoying, but not dangerous, ailment of the skin and something like the "seven years' itch." It is particularly in evidence in Paris nowadays, having been brought by soldiers from the battlefront.

If any American delegates to the Peace Conference have contracted it, diplomacy forbids betrayal of the fact, but the parasite is rampant at the headquarters of the American mission. Many attachés are patients at the American Army Hospital which specializes in treatment of affections of the skin.

The pest, for it can scarcely be called a disease, exceeds influenza in the suddenness of its appearance, but yields to simple treatment.

MANY PESSIMISTS IN PARIS LOBBIES

But Complaints of Conference Delays Are Negatived by High Authority.

PRAISE FOR CLEMENCEAU

Regarded as Ideal Presiding Officer—High Regard for Sonnino's Influence.

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—At one crucial moment in French history Thiers said: "Il faut tout prendre au serieux, rien au tragique." ["It is necessary to take everything seriously, nothing tragically."] Here and there in Paris one finds a disposition to take everything too seriously, and some things much too tragically. Every hotel lobby has its Cassandras croaking portentously.

The Peace Conference, according to these birds of ill omen, is wasting its time, making insufficient progress, or going about its work in the wrong way. Some of these jeremiads find expression in the French press. Why bother about the future disposition of remote islands in the Pacific and self-determination of African tribes, is their enquiry, when the immediate requirement is to settle the terms to be imposed upon Germany and make the demobilization of our soldiers possible?

That is one criticism of the procedure followed by the Council of Ten. Another comes from a British quarter and is understood to have been prompted by Lord Northcliffe. Its refrain is that the conference threatens to become a second Congress of Vienna, minus the technical skill of statesmen like Metternich and Talleyrand, who knew their business.

Then there are alarmist reports of dissatisfaction among the smaller nations, who are faced by the prospect of a dictatorship by the Big Five. In this last connection it has been cynically suggested that on the conclusion of the conference Australia will declare war on the League of Nations.

The Czecho-Polish Deadlock.

A story which relates to another aspect of the same problem of reconciling diverse interests is told of one of the Czechoslovak delegates. He was at a public function, delivering an eloquent homily on a future world in which all nations were to live together in closest ties of brotherly unity, when an injudicious member of the audience said "Poles!" in a loud voice. The effect upon the Czechoslovak speaker was that of the traditional red rag on a bull.

Incidentally I may say that the record for complete disagreement yet noted in regard to any question which has so far come before the Conference or any of its commissions is held by the commission which was appointed to go to Poland. Before taking their departure from Paris the members of this commission wisely decided to study the ground as far as possible in advance, and various representatives of the Poles and Czechoslovaks and other interests involved were summoned before them. Up to the time of writing the room in which the commission sits has not been the scene of actual fighting.

The commission had hoped to start on its journey tonight or tomorrow morning; but this afternoon its view of its chances of discovering a common denominator here was highly pessimistic. The commission hopes to have better luck when it gets to Poland, where the process of bloodletting which has been going on recently may have produced a reduction in racial temperatures. Lest these remarks should lead to misapprehension, it may be well to say that this particular commission regards its task quite seriously.

Another point on which the prophets of woe wax lugubriously eloquent is the conflict between the Italian and Jugoslav claims. Most of these doleful vaticinations have been traced to Jugoslav sources. One of the men whose names are mentioned daily in the newspapers of the world in connection with the conference proceedings said:

"Sometimes it's the Slavs, sometimes it's the Jugos."

D'Annunzio's Outburst Regretted.

D'Annunzio's recent outburst as a display of feeling on the Italian side was exceptional. Although the poet's rhetoric contained some peculiarly sharp thrusts against France—his references to the starry flag of America being side jabs of secondary importance—it has not been taken too tragically in Paris.

Rightly or wrongly, there is a belief in Paris that Italy has been somewhat misrepresented in the explanations of her attitude which have received most publicity in America and have created there, and in England also, popular, albeit superficial, prejudice. D'Annunzio's vehement apostrophes are regretted as likely to increase this feeling, while at the same time they greatly add to the difficulties of the Italian delegates in Paris.

One of the closest students of European affairs now in Paris describes Sonnino's attitude as worthy of the highest praise, both for its unselfish and statesmanlike characteristics. Both the French and British delegates have a deep appreciation of the Italian Minister, and French statesmen particularly are not likely to forget that in the first months of the war, when the German armies were approaching the Marne, it was only because the French Ambassador in Rome received a hint from the Italian Foreign Office that France need be under no apprehension of an attack from Italy that Joffre was able to move up to the defense of Paris three army corps which in other circumstances would have had to remain on guard along the southeastern frontier.

The British on their side remember that under the terms of the much-misinterpreted secret treaty between Great Britain, France, and Italy, when the last named came into the war, they were not asked to subscribe to anything which at that period did not appear to be perfectly legitimate Italian aspirations. Jugoslavs at that date were fighting in large numbers under the enemy's banners.

Sonnino an Important Factor.

Sonnino, according to the same information, which comes from non-Italian sources, is playing a much more important part in the preliminary proceedings of the Peace Conference than is generally assumed by those who say that the functions of the Council of Ten are being absorbed by the so-called triumvirate of Clemenceau, Lloyd George, and Wilson.

Sonning is in the best sense of the word one of the elder statesmen of Europe, and his experience has frequently helped the delegates over difficult obstacles. Some of his suggestions have been invaluable to Clemenceau in his peculiarly difficult task of keeping the business of the Conference well in hand.

There is almost practical unanimity of view that Clemenceau is proving an ideal chieftain. Time and again, when the Conference appeared to be straying into bypaths, he has shepherded it along the direct route. One man in close touch with the proceedings said:

When the conference occasionally wanted to soar to the empyrean of discussions leading nowhere, Clemenceau brought it down to the earth of practicality.

Criticisms that the conference is making little progress are controverted by a highly placed authority, whose knowledge of international affairs from study of the past and experience of the present is unequalled.

"Much more rapid progress has been made," he said today, "than one would have thought possible. There is no reason to be discouraged."

All of which goes to show that Thiers's maxim has a modern applications.

Rumanians Retire from Bukowina.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Rumania has complied with the wishes of the Peace Conference regarding extensions of territorial occupations by withdrawing from a part of Bukowina, adjacent to Rumanian territory, says a dispatch to the Petit Parisien from Czernowitz. The Rumanians, the dispatch states, have retired behind the line of delimitation.

SEES PERIL TO US IN NATIONS' LEAGUE

Senator Poindexter Says It Will Substitute Internationalism for Americanism.

POINTS TO PROBLEMS HERE

And Declares "They Take Precedence Over the Future of Mesopotamia."

Senator Miles Poindexter of Washington told 800 guests who had gathered at a dinner at the Republican Club last night in honor of William A. Orr, who was Secretary to Governor Whitman, that he believed the American people cared more about their internal problems than about the future of the German colonies or of any other territory not in the Western Hemisphere. One of the great dangers of a League of Nations, he said, was that "it would substitute a strange, new doctrine of internationalism" for the nationalism of the American Republic and cause this country to drift from many of its old traditions and "historical anchorages."

"I don't care what becomes of the Kamerun, Mesopotamia, or any of the German colonies," he said, "and I do not think many other American citizens do, either. We have many menacing and sinister problems here at home that take precedence over the future of Mesopotamia, and the President is now engaged in settling controversies that the Allies could have settled. My opinion is that Great Britain and France should take the lands they rescued from the despotism of the Germans and the Turks. If we take part in an international government in the Balkans, in Southwestern Europe, or anywhere else, we must send our soldiers and sailors to those countries and tax our citizens to carry out our policies there.

"The true policy of the American Government is to avoid permanent participation in the government of Europe. If America intervenes in the affairs of Europe, Europe will claim the right to intervene in the affairs of America. We went into the war as a matter of self-defense, to protect the liberties of our country from German attack. Should such a military power again arise of sufficient strength to threaten the liberties of the world it would again become necessary for the United States to protect itself by military force. It is not likely to occur again for many generations.

"The peace of the world, meantime, will be promoted by leaving to Europe the conduct of its own affairs. America is now a world power and must play its part in the affairs of the world, but its part is the leadership and hegemony of the New World, and it has no part in undertaking to direct the internal arrangements of the multitudinous peoples of the Old World.

"The Monroe Doctrine is still a vital and essential policy. The assertion that we can become a partner in directing the fate of European peoples and at the same time preserve our supremacy in America is a heresy. The violation by us of Europe's sphere of influence must necessarily be followed by Europe's violation of our sphere of influence. As established by generations of settled and accepted American policies which have been recognized by the leading powers of the Old World, we cannot afford to surrender this position of vantage for the illusory and imaginary benefits of participation and partnership in the controversies of other continents, particularly those of Europe."

In discussing the diplomacy of the present Administration in dealing with Mexico, Senator Poindexter said he thought that it was a more urgent duty for this country to protect the rights of American citizens and of other nations in Mexico than of settling boundaries in the Balkans and other remote parts of the world. To attempt to thrust our opinions forward upon the best policy of government for Ireland or for parts of France, he said, would "be an affront to our allies."

"We have a menace at home," he continued. "The Bolshevist Government of Russia, which proposes that those who do not work shall live by loot, has established a fund to bring about a revolution in the United States. They have attacked the processes of our courts and have attempted, with astounding success, to relieve American anarchists convicted of murder.

"We have surrendered our special privileges in the Panama Canal as a means of smoothing out our foreign relations. It is proposed that we should avoid trouble in the Philippines by hauling down our flag. There is a duty at home to meet and stop this process of national disintegration. The time has come for a reassertion of the American spirit and to call a halt to the doctrine of internationalism. Our duty to the world and for the maintenance of peace can best be performed by the maintenance of a respectable Government at home and by preserving peace within the true sphere of American interests.

"The United States should contribute its share of such military force as may be necessary to stamp out, with fire and sword, Bolshevism in Europe, which is but another name for anarchy and savagery. These purposes can be accomplished with comparatively few well-organized, disciplined, and equipped troops, and the object can be accomplished during the period which will be required for the transport of the remainder of our forces to their homes. When that has been accomplished every American soldier should be returned to American soil, and our account with Europe should be balanced and closed."

POGROMS IN RUMANIA.

Jews Call Emancipation Decree Unacceptable and Impracticable.

The American Union of Rumanian Jews in this city received yesterday from its European representatives the following cablegram:

"The new emancipation decree issued by Premier Bratiano is unacceptable and impracticable. It obliges the Jew to make application for naturalization and offer proof of birth, and to prove that they are not subjects of any other foreign State. This law is worse than the Marghiloman law, which was enacted pursuant to the Bucharest Treaty, which has since been repealed. The only solution possible is through appropriate action by the Peace Congress.

"According to news received, the position of the Jewish people in Rumania is terrible. In Bucharest and Braila pillaging of Jewish stores has taken place. Anti-Semitic incitements have never before been so furious. Jews have never been persecuted more fiendishly, very many beaten and imprisoned. Intervention necessary and urgent."

has adopted a very firm attitude and that the many arguments which he has brought forward have made a great impression upon the British delegation and have been accepted by the French.

"The attitude of the Imperial Government seems to have been one of ready acquiescence in the application of the mandatory system to territories which adjoin the British crown colonies and of keen examination of such methods when applied to territories interesting the dominions. It cannot be said that the tendency of the British War Cabinet to agree to the mandatory system if a proper formula of a mandate can be devised, has the wholehearted approval of the empire delegates, but I nevertheless feel that the exaggerated talk about the British Empire being in danger from the debate, now in progress, is unecessary, and is due more to the impulse of the moment than to the wisdom of the ages."

In a later message the same correspondent says:

"It seems probable that if, as is almost certain to be the case, the mandatory system is applied to German East Africa, claims to that mandate will be put forward on behalf of the Indian Government, which has always had a special interest in East African development—an interest so great as to have made of British East Africa in some respects a colony for Indian expansion here. Of course, there will probably be claims of other countries to be considered."

Sees Trouble in Varying Mandates.

The Daily Telegraph's Paris correspondent writes:

"French opinion does not attempt to conceal its surprise that the dominions which came to our aid, and to whom definite promises were given by the British Ministry, would have had their opinions treated lightly during these discussions.

"There is another rock ahead. It is, of course, certain that a mandate accepted, let us say, by South Africa, will differ from that to be applied to the internationalized shores of the Dardanelles and the Bosporus. It is felt that the necessity for making differences and distinctions in almost every case will render the achievement of a league a far more difficult thing than it would have been had it not been encumbered from the start by invidious considerations, and, in some cases, scarcely veiled resentment of important constituents."

The Morning Post's Paris correspondent writes:

"The conference again considered today the question of the German colonies, and there is reason to believe that it has accepted the mandatory principle of President Wilson. The discussion was animated, and it can be stated without fear of contradiction that there were differences of opinion, and that these differences were emphatically, though politely, expressed.

"Details are still to be threshed out, and an opportunity will then be taken to put forward specific proposals and the special point of view of the British delegates as distinct from the delegates who represent the empire. As I stated yesterday, that proposal aims at a distinction between territories like Mesopotamia, mainly captured by the British, and a colony like German New Guinea, where the Australian claims are paramount. By means of that distinction it is hoped to reach a system of graduations in the various mandates so that the differentiation between complete sovereignty and mandatory powers in the case of a colony like New Guinea or German Southwest Africa will be more apparent than real."

Morning Post Uses Strong Language.

The Morning Post, which has all along been a strenuous opponent of the League of Nations idea, says editorially:

"The League of Nations, as we were told, was to be an international body, formed for the purpose of keeping peace, but this is a proposal to make it the ruler of territory and the superior to a sovereign. The British Empire is to take its tenure from the League of Nations and administer territories which it has won by war in the league's behalf. That is an abrogation of sovereignty and of ownership which the British delegates have no right to make and against which the Dominion representatives are in duty bound to protest.

"Our Paris correspondent now says that President Wilson objects to the word 'annexation.' If a word is the only cause of difference, (and the annexation of the German territories is not justified by such precedents as the occupation of the Philippines,) there is no doubt room for accommodation. But the idea of making either the British Government or a Dominion Government the servant of an international superior is an idea which the British people will not endure.

"We might also suggest here that President Wilson, as he would be himself the first to admit, is not an autocrat in Paris but a member of a conference in which the delegates are on equal terms. We say this because of a certain tendency in some quarters (not American) to regard President Wilson as the source of authority and the lawgiver. President Wilson has, no doubt, excellent American reasons for his policy, but in the case of the German territories he is less directly interested than the British Empire which conquered them before the United States entered the war and now holds them as some part of the compensation for the enormous losses it has suffered."

The London Times in its editorial says:

"It seems to us to be reasonably arguable that there are certain portions of the world's surface which have fallen apart, so to say, from the continents to which they naturally belong. Southwest Africa and the Southern Pacific islands are conspicuous instances. By all laws of race, geography and convenience it is far better to hand them over frankly to the Dominions of South Africa, Australia or New Zealand, as the case may be, than to constitute them beneficiaries under reluctant trustees. The sacrifices which the Dominions have made in the common cause have been immense and entitle them to something more than consideration in a matter which concerned them deeply and on which their feeling is general and very strong."

Asked if Sacrifices Counted.

Jan. 30.—The difficulty over the fate of the German colonies was the chief subject of Paris dispatches to London newspapers today. The Morning Post's correspondent said the conference had decided to apply the Wilson plan, apparently with the approval of the delegates of Great Britain as distinct from the delegates who represent the British Empire, and asked:

"Are the delegates of Great Britain going to make even a greater surrender tomorrow? Is Mr. Lloyd George, who has already hauled down the flag to the Bolsheviki, going to intrust the British Empire in the Pacific and in South Africa to the Utopia of today, which may become an appanage of Germany tomorrow?"

The correspondent went on:

"Does sacrifice count for anything at all in this war? Have thousands of Australians who lie in Flanders and Picardy given their lives in vain? Are the rebels of South Africa going to turn on General Botha and point in derision to the uselessness of his loyalty? If the Peace Conference had been confined, as it ought to have been confined, to those who had really bled and suffered for the sake of the liberty and happiness of mankind, this proposal, which is half chicane and half sentimentalism, would never have seen the light of day.

"I believe, and I have reason for my belief, that if this scheme, absurd as it is, had been proposed by France, it would have been accepted ruefully, perhaps, but it would have been accepted by those who are now most opposed to it. The dead of France give her a right to speak with authority. Let there be no mistake about it. If the Peace Conference listens to those who have the best right to be heard in its councils, it will soon have its memory refreshed. Australia and South Africa feel just as strongly as France and Italy. They have the same national consciousness. They have the same interests to conserve; and, above all, they have the same right to be heard.

"President Wilson is greatly respected here, and he speaks eloquently on the subject of humanity. Nothing would redound more to his credit than to remember with gratitude those who have given most in tears and blood for the ideals which has has most at heart."

The London Times' Paris correspondent said:

"Wilson, if he gains his point, will establish a precedent for the settlement of other and more difficult matters involving territorial interests, and America incidentally will also gain materially by thus rendering impossible any menace there might be in the Philippines and Panama by reason of the Japanese occupation of the Marshall and Caroline Islands."

Raised a Practical Point.

A practical point concerning the intrusting of certain German colonies to individual nations as mandatories under the League of Nations was raised by The Pall Mall Gazette. In its opinion the principal objection to such an arrangement was that it offered no security or permanence.

"The mandate which the League of Nations can give," it said, "it can also take away. Another difficulty arises in the case of territories which are still undeveloped and must for some years be a considerable charge upon their holders. If France were to spend millions in fostering the natural resources of the Kamerun and implanting a stable civilization, upon what equitable terms could the League of Nations, after a period of years, claim to dispossess her? Unless these questions are thoroughly examined at the outset the mandatory system may easily betray us into a hopeless tangle of conflicting rights and obligations. We ought to be allowed to see very clearly what we are doing before becoming committed to a novel and intricate system of colonial tenure."

New Guinea and in the Marshall Islands and the Caroline Islands. We must protect our own interests there, which consist of the Island of Guam. That is a different thing; but apparently we are invited to take part in the management of all those territories."

Johnson Invokes "Open Covenants."

The Senate was "completely in the dark," Senator Lodge said, and Senator Borah interrupted to call to mind that "open covenants of peace openly arrived at" was one of the Presidential principles.

Senator Johnson read the official communiqué.

"Just think of it," he said sarcastically, "when we emblazon to the world that this democracy speaks with frankness, that it believes in 'open covenants of peace, openly arrived it,' and that we will not tolerate, under any circumstances, secrecy in arriving at peace terms. We are fortunate in the Senate to know that satisfactory arrangements were made yesterday for dealing with the German colonies and with Turkey in Asia. The correspondents tell us—I do not comment upon that because I do not know whether it be accurate—that those satisfactory arrangements were that American troops should take care of these German colonies and of Turkey in Asia.

"I amount to very little in this body; my voice will not carry far, but there will be one vote in this body when the treaty comes to us that will never vote for American troops to take care of Turkey in Asia or German colonies in Africa."

Senator Walsh entered the debate at this juncture.

"I cannot conceive," he said, "that our commissioners at the Peace Conference will ever undertake to impose upon the Government of this country any such burden, and I apprehend that any alarm concerning such a condition will be found to be without much foundation. I feel entirely confident that the American commissioners will assume no such burden as that for the United States, unless it is absolutely impossible to escape it."

Senator Walsh said he could not subscribe to the idea that the President and American Peace Commissioners had pledged themselves to definite action without communicating their views. He said the information the Senate was basing its debate upon was sent by newspaper correspondents who, "according to their duty, were catching the first rumor," and that he believed that any arrangements made for the disposition of the German colonies were only temporary.

"I feel certain," he said, "that now is the moment to declare that there should not be any disposition on the part of America to indicate to the European or the Asiatic hemispheres that we are ready to have either of those come into this continent, to police purely local difficulties and disturbances on this continent, nor will we inject or intrude ourselves on other continents for similar purposes."

Senator Lewis urged that instead of trying to split the German navy among nations, causing consequent jealousy, the fleet should be given to the League of Nations for an international police force.

"What we need," said he, "is a little patience and some confidence in those who are representing us abroad."

This statement aroused Senator Borah.

"It is impossible for Senators to feel other than a deep interest in everything which is transpiring in Versailles," said Senator Borah. "The nature of the questions which are being considered there, and the consequences which may follow the decisions, are such that no one can be indifferent to what is transpiring, and Senators here will continue to discuss these matters from day to day either upon insufficient information, if we can have no other, or upon sufficient information, if it can be had. No member of this body would think of remaining silent while these matters are transpiring. He would be unfit to occupy a place in this chamber if he did.

"When the President declared in favor of 'open covenants of peace, openly arrived at,' he merely announced a doctrine that some of us here have been advocating for eight years. I did not modify my position because a Democratic President had announced his position to be in harmony with that view. I continued to support it because I believe in it as a principle aside from the fact that this or that individual may be in favor of it, or opposed to it.

"In fact, it amounts to but very little in this world, through the sweep of the ages, what this or that particular individual believes, but it is of tremendous importance as to what particular principle or policy of Government is to obtain. We are dealing with policies and principles, and not with individuals, and I suspect that some of us here have supported the President as earnestly in critical times as much as others who have been of his party. It is not a question of confidence or lack of confidence in the President. It is a question of whether or not certain policies should obtain.

"The difficulty of the situation arises out of the condition that we have entered upon a boundless sea without chart or compass. When we declared that we would take part in readjusting the territorial boundaries and the governmental conditions of Europe we broke away from the fundamental principle upon which the foreign policy of this Government was established a century ago, and we have had neither chart nor compass for our sea since that hour.

Sees Doom of Monroe Doctrine.

"I do not care what kind of a League or Nations you form. It may, as Admiral Mayo said, be nothing more than an old ladies' quilting society. But it will finally lead us into all kinds of entangling obligations and conditions with European affairs. If we sit in the council chamber with nothing more than our moral influence and our moral suasion, and exercising our intellectual powers, we are still dealing with European affairs and creating corresponding obligations upon our part, against which the Father of this Country declared. And if we take possession of the German colonies and undertake to administer them and become mandatory for them, we have in that very hour—I do not care whether there is any declaration to that effect or not—abandoned the Monroe Doctrine.

"Is human nature so constituted that Europe would permit us to interfere with the Monroe doctrines of Europe and Europe never have anything to say with reference to the Monroe Doctrine of the United States? Certainly not!

"It is against the fundamental principle of a League of Nations that I inveigh, and not as a challenge of the confidence or integrity or intellectual power of the President. He is perfectly entitled to his views, and I do not criticise him for giving them. I simply want to present the question to the one tribunal that shall decide—the tribunal of public opinion in the United States. If that tribunal shall finally ratify the President's course, then I must as an American bow to the majority opinion and abide by it and watch for its consequences. But until the final decision is taken I propose to present to the tribunal in my humble way, and at every opportunity I have, my firm—even my religious—belief that such a policy is the end of the Republic as the fathers made it. So believing, I shall not remain silent out of fear of being called a carping critic.

"When the news came across the waters that we were in all probability to take charge of the German colonies I raised my voice because I was against the policy. And I know of no higher duty devolving upon a Senator than, with courtesy and consideration for the personal feelings of others, and the due respect belonging to the man who occupies the position of Commander in Chief, to advocate his own beliefs and his own views, regardless of the awe which surrounds that high office."

Admiral Mayo was criticised by Senator Kirby for having told the House Committee the League of Nations had reached the "sewing circle" status.

Kirby Would Reduce Admiral Mayo.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31. (Associated Press.)—In the course of today's debate on the proposed internationalization of former German colonies, Senator Lodge, in answer to Senator Thomas's inquiry if it was not indispensable to dispose of the African territory once held by Germany, said:

"I think the colonies ought to be taken away from Germany. We ought to turn them over to the people who captured them to make any disposition they choose; but why should we be charged with administering them?"

"But does not the Senator think we are concerned with the question of Kiao-Chau in China?" asked Mr. Thomas.

"The question between China and Japan is one of the most momentous," Mr. Lodge replied. "It concerns us greatly. But our policy involves meddling in the internal affairs of South Africa. These wild tribes have to be controlled, and my own disposition is to bring them under the South African Republic."

United support for the American Commissioners in Paris was urged by Senator Kirby of Arkansas. Referring to Admiral Mayo's statement yesterday before the House Naval Committee that the League of Nations was "rapidly getting down to a sewing circle," Senator Kirby said that if he were Presidetn he would reduce Admiral Mayo in rank.

BERNSTORFF TELLS OF GERMAN AIMS

For a Just Peace Based on Wilson's Program and League of Nations.

WILL ABOLISH MILITARISM

No More Obligatory Service—Statement Made in Agreement with the Foreign Minister.

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Count von Bernstorff has given The Associated Press a statement written by him after a consultation with Foreign Minister Brockdorff-Rantau and other high officials of the German Foreign Office. In view of the fact that Count von Bernstorff is one of the men entrusted with the working out of the details for Germany's participation in the Peace Conference and will, with the Foreign Minister, be a German delegate, the statement may be regarded as official. It was written in English as follows:

"The question, What would Germany consider a peace of right and justice? may briefly be answered in this way: That we would regard as such a settlement by which the terms of peace laid down in President Wilson's address to Congress Jan. 8, 1918, and the principles of settlement in his subsequent addresses are carried out in true accordance with the high minded and far-seeing spirit in which they were conceived.

"Among the fourteen points the dominating note, in our opinion, is to be attributed to Point No. 14, providing for the constitution of a League of Nations, which, as Mr. Wilson said on Sept. 27, 'must be a part, and in a sense the most essential part, of the peace settlement itself.'

"As the great success of the recently founded German League of Nations Society proves, German leading men clearly recognize that nothing but an international league of free and equal peoples can do away with imperialism and bring forth a new world of order. The German people feel that given such a league and compulsory arbitration, peace negotiations would offer no particular difficulties, while without its constitution in the peace settlement, a peace of right and justice will be well night impossible.

"With regard to the first, second, and third points in Mr. Wilson's program we are in perfect accord with him. In connection with Point No. 4, it may be mentioned that Germany is about to abolish obligatory military service, which thus far has been considered the cornerstone of her exposed position in Europe. As for Point No. 5 we welcome: 'Free, open, and absolutely impartial adjustment of all colonial claims,' proposed by Mr. Wilson and accepted by the Entente Governments, and we are looking forward to a discussion of those claims in the Peace Conference in the spirit outlined by the American President.

"Regarding point No. 6, we are completely disinterested concerning all questions relative to Russia except in so far as they concern our own frontier. Naturally, however, we do not desire a spread of Bolshevism over Germany and other countries.

"As for Point No. 7, we are prepared to pay for all damage done to the Belgian civil population and their property as far as will be proved to have been perpetrated by 'German aggression.' The same applies to Point No. 8, relative to damage done civilians and their property in Northern France.

"As for Alsace-Lorraine, we could not consider it 'righting a wrong' if through the peace settlement a new wrong should be permitted. That, however, would be the case if Germans were compelled to become French against their will. Likewise, it must be emphasized in connection with Point No. 9 that justice would forbid forcing Germans to become Italian subjects without their free consent.

"Point No. 10, treating on the question of Austria-Hungary, has been subsequently enlarged by the American Government, in the sense that the Slav nationalities of the former dual monarchy must be granted, not only autonomy, but absolute self-determination. Justice will demand that the same privilege be accorded to Austrian-Germans. In the same manner we consider Points 11 and 12 merely the demand of justice that various peoples of the Balkan Peninsula and the Ottoman Empire should be given their rights without distinction and the freest opportunity for self-determination.

"As regards Point 13, justice compels us to consent that present German territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations should form a part of new Poland, but justice likewise compels us not to tolerate that territories be placed under foreign sovereignty which are inhabited by indisputably German population. Moreover, we would consider at a wrong of the gravest character if, to satisfy Polish ambitions, East Prussia should be cut off from the rest of the empire.

"Concerning all territorial changes to be considered by the Peace Conference, we absolutely rely on Pont 2 of Mr. Wilson's address at Mount Vernon in which he emphasized the fact that settlement of all such questions must be made 'upon a basis of free acceptance of settlement by the peoples immediately concerned.' Indeed, a peace of right and justice presupposes that, under guarantee of the League of Nations, the principle of national self-determination will be made superior to all territorial questions.

"As to the question of guilt for the war, the German Government has proposed thatthis question should be submitted to a neutral commission. This seems to be the only just solutition. The German people, in the vast majority, do not feel guilty, although they do not deny that mistakes were made."

FIRE ON STRIKERS IN PERU.

Several Persons Killed in Clash with Troops at Laredo.

LIMA, Jan. 31.—Several persons have been killed in a battle between Government troops and strikers at Laredo, in Northern Peru.

General strikes also have started at Trujillo and Salaverry, on the coast, and the inhabitants are said to be greatly alarmed.

The scout cruiser Coronel Bolognesi has been sent to reinforce the troops.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 31.—A grave labor situation has arisen at Antofagasta, and the Government has sent a cruiser and troops from the Taona garrison to that city. The idle nitrate workers are reported to be the cause of the trouble. The Government today asked Congress to appropriate 300,000 pesos to feed and take care of the workers.

VIENNA, Jan. 27, (via Geneva, Jan. [illegible])—Serious demonstrations have taken place today in Vienna against the Secretary of Finance, Steinwender, owing to his relentless exercise of the taxing power, which is spelling ruin for a considerable part of the business community.

Enraged shopowners are manifesting by closing their places. Enormous crowds of business men are marching in the streets, shouting "Down with Steinwender!"

GERMANS STORM TOWN IN POLAND

Berlin Reports Many Defenders Killed or Wounded in the Capture of Kulmsee.

BERLIN, Jan. 30, (Associated Press.)—Advices from the West Prussian border, where German troops have been dispatched against the Poles, report that the German force that had been assigned to occupy the town of Kulmsee, which is the railway junction between Thorn and Graudenz, was forced to take the place by storm after Polish irregulars had refused to negotiate.

An automobile containing a German Lieutenant and four men had preceded the troops for the purpose of finding quarters for them, the account states, and were entering the City Hall when they were fired on by a Polish band and disarmed. The Germans succeeded in escaping in disguise. Later, when the main body of troops neared Kulmsee, it, too, was fired on by the Poles. The Germans tried to induce the Poles to surrender the town, but the latter refused, and the city, the advices declare, had to be bombarded by artillery and stormed.

The Poles are said to have suffered considerable losses in killed and wounded, while the Germans had no casualties.

Martial law has been proclaimed in the town. It was found by the Germans, the account asserts, that 300 rifles had been distributed among the civilian population by Polish agitators.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 31.—Austrian East Silesia has been entirely occupied by Czechs after heavy fighting with the Poles, according to a Vienna dispatch to the Cologne Volkszeitung.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The reports received here from Berlin by way of Amsterdam stating that Field Marshal von Hindenburg is raising four army corps for the protection of Germany's eastern frontier have attracted considerable attention in military circles.

The allied military men are interested, in particular, for the reason that if the Field Marshal were successful in collecting such a body of troops its existence would upset the present calculations of Germany's armed strength, on which the size of the allied army of occupation is to be based.

The Polish and Czechoslovak delegates to the Peace Conference conferred at the French Foreign Office this morning with the Interallied Committee of Inquiry, which is going to Poland shortly. The committee expects to leave Paris early next week and will travel by way of Vienna. It will be gone about three weeks.

In their argument before the Supreme Council yesterday the Polish representatives maintained that the District of Teschen, (in Austrian Silesia, south of the border of German Silesia,) ought to belong to them because 55 per cent. of the population is Polish. The Czechoslovaks declared that the district was indispensable to their industries on account of the coal mines there.

A Paris dispatch Thursday night, received by the British Wireless Service, made it appear, probably through a transmission error, that possession of Posen, not Teschen, was in question.

ARGENTINE STRIKE ENDING.

Port Workers at Buenos Aires to Return to Their Duties.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 31.—The principal differences between the port workers here, who have been on strike for several months, and their employers, it is understood, were adjusted during the night. Negotiations over minor details are still in progress.

It is not announced when the port workers will resume work.

The strike at Buenos Aires prevented the entrance of transatlantic steamers into the harbor, and Argentine newspapers on Jan. 28 estimated the loss to the strikers and ship owners alone at more than 10,000,000 pesos. On Tuesday forty-nine vessels with general cargoes for Buenos Aires were anchored in the roads. The strike not only prevented the receipt of cargoes in Buenos Aires, but also held up the export of grain and other crops. More than 9,000 men were involved in the strike.

day, while the Board of Trade is also active in an effort to bring about settlements, but up to this time without success.

The view taken by the Government is that any government interference now would be unwise and perhaps dangerous. The strike movements are local and against the advice of the respective trade unions. Moreover there is infinite variety in the various demands advanced in the different localities, while many of the alleged grievances are of a trifling character, such as concerning intervals of a few minutes for luncheon, &c. It appears to be generally believed that the absence of strike pay for the men will soon bring about the collapse of the movement.

The problem in view for the Government Ministers is how to re-establish the authority of the trade unions and assist to the greatest possible extent in the expansion of machinery of conciliation so as to enable each trade to settle its own disputes. It is further considered that the strikes are largely promoted by a few agitators with political motives. Hence the Government is determined to limit its action to the prevention of intimidation and the maintenance of order.

The attitude of the employers in most cases is that they will refuse to negotiate until the men resume work.

Thus far the railways have not been affected. The Board of Trade has decided to grant an eight-hour day to the railway men from Feb. 1, but here again there is dissatisfaction among the railway employes concerning the question of meal time being included in the eight-hour period, which may lead to difficulties. Furthermore, a meeting yesterday of representatives of 75,000 railway clerks and station masters, held in London, developed talk of a strike because the Board of Trade refused to recognize these men's union. They will hold another meeting on Sunday to decide upon their course of action.

RIOTING LAID TO FOREIGNERS.

London Charges Glasgow Disorder to Non-Native Element.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The riot at Glasgow today was not surprising, for the local strike leaders, in a memorial to the Lord Provost asking him to request the Government to intervene, practically threatened in so many words that if there was no intervention they would start a riot. As the Government declined to take the course which would have meant throwing over the duly elected national leaders of the trade unions in favor of a clique of local extremists, the latter proceeded with their plans, of which the riot was the inevitable outcome.

They assembled in a large and disorderly crowd outside the Town Hall. Rowdyism began at once, and the police had to make baton charges to suppress it. The strikers retaliated with bottles, and after the crowd moved elsewhere looting and fighting occurred at other points in the city. But the number of cases taken to hospitals for injuries was less than fifty.

Toward evening order was more or less restored, in spite of the fact that the centre of the city is in darkness, owing to the partial failure of the street-lighting system.

As The Daily Chronicle points out, "the Scots are an orderly people, and disorders of this character never occurred before within living memory in Scotland's largest city, where, however, there are considerable non-native elements among the Glasgow workers. This is illustrated by the fact that the moving spirit in the local agitation is a Polish Jew, and some of the others are Irish.

"The authors of the strike are," the paper continues, "the same men who repeatedly tried to bring the Clyde war work to a standstill during the war, and they made no secret of their belief in violent methods generally or of their particular sympathy with the methods and aims of the Russian Bolsheviki."

The Government's policy of non-intervention in the strikes meets with general approval. It is realized that the trade union officials are deeply compromised by their apparent inability to restrain the younger labor element, and that it is wise to insist on their responsibility as leaders of the wage-earning class.

Meanwhile amid all the distressing news of strikes and rioting there are few hopeful symptoms. Even at Belfast there is much rebellion among the working men at the state to which the strikers have reduced the community. Their own wives and families are suffering from the reckless disabling of public facilities and there is a possibility that the older and more responsible men will get together and force a settlement.

TO EXTEND BELFAST STRIKE.

Committee Would Call Out Men All Over Ireland.

BELFAST, Jan. 31.—The strike committee announced tonight that it contemplated trying to extend the strike to the whole of Ireland.

Replying to an appeal from Joseph Devlin, member of Parliament, that he intervene in the strike, David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, replied that the British Government did not control the hours of labor and that he was in complete agreement with the reply of Andrew Bonar Law, Lord Privy Seal, to the provost at Glasgow, declining to intervene in the strike there. The Premier added that this reply applied with equal force to Belfast.

BRITISH LABOR WAR LAID TO A CLIQUE

Sir Robert Horne Views It as a Temporary Wave Agitated by Radicals.

URGES NATION TO BE CALM

Labor Minister Counsels Against Force, Which He Thinks Would Make Situation Worse.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Sir Robert Horne, Minister of Labor, discussed the strike situation today, and while admitting the existence of an organized attempt to stir up strife, he expressed the view that the present outburst was temporary and that there was no need for serious alarm. He said:

"The present difficulties have arisen because in certain districts the more extreme section of the workers have thrown over the bargains made by their leaders. Two very powerful trades, shipbuilding and engineering, have entered into an agreement with their employers for a forty-seven-hour week, yet in Glasgow the men have struck for a forty-hour week and in Belfast they want a forty-four-hour week. In both cases the men have chosen to ignore the agreement made between their accredited leaders and their employers.

"In my view there is a certain unruly element in the labor world today which does not desire peace in industry, but whose object is to promote strife. Happily this element though noisy is not numerous. Its chief importance lies in the fact that wherever there are causes of unrest, real or unreal, men who wish to create differences use them as an opportunity for fomenting strife. The men to whom I refer have got an effective organization which they use with cleverness, and the desire of all right-thinking people must be to remove the genuine causes of irritation which under the manipulation of this section become the seed beds of a quarrel. It would be a pity, however, to treat the present circumstances as being anything more than a temporary outburst.

Looks to Union Leaders.

"The country must give the leaders of the great trade unions as opportunity of bringing their men to a proper understanding of their position. It is one of the first necessities of industrial peace that the organized unions should be able to rely upon the loyalty of their members. If this were not so collective bargaining and mutual agreements between worker and employer could not be maintained, and there would be no means of preserving a stable position in industry.

"The moral of all this is that the country should not lose its head over the situation. Whatever schemes it may be necessary to devise in order to prevent a recurrence of such difficulties as we find ourselves in at the present time, our immediate duty is to face the trouble that confronts us with calmness. This is not in any way to minimize the dislocation, discomfort, or possible danger which these things involve, but they cannot be got rid of by any rough-and-ready method, and impulsive action would tend to create greater evils than those we are now feeling.

"When people are talking about the number of men on strike it is as well to remember, as a matter of contrast, the number of men who are at work. It should also be remembered that the number of men not at work is very greatly in excess of the number of men who wished to strike, because a great many men are unwillingly obliged to cease work in consequence of others having done so. This is notably the case in Glasgow today, where, I believe, the proportion of men who have quit work because they wanted to is comparatively not very large.

No Cause for Alarm.

On the whole, although the situation is disquieting, I do not think there is any reason for alarm. To have so many men out of work in the country is very disturbing, but a certain amount of unrest was to be anticipated after four and a half years of war, during which the whole industrial machine became allied and the conditions of industry were made to some extent artificial. Getting back to a normal state must necessarily involve a considerable amount of resettling. The workers are quite justly looking forward to improved conditions, and perhaps are a little precipitate in thinking they can get everything at once. The country must have time to settle down before we can really begin to get a definite line of progress laid out.

One of the things, of course, about which the industrial population has been most anxious has been the question of a limitation of working hours. That is an improvement which in general everybody will sympathize with, so in general it may be said that the idea behind the present movement is not one by which controversy ought to be created."

EX-KAISER CHEERED AT BERLIN MEETINGS

German Paper Expresses Hope That Holland Will Regard Him as a Political Refugee.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 29.—According to reliable information from one who has just arrived from Germany, the ex-Kaiser has lately regained much of his former popularity, especially because he is held to represent law and order, which is now so necessary. At several political meetings in Berlin recently he has been cheered.

Dr. Traub, speaking in the Circus Busch for the German National Party, opened the meeting with a cheer for the ex-Kaiser, which was greeted with thundering applause lasting several minutes, and also with cheers for von Tirpitz and Ludendorff.

The Reichsbote sent a loyalty address signed by thousands of people for the ex-Kaiser's birthday. The German People's Party also sent a telegram of congratulations and loyalty, and in the Prussian municipalities the school children all had a holiday on the occasion of the birthday.

The Rheinish Westphalian Gazette asserts that England and France are endeavoring to put pressure on Holland in the matter of the delivery of the ex-Kaiser. The paper urgently warns the Dutch not to listen to the Entente's representation that he is not a political refugee, but an ordinary criminal, and expresses the hope that the representatives of the German people will "proudly" take up this viewpoint of the question.

"We also hope," the paper remarks, "that Holland will not give way to the Entente pressure, but will stake the honor of the country on a refusal to deliver the royal political refugee."

FATHER LEGALLY DEAD, SAYS KAISER'S SON

Prince Eitel Friedrich Says Monarch Is "Wiped Out of the World's History."

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 31.—Speaking to his tenants near Potsdam on the birthday of the former German Emperor, Prince Eitel Friedrich, the second son of Herr Hohenzollern, said:

"You will never see the Kaiser again. Circumstances have wiped him out of the world's history. Legally speaking, my father is dead."

EX-KAISER'S BAN ON RAZOR.

Dismisses Barber, Having Decided to Wear Full Beard Always.

AMERONGEN, Holland, Jan. 30, (Associated Press.)—The former German Emperor's barber returned to Berlin today, his services being no longer required, "Count" William Hohenzollern having definitely decided to wear a full beard always. Two other personal attendants accompanied the barber homeward.

The barber, whose name is Otto Kruger, has been for several years in close attendance upon his master, accompanying him on every journey and shaving him daily. His last duty today was to cut Count Hohenzollern's hair and then introduce the village barber of Amerongen, who in future will be intrusted with this service.

The German personnel is gradually disappearing, but Court Marshal Gontard remains, and also General von Esdorff, Count Hohenzollern's close friend, and Captain Sigard von Ilsemann, his private secretary. General von Esdorff has leased a house just outside the Von Bentinck castle, which he will soon occupy, indicating his intention to continue here.

Since the setting in of a severe frost covered both moats surrounding the castle with ice, extra precautions to insure the former Emperor's safety have been taken by the police. Count von Bentinck has given permission to the villagers to skate on the outer moat, but the ice forming on the inner moat is broken daily by the police, who are armed with carbines and patrol continually the ground between the moats. The drawbridge is raised immediately after Count Hohenzollern returns to the house from his daily woodsawing.

Today the outer moat was covered with skaters, some of whom obtained a glimpse of the bearded ex-ruler.

GERMANS AT WORK IN LILLE.

Prisoners Clearing Streets and Repairing Bridges They Wrecked.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LILLE, Jan. 29.—A year ago today, as the people of Lille are recalling with chuckles, the German Governor, von Grävenitz, published a typical Prussian edict requiring the town to clear its streets of snow at the double quick, and threatening to fine everybody if the work were not done to his satisfaction.

There is snow again in Lille this January, but this year it is the Germans who are sweeping the streets for the inhabitants—German prisoners of war, handling broom and scraper under the eyes of French poilus with bayonets fixed. Unfortunately, von Grävenitz is not here to see them.

But this is not the only use for German prisoners here. They have begun reconstruction work. The Germans blew up the bridges over the Deule Canal, and traffic has been passing over temporary structures. Now the Germans are most appropriately at work to make good the damage, squaring old bricks for use and wielding sledge hammers on twisted girders.

I have seen a great many German prisoners working in England, as well as the familiar parties on the roads behind the front, but I never saw any of them put such energy into their work as these parties near the citadel of Lille. Heaven knows, if they are to repair German devastation there will be need of all their energies.

OUR MEN CHEERY IN COLDEST RUSSIA

Manage to Keep Warm in Temperature of 30 Below Zero on Archangel Front

WOUNDS CANNOT STOP THEM

Lewis Gunners, Defying Reds, Render First Aid to Themselves and Stick to Their Posts.

Copyright, 1919, by the Chicago Tribune Co.

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS ON THE ONEGA RIVER, North Russia, Jan. 1, by Courier to Murmansk Jan. 27 and Cable via Paris.)—Here on the White Sea, 160 miles by sled train from Archangel, the Americans are still carrying on an old-fashioned Indian warfare against the Bolsheviki. Here is the extreme right flank of the 400-mile open-fan front, with Archangel as the handle.

West of this point is the Murman coast military zone which is under allied control but which is separated under a distinct command from the organizations in the Archangel districts.

This frozen little fishing village of 3,000 people is the American headquarters and the rest station for the Onega River forces. For almost 100 miles up the ice-bound river the Americans have fought their way and are holding one of the southern most outposts. This fort is the furtherest north battle line.

Today when I drove up to the big log house where the American headquarters are, it was 30 degrees below zero, but our sturdy sons from Michigan, Wisconsin, and Illinois, making up part of the 339th Infantry, did not mind it in the least. The sheepskin lined great overcoats, fur caps, arctic boots, and mittens kept them warm and comfortable. It is not too cold to play on skis or snowshoes, but it is no fun fighting in such weather.

In this far-away river sector the Americans are left to their own resources and devices. It is their own campaign, and, with the White Sea partly frozen and the only connection with the Archangel base over 160 miles of sled trail, they must be prepared for any emergency. They seem to be at the other end of the world, and the war here seems to be their own little war. For almost 100 miles up the broad, snow-covered Onega River, running through forests, the Americans are strung. It is like a long arm outstretched, with closed fist at the end.

For a month at a time half of the Americans serve without relief in the blockhouses, outposts, and reserve river positions. Then they take up the long hike down the frozen river bed to the rest camp here. Two or three weeks later they hit the snow trail back to the outpost grind again, with the patrol sorties from the enemy position as their only diversion. Now and again there is an action of some local consequence. The fact that it breaks the snowbound existence makes it almost welcome.

At rare intervals the big chance comes to push the long arm of force further into Bolsheviki land. Then even the zero weather cannot conceal the spirit, the drive, that have always characterized the American action.

The world's mind has been dulled by tales of heroism, and the little action down the frozen river in a forgotten outpost in North Russia seems hardly worthy of mention, but at the same time it shows even clearer than some of the glorious episodes of the American arms in France that the men of America have a fine courage and do well any task they are put to.

In France there was the thrill and glory of a well-determined, flaring crusade to carry them through. Here there is only the enthusiasm of plain Americanism. But it is enough to send a handful of Americans through the forest against the Bolshevist machine guns, always outnumbered but never stopped. It took ten to one to check the advance and make them give even a part of the ground gained.

The story of the fighting through the woods up the river bottom and of the hand-to-hand struggling in the tiny log huts in the peasant villages is a running story of bravery. A score of men distinguished themselves, but Captain Richard Balle, a singer of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, who was commanding, modestly picked only three for special recommendation for medals, those being Corporal James Murray, Private Raymond Edwards, and Private William White.

Murray and Edwards were advancing as a part of a small detachment and ran into heavily intrenched enemy forces supported by machine guns. Both the Lewis gunners had just placed their guns when the Bolsheviki counterattacked. Two minutes later Murray's gun was riddled and he himself shot in the shoulder, but he refused to leave the gun. Edwards was hit in the left arm in the same engagement but refused to abandon his gun, thereby helping to break up the attack.

On the following day when the Americans reached the outskirts of Muchason, thirty miles below the starting point of their drive, they found they were hopelessly outnumbered, and it became necessary to withdraw and fight a rearguard action.

Private White, with a Lewis gun, while forming part of the protecting rearguard, was hit early in the fight by a bullet in the right wrist, but stuck to his gun, applying his own first aid, and it was not until hours later that Lieutenant Harry Sketchon, who was making an inspection, discovered that White was wounded.

This is the sort of stuff of the Americans fighting in these lonely Russian river outposts. They don't care for the job, but they will carry on.

REDS MASS TO CUT OFF ALLIED FORCE IN NORTH

British and Loyal Russians Forced From Village—Shenkursk Not Burned.

ARCHANGEL, Jan. 30, (Associated Press.)—The Bolsheviki are concentrating a considerable number of troops in the territory between the Vologda Railway and the line of the Vaga River, apparently with the object of either surrounding the allied column in this sector or, by cutting through, to isolate the column to the eastward on the Dvina. There are numerous Winter roads through the swamps in this section and the allied scouts report enemy reinforcements arriving from the south over several of these roads.

An enemy force of approximately 1,000 men began an attack at 3:15 o'clock yesterday morning on the British and Russian position west of Taresevo, attacking with such violence that the defense was obliged to evacuate the village of Alexieffskaya.

One of the allied airplanes flew over Shenkursk yesterday. It reported that the town had not been burned, as refugees had stated.

The village of Shegovarsk, on the Vaga, which was evacuated several days ago, has been occupied by enemy infantry and cavalry, with five guns.

On the Dvina, near Tulgas, the allied artillery yesterday dispersed an enemy patrol. In the Onega sector the allied troops yesterday raided the village of Peretema, killing nine of the enemy and capturing nine without losses to the allied raiders.

UKRAINE TO SEEK ALLIANCE WITH FRANCE

Will Then Take Over Part of Russian Debt—Asks Place at Peace Table.

PARIS, Jan. 31, (Havas.)—The Ukrainian Government will refuse to take part in the conference on the Princes Islands, according to an interview given Le Petit Journal by M. Sedorenko, Minister of Internal Communications in the new Ukrainian Government.

M. Sedorenko has begun parleys with the French Government to obtain the admission of the Ukraine to the Peace Conference. The only claim which his country will put forward will be for recognition. If this is granted, according to the interview, the Ukraine will propose an alliance with France on the basis of the former alliance with Russia, and will take over part of the Russian debt, France taking payment in part in wheat.

The Peace Conference so far has had two replies to its invitation to the various Russian Governments for a conference at the Princes Islands. In one of these the Government of North Russia formally refuses to meet with the Bolsheviki. The Omsk Government, under Admiral Kolchak, while less categoric in its reply, expresses strong reserve.

Nothing official in connection with the invitation has been received from the Russian Soviet Government.

BRITISH GUNBOATS REACH STRASBOURG

Their Flag Now Flies Over City—French Extend Occupation Under New Armistice.

STRASBOURG, Jan. 31.—Two British gunboats arrived here today. The British flag now floats over the city.

Jan. 30.—The 38th Division of the French army today formally occupied the town of Kehl, on the opposite bank of the Rhine from Strasbourg, in accordance with the new armistice terms reached on Jan. 15.

General Hirschauer, the Governor of Strasbourg, reviewed the troops in the market place in the presence of the German Mayor and Sub-Prefect. He then read a proclamation announcing the occupation.

The Mayor and Sub-Prefect replied, saying that they had only the best intentions toward the French.

GIVE UP BREST-LITOVSK.

Germans Turn City Over to Ukraine and Reds Are Expected There.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The Polish Information Committee learns that the Germans have transferred control of Brest-Litovsk to the Ukrainians and that the Bolsheviki are expected to arrive in that town within a few days.

GWINNER FOR PRESIDENT.

Former Deutsche Bank Director May Head Republic, It Is Said.

BERLIN, Jan. 30, (Associated Press.)—The announcement of the retirement of Arthur von Gwinner as managing director of the Deutsche Bank lends color to a rumor circulating in Berlin today that he is expected to be elected President of the German Republic.

WANTS NO TRADE WAR.

United States Not to Retaliate Against British Restrictions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The War Trade Board will not take retaliatory measures on account of import restrictions promulgated by the British Government. This statement was authorized today by a member of the board.

The British mission here has explained that the drastic action which prohibits importation to Great Britain after March 1 of many important commodities was necessary to stabilize finance, industry, and labor. It was stated that the present labor situation in England required immediate measures to re-establish the entire economic fabric of the country, and, moreover, that the dollar exchange was lacking to pay for the commodities on the prohibited list if they were permitted to be brought in.

Chile Sends Commission to Paris.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 31.—The Chilean Government has appointed a Commercial and Financial Commission to proceed to Europe and keep in touch with the progress of the Peace Conference at Paris. It is composed of Senator Eleodor Yanez, President of the Bank of Chile, and Augusto Villanueva, a former Foreign Minister. A third member, to join the commission abroad, is the London correspondent of a Chilean newspaper.

WILSON SWINGS HOUSE COMMITTEE

the latest improvements in the construction of ships, and in the armor and armament therefor, the Secretary of the Navy is hereby directed to submit to Congress on the first Monday in December next a general description of such additional vessels as may be needed to complete and round out the navy of the United States. Types and numbers shall be recommended after full consideration and analysis of recent war experience, and particular attention shall be given to airplane carriers and any other new types developed during the war or shown to be necessary by the aforesaid war experience.

Provided, if at any time before the construction authorized by this act shall have been contracted for there shall have been established with the co-operation of the United States any tribunal or tribunals competent to secure peaceful determination of international disputes, and which shall render unnecessary the maintenance of competitive armaments, then, and in that case such naval expenditure as may be inconsistent with the engagements made by the establishment of said tribunal or tribunals, may be suspended when so ordered by the President of the United States, and no contracts for the construction of the vessels herein authorized shall be entered into prior to Feb. 1, 1920.

Enlisted Strength to be 225,000.

The bill provides for an enlisted personnel of 225,000 and, as reported, is exactly as Secretary of the Navy Daniels desired. Mr. Daniels, in appearing before the committee, said that the President recommended an enlarged navy, even after the armistice had been signed. Members of the committee tonight declared that the President had not changed his views on this subject and the appearance of Admiral Mayo yesterday, it is understood, was with the approval of the President.

Chairman Padgett of the Naval Affairs Committee will ask for prompt consideration of the bill next week, and the developments today, it is believed, will remove all objections to the measure.

BERNSTORFF AGENT FRIEND OF O'LEARY

Editor of Bull, Accused of Aiding Germany, Sent Compliments to Pavenstedt.

KNEW WHAT NOT TO PRINT

Witness Tells of Presses Being Stopped to "Kill" an Anti-War Poem That Looked Dangerous.

Opening the Government's case against Jeremiah A. O'Leary and others, charged with conspiring to obstruct the draft law, before Federal Judge A. N. Hand yesterday, Prosecutor Osborne said that the issues of Bull, O'Leary's magazine, for June, July, August, and September, 1917, contained articles, cartoons, and poems which would be submitted in support of the indictment. He asked the jury to ascertain what Bull was published for if it was not for the purpose of opposing the Government in the prosecution of the war.

He said the prosecution would strive to show that O'Leary, by written and spoken word, had sought to obstruct enlistments, and he referred to a letter alleged to have been sent by O'Leary to Bernard Ridder to the effect that he would rather die than fight by the side of British soldiers. Mr. Osborne recited in some detail the efforts of certain societies to free Ireland by aiding Germany against the Allies and called attention to some of O'Leary's speeches urging Irishmen to get together to aid in the downfall of England.

John J. Ruth, at one time President of the Bull Publishing Company, and a former member of the American Truth Society, in which O'Leary was a conspicuous figure, was the first witness called. He testified that he had taken little interest in the publication of the magazine, but he thought the stock of the company was mainly owned by members of the Truth Society. Mr. Ruth said he had enlisted for the war, and that his mental attitude had not been affected by anything Bull contained. His association with O'Leary, he said, had made him a better and more loyal citizen.

Mrs. Klara Zwillinger, a native of Germany, testified that she had been employed in the office of Bull as a stenographer during the period that O'Leary was its editor, and Adolph Stern, a co-defendant, was the business manager. A poem written by a woman whose forbears, it was alleged, came to this country nearly 300 years ago, was submitted. It was extremely anti-war in tone. Miss Zwillinger testified that it had been read to O'Leary in the office of Bull by Luther S. Bedford, and that O'Leary had said it would never do to print it. Thereupon the presses were stopped and the poem "killed." This testimony was accepted as being injurious to O'Leary, for the reason that it displayed his knowledge of the things which ought not to be printed.

A copy of a book of fables of John Bull and Uncle Sam, written by O'Leary, was introduced. On the fly-leaf O'Leary had written: "To my friend, Adolph Pavenstedt, with the compliments of the author, also in grateful appreciation of kindly interest and assistance in and to the efforts of the American Truth Society to rectify the injustice of a false American public opinion."

Pavenstedt was the confidential friend, adviser, and agent of Count von Bernstorff during the time the latter was the German Ambassador to this country. He was also alleged to be active in plots against the Allies, and was the head of the banking house of G. Amsinck & Co. He is now interned. The trial will be continued on Monday.

SAW DEJECTION IN VIENNA.

Italian Deputy Found the Streets Almost Deserted.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Jan. 30.—Deputy Storoni, head of the Mission for Missing Prisoners in Austria, who has just returned from Vienna, when interviewed about the conditions in the Austrian capital, said:

"The city is in the most miserable condition, owing to continual revolutions. The streets are almost deserted. The few passersby slink along, while the hotels have given up their luxurious splendor to the extent of putting no sheets on the beds."

Storoni, when questioned as to the attitude of the Viennese toward the Italians, answered:

"It is a phenomenon, but the Italians are liked by the population, as is shown by an incident which happened in my presence. One evening, in a small café, the orchestra was playing the usual Lehar Waltzes, which suddenly changed, to my surprise, upon the entrance of several Italian soldiers, into the Italian Royal March.

"The King of Italy is especially liked among the poor population of the city. When the Italian prisoners were evacuated from the concentration camps 1,000,000 packages were still intact. Instructions were asked from Rome. The reply came that the packages were to be distributed among the poor, by order of the King."

AN IDEAL FOOD

Eggs are almost a perfect food—so nearly perfect that one might live on eggs alone for a long time.

Furthermore, they are one of nature's greatest tonics—better than beef, iron and wine.

And they may be prepared in such a variety of tempting ways that they never become tiresome.

All this, of course, provided they are fresh; and that is where CHILDS eggs excel—they are absolutely fresh, always.

Freshly laid, extra firsts, kept at a temperature a little below 50—that is the CHILDS standard for eggs.

Boiled, fried, poached, or scrambled, made into a golden omelet, or served with ham or crispy bacon—CHILDS eggs make an ideal breakfast.

Resinol
did wonders for me
Why not try it yourself?

There are certain times during youth when the skin is inclined to break out, become inflamed, red and rough.

Such blemishes are usually noticed during the change from boyhood to manhood, from girlhood to womanhood. Great care should be taken lest this condition become chronic.

The continued use of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap during such times seldom fail to reduce the inflamed spots, thus rendering the affliction less conspicuous.

CAPT. S. H. HODGSON RESTORED TO ARMY

Reviewing Authorities in Washington Reduce Sentence of Dismissal to a Reprimand.

ACCUSED OF DISLOYALTY

Witnesses Quoted Him as Making Pro-German Utterances While Stationed in Porto Rico.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Under the headline "Few American Courts-Martial Like This," the Army and Navy Journal, in its current issue, directs attention to the case of Captain Samuel H. Hodgson of the Medical Corps of the United States Army, who was convicted in September last by an army court-martial of pro-German utterances, of openly expressing admiration for the work of German spies, and of having as his most intimate friend Carl Heynen, the former German Consul General at Mexico City, and subsequently one of the principal German secret agents in the United States.

The court which tried Captain Hodgson was presided over by Colonel John M. Field of the 374th Infantry, and it sentenced Captain Hodgson to dismissal from the army and to two years in prison. The reviewing authorities in Washington, to whom the proceedings and verdict were submitted, after a careful study of the case, reached the conclusion that the sentence was too severe and reduced it to a reprimand, which permits Captain Hodgson to remain in the army.

Captain Hodgson is a native of Alabama, and had lived for many years in Mexico, where, the testimony shows, he had a great many German friends. When war was declared he came to Washington and was commissioned in the Medical Corps. He has a son who is also an officer of the army. In his defense several of the most prominent citizens of Porto Rico, including a Federal Judge, appeared as character witnesses, each of them swearing that they had never heard him make disloyal utterances. Colonel Miles Taulbee was one of the principal witnesses against him, his testimony being in the main responsible for a verdict of guilty on the first specification.

The official record of the trial, verdict, and final disposition of the case is as follows:

"War Department,
"Washington, Dec. 2, 1918.

"General Court-Martial.

"Orders, No. 254.

"Before a general court-martial which convened at Camp Las Casas, P. R., Sept. 16, 1918, pursuant to Special Orders, No. 50, Sept. 9, 1918, Headquarters Porto Rico Training Camp, Camp Las Casas, P. R., and of which Colonel John M. Field, 374th Infantry, was President, and Captain Elias B. Wilcox, Infantry, Judge Advocate, was arraigned and tried—

"Captain Samuel H. Hodgson, Medical Corps, U. S. Army.

"Charge 1. 'Violation of the 96th article of war.'

"Specification 1. 'In that Captain Samuel H. Hodgson, Medical Corps, U. S. Army, an officer in the service of the United States, did at the Camp Headquarters Mess, Camp Las Casas, P. R., on or about the 10th day of August 1918, make the following statements, or statements to the following effect, in the presence of witnesses, regarding his friendships among Germans and in admiration of the German people and favoring the cause of Germany, with which country the United States is now at war, such conduct being in violation of the statutory laws of the United States and of a nature to bring discredit upon the military service:

"'All my friends in Mexico are Germans.' 'I admire the work of the German spies.' 'My dearest friend in Mexico is Carl Heiman, (should be spelled Heynen) who is now interned in Oglethorpe, Ga.' 'He was too patriotic to keep quiet, so they interned him.' 'I admire the patriotism of the German people.' 'The reason you have no German friends is probably because you do not know any Germans.'

"Specification 2. 'In that Captain Samuel H. Hodgson, Medical Corps, U. S. Army, an officer in the service of the United States, dined at the Union Club, San Juan, P. R., on or about the first of June, 1918, when the following statement was made to him by a civilian: "Let us go to Mexico and kill some Huns." Reply, "Why not go to the States and kill some Americans?" thereafter remarking that he had found the Germans to be the best citizens in Mexico, and that he had many friends among them, thereby by words favoring the cause of Germany, a country with which the United States is at war, in violation of the statutory laws of the United States, and thereby conducting himself in a manner to bring discredit upon the military service.

"Specification 3. 'In that Captain Samuel H. Hodgson, Medical Corps, U. S. A., an officer in the service of the United States, did at San Juan, P. R., on or about the first day of June, 1918, in the presence of a civilian state that he believed the German policy in Mexico to be the right policy, or words to that effect, thereby by words favoring the cause of Germany, a nation with which the United States is at war, in violation of the statutory laws of the United States, and thereby conducting himself in a manner to bring discredit upon the military service.

"Specification 4. In that Captain Hodgson, Medical Corps, United States Army, an officer in the service of the United States, did at San Juan, P. R., on or about the first of June, 1918, in the presence of a civilian, state that the motion picture 'The Kaiser—The Beast of Berlin' was overdrawn, and that the Kaiser is a gentleman, or words to that effect, thereby by word favoring the cause of Germany, a nation with which the United States is at war, in violation of the statutory laws of the United States, and thereby conducting himself in a manner to bring discredit upon the military service.

"Specification 5. In that Captain Samuel H. Hodgson, Medical Corps, United States Army, an officer in the service of the United States, did at San Juan, P. R., on or about the first day of June, 1918, make the following statements or statement to the following effect, in the presence of a civilian witness, boasting of his friendship among the Germans and favoring the cause of Germany, a nation with which the United States is at war, in violation of the statutory laws of the United States, and thereby conducting himself in a manner to bring discredit upon the military service, to wit: That his friends in Mexico are Germans; that his best friend was Carl Heiman, who was leader of the German ring in Mexico City and who is now interned at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia.

"Specification 6 * * *

"To which charge and specifications the accused pleaded 'Not guilty.'

FINDINGS.

"Of the charge, and of the specifications 1, 3, 5, and 6 of the charge, 'Guilty.'

"Of the specifications 2 and 4 of the charge, 'Not guilty.'

SENTENCE.

"To be dismissed the service of the United States and to be confined at hard labor at such place as the reviewing authority may direct for two (2) years."

The sentence having been approved by the convening authority and the record of trial forwarded for the action of the President, under the 48th Article of War, the following are his orders thereon:

"In the foregoing case of Captain Samuel H. Hodgson, Medical Corps, U. S. Army, the findings of guilty of specifications 3 and 5 are disapproved, and the findings of guilty of specifications 1 and 6 of the charge are approved. Only so much of the sentence as provides for dismissal from the service is confirmed and this is commuted to a reprimand to be administered by the Commanding General of Camp Las Casas, Porto Rico. As thus commuted, the sentence will be carried into execution.

"WOODROW WILSON.
"The White House,
"30 November, 1918.

"By order of the Secretary of War,
"PEYTON C. MARCH, General,
"Chief of Staff.

"Official,
"P. C. HARRIS,
"The Adjutant General."

Captain Hodgson with the administering of the reprimand was automatically restored to active duty.

NEAR EAST DRIVE TO GO ON.

Arthur Curtiss James Gives $200,000—Dodge Moved by Work.

At a luncheon of workers on the $30,000,000 drive of the Committee for Relief in the Near East, held yesterday in the Bankers' Club, it was announced that Commodore Arthur Curtiss James had contributed $200,000 to the fund. Cleveland H. Dodge also got approval of a suggestion that the campaign be continued for another week beyond next Monday, the day it was scheduled to close.

In an address to the workers Mr. Dodge asserted that of the $100,000,000 appropriated by Congress for relief work abroad little would in all probability be devoted to relief in the Near East, Armenia and Syria and other lands under Turkish rule.

"Nothing I have ever done in my life has so moved me as this work has done," said Mr. Dodge. "Of course, we hear of how people are dying by the thousands in Livonia, Esthonia, Poland, and elsewhere, and we are asked why the Armenians are any the worse off. Though these people are in a far-off section of the world they have suffered and are suffering terribly, and they must in some way be helped by the allied powers. The large sum which Congress appropriated is going to help Armenia and Syria very little, I am sorry to say. The money will be given to Governments that can in some way repay the sums advanced to them.

"But although all these countries have suffered, Armenia and Syria and Greece have not only suffered the tortures of war, but have been tormented by massacre and persecuted. Appeal to the wealthy. Just put it up to them what this means. Other things can wait. A dying child cannot wait."

Several contributions of jewelry were received at the headquarters of the committee yesterday to be devoted to the fund, and in addition there came contributions of $1,000 from Mrs. Andrew Carnegie; Miss Emily Wheeler, $1,000; William Sloane, $5,000; G. Golhenkian, $5,000; S. Telfayan, $1,000, and G. W. Tarshanyian, $1,000.

STATES TO HELP SOLDIERS.

Michigan and Coast States Consider Way to Give Aid.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 31.—A concurrent resolution calling upon the Michigan War Preparedness Board to loan to each returned soldier from the State in need of temporary financial aid a sum not to exceed $50 was adopted by the lower house of the Legislature today. It is proposed to make the loans from part of the $5,000,000 bond issue authorized for war purposes.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Jan. 31.—Senate and House leaders have agreed on a bill to appropriate $500,000 for the relief and care of returned soldiers and sailors. A joint committee of the House and Senate will go to Montana, Idaho, and Oregon to attempt to co-ordinate pending bills in those States so that soldiers' relief committees of the four States can co-operate.

Manicure Contests $300,000 Will.

Blanche Maake, a manicure, appeared before Surrogate Cohalan yesterday with a claim for $11,850 for personal services against the estate of Mrs. Victorine Lee and as a contestant of a will in which Mrs. Lee gave more than $300,000 to her grandchildren. The manicure is aided in her contest by Sara L. Contine and Murney E. Lewis, cousins of Mrs. Lee's dead husband, who allege that another will which was not revoked made them legatees. They allege that Dr. H. Holbrook Curtis, who is named as executor in the will offered by the grandchildren, used undue influence. They object to his appointment as temporary administrator pending the contest. The Surrogate reserved decision.

Urges Hero Medal for Sailor.

Bertram Reed, a sailor now at the Pelham Bay Naval Station, has been recommended by Commander William B. Franklin of that station, to the Navy Department for the United States Navy Medal for Heroism. W. T. Hornaday, Director of the Bronx Park Zoo, has also written to Dr. W. J. Holland of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, recommending Reed for a medal. Last Saturday while walking near the Bronx River in Bronx Park Reed saw four boys break through the thin ice. He plunged in and rescued them all. The boys revived at Fordham Hospital. Reed's home is at 4,405 Brandon Avenue, Richmond Hill, Queens.

New Club for Service Men.

The V. Everit Macy home at 4 East Seventy-fifth Street was formally opened yesterday afternoon under the auspices of Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army as a rest house and club for service men. Congressman F. H. La Guardia spoke on his experiences at the front, Colonel W. A. McIntyre welcomed the men, and a committee composed of Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Everitt Little, and Mrs. Elizabeth Dexter arranged the celebration. The property was turned over by its owners and is to be used as a sunshine rest house with sleeping accommodataions and canteen service.

EXPRESS KILLS TWO IN AUTO

Motor Truck Stalls on Crossing Ahead of Long Branch Train.

Special to The New York Times.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Jan. 31.—A soldier and the chauffeur of a munition plant motor truck were killed here tonight by a Long Branch express train at the Smith Street crossing when the motor car crashed through the lowered gates and stalled on the southbound track within seventy feet of the engine. The dead are Corporal Edward J. Pecham, Company E, 22d Infantry, at Camp Morgan, N. J., and Louis Casshim, 19 years old, chauffeur, of 275 Prospect Street, Long Branch. Private Michael Rafferty was injured, but will recover, it was said.

There were three other soldiers and three civilians in the truck, all of whom escaped by jumping. The soldiers were on leave from guard duty at Oldbridge, at the California Loading Plant, owner of the truck, which was used for the transportation of munition workers.

SILENCE ORDER ISSUED BY BAKER

Personnel of Military Intelligence Service Forbidden to Give Information Without Permission.

NO EXCEPTIONS ARE MADE

Senators, Congressmen, and Congressional Committees Specifically Mentioned in Document.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—All officers and other persons connected with the Military Intelligence Service have received orders that henceforth they must not impart information to Senators, Congressmen, Congressional committees, and persons in official or private life in Washington or anywhere else without first obtaining the permission of Secretary of War Baker.

The order is generally considered a direct result of the testimony offered before the Senate Propaganda Committee, of which Senator Overman is the Chairman, by Archibald E. Stevenson, formerly of the New York Bureau of the Propaganda Section of the Military Intelligence Service. The day after Mr. Stevenson concluded his testimony, which was a week ago today, Secretary Baker ordered the New York Bureau abolished and followed it up with a statement to the effect that Mr. Stevenson was not connected with the Military Intelligence Service, a statement that was challenged on the floor of the Senate by Senator Overman, who produced documentary evidence that Mr. Stevenson had prior to giving his testimony been connected with the service.

The order imposing silence on the personnel of the Military Intelligence Service was issued by General March, the Chief of Staff, who acted, it is understood, by order of Secretary Baker. It reads:

1. The Chief of Staff directs that all officers, employes, or persons in the Military Intelligence Division be informed that the information in their custody is confidential, and cannot be released to Senators, Congressmen, Congressional committees, or to others in official or private life in Washington or elsewhere without the approval of the Secretary of War.

2. All requests received for such information in Washington, where it seems compatible with the public interest that the request be complied with, will immediately be brought to the attention of the office of the Director Military Intelligence Division, properly prepared in the usual staff memorandum for transmission to the office of the Chief of Staff.

3. With requests for information made at places other than in Washington, the proper action to be taken will consist of forwarding the request to the office of the Director Military Intelligence Division, Washington, in the usual letter form.

Members of the Senate Committee said tonight that the order would not affect the propaganda investigation now under way.

It was also stated tonight that Bradford Merrill, manager of the Hearst publications, would appear as a witness next week. Mr. Merrill will make, it is said, a lengthy statement in behalf of Mr. Hearst and will submit to cross-examination by the members of the committee and by Major Humes, the Judge Advocate representing the War Department.

Professor Ferderick A. Bushee of the University of Colorado, in a letter read to the Senate today by Senator Thomas of Colorado, protested against the presentation of his name to the Senate Committee by Archibald E. Stevenson in connection with a list of prominent men and women, who, Stevenson said, held radical or pacifist views. Professor Bushee said he had been strongly pro-ally from the beginning of the war, and that he held views about as radical as those of President Wilson. He added:

"The Senate has no business to permit names to be printed as suspicious when they know no more about them than they do about me."

ROE ATTACKS STEVENSON.

Tells Overman Revenge Caused His Name to be Put in "Pacifist List."

In a letter sent yesterday to Lee S. Overman, Chairman of the Senate Committee investigating German propaganda in this country, before whom Archibald S. Stevenson of the Military Intelligence Division testified to a list of "pacifists," Gilbert E. Roe, an attorney, of 55 Liberty Street, one of those who appeared on the list, severely scored Stevenson for his selection of names and asserted that he used the committee for giving publicity to himself, and in Mr. Roe's case placed his name upon the list in retaliation for the attorney's activities in checkmating Stevenson's illegal proceedings. Mr. Roe maintains that the committee was used "for a far more dangerous and specious propaganda than anything Mr. Stevenson professed to have been investigating."

"So far as I know, the persons mentioned on your list," the writer continues, "have only one thing in common—they have opposed the Prussianization of the United States. Some of them were earnest advocates of war with Germany long before you were an advocate of that war. Some of them opposed going to war with Germany at the time President Wilson was opposed to it. Some of them changed when President Wilson did, and some of them did not. So their attitude toward the war could not have been the reason for their appearing on Mr. Stevenson's list. The real reason is found, however, in the fact which I have stated. Most of them, I think, were opposed to the passage of the espionage law. Certainly they have never defended the manner of its enforcement or its subsequent amendment. They have also been opposed to the lawlessness of which the Military Intelligence Department has been guilty, whereby the homes of citizens have been unlawfully invaded and their persons and property seized without warrant or pretext of legal authority.

"I am merely summarizing what appears of record in the courts of the City of New York when I say that the emissaries of the Military Intelligence Department again and again, in disregard of every right of the citizen, without warrant or pretense of authority, have invaded homes, arrested persons, held them incommunicado for days, seized and carried away property, and that it has been necessary to make application after application to the courts here in order to have the property returned to the individuals thus outraged.

"Would it not have been pertinent to inquire from Mr. Stevenson whether or not, in every case the courts sustained my contentions and ordered the return of much property unlawfully taken by the Military Intelligence Department? That I have taken some small part in trying to preserve the rights of the people against these outrages, a work in which I am glad to acknowledge the co-operation of the District Attorney's office, would, I think, appear as a result of Mr. Stevenson's cross-examination, to be the real reason for my name appearing upon this list."

Mr. Roe then inquires whether it would not have been pertinent to ask Mr. Stevenson if other names had not been placed upon the list for the same reason, and whether it would not be well to inquire why Stevenson had been put forward to testify when Captain Trevor, head of the division in this city, could have given much first-hand information. Finally, the writer asks, "would it not have been pertinent to inquire whether Mr. Stevenson testified before your committee as a representative of the Government or as a paid representative of powerful private interests?"

EMPLOYMENT SERVICE ACCUSES AGENCIES

Charges Them with Attempting to Influence Congress Against the Federal Bureau.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The allegation that private employment agencies have embarked upon a campaign against the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor was made in a statement issued today by J. B. Densmore, Director General of that service, and by Nathan A. Smyth, its Assistant Director General. They assert that members of Congress are being circularized by private employment agencies and blacklist bureaus, and it is alleged that manufacturers are being approached in an effort to induce them to bring pressure to bear on their local representative in Congress to cut off funds under which the employment bureau operates.

"We are fully aware," said Director General Densmore, "that such attacks have been made. On the one hand we have been accused by radicals of being a union shop organization bureau, on the other we have been accused of stifling the attempts of men to unionize. The fact is we have, of course, taken no sides in this question.

"In conjunction with the Council of National Defense, the Red Cross, the War and Navy Departments, the various organizations making up the United War Work Campaign Organization and representatives of the Women's Committee, we have established some 1,350 Bureaus for Returning Soldiers—this in addition to the 750 offices that the Employment Service itself organized and operated.

"We have already placed more than 100,000 returning soldiers in employment and are placing an average of about 100,000 persons a week in various industries. For instance, in the week of Jan. 11 forty-four States reported placements of 99,077 men, and the week ending Jan. 18 forty-two States reported the placing of 91,299 men. Between the signing of the armistice on Nov. 11 and Dec. 31 last year we placed a total of 723,793 men, and in the last six months of 1918 we placed more than 2,300,000 persons chiefly in war industries.

"Even now we are moving more than 4,000 men a week from one State to another in order to balance the labor surplus in one State against the labor shortage in another—this after local demands are filled.

"The attack by the private employment bureau lobby is particularly dangerous at this time, because of the rapid demobilization of troops and the existing unemployment in many big cities."

BALLIN TOOK POISON SAYS GERMAN PAPER

Told by Reds to Leave Offices, He Asked Respite, Then Killed Himself, It Is Asserted.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—That Albert Ballin, President of the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, committed suicide is stated by the German newspaper Warheit, a copy of which has been received here. The report is reproduced in other German newspapers without comment, but also without denial.

On Nov. 8, when the revolution began at Hamburg, the Warheit says, the Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates entered the offices of the Hamburg-American Line and ordered Ballin to leave immediately. The latter asked for fifteen minutes' delay. Five minutes' time was granted him.

Then Ballin, the newspaper continues, in desperation drank a dose of poison which had been placed in a drawer of his desk. He died in a hospital ten minutes later after great suffering.

The sudden death of Mr. Ballin on Nov. 9 started rumors of suicide at that time.

2-BILLION LOAN TO BELGIUM

Joint French-British-American Fund to be Repaid from Indemnity.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Ten billion francs have been advanced to Belgium by Great Britain, France, and the United States, the amount to be deducted from the first installment of the war indemnity to be paid by Germany, according to a Havas dispatch from Brussels.

The dispatch adds that the amount will be raised by an interallied bond issue or by a German loan having priority over all other loans.

INVESTIGATE LAND DEAL.

Mayor's Committee Takes Up Long Beach Estates Sales.

The Mayor's Committee on Taxation has begun an investigation into the tax lien sales of three lots in the estates of Long Beach, in Hempstead, Nassau County, which were bought by Miss Mary E. Walsh, a dressmaker, of 169 West Eighty-first Street, in 1908 for $2,425. These lots were sold for unpaid taxes for about $32, and the present owner of the lien, J. M. Kalt of 44 Court Street, Brooklyn, demands $1,500. Joseph Heffernan of the Commissioner of Accounts Office, made an examination which showed the lots were first sold for 1914 back taxes for $15.43 to E. A. Harvey of Flannagan & Harvey, of Mineola. In a sale of lots Harvey made to Patrick Reynolds, who has an office at 44 Court Street, Brooklyn, Miss Walsh's lots were included. Reynolds deeded them to his wife, and the back taxes were paid.

Next the lots were transferred to Berel Schwartz of 1,337 Forty-third Street, Brooklyn, for $900, and they stand in the name of J. M. Kalt, who is Schwartz's son-in-law. This week all parties were called to the office of Samuel S. Breslin, counsel for the committee. Miss Walsh said that she had made every effort to obtain back the title of the property by a reasonable payment. The lots, she said, represented her savings for years and she had not paid the taxes on the two years because of ill-health. Reynolds denied he was any relation to former Senator Reynolds.

Mr. Breslin said he thought the sale could be set aside, and advised Miss Walsh not to surrender her interest in the property.

THREE CHINESE OFFICIALS SLAIN

ton for New York not many hours ahead of the detectives.

It is asserted that the members of the mission suspected this man of theft, and it is said that he may have become aware that he was suspected and murdered the men with the idea of getting more money from the safe.

The theory of the officers is that the two students were killed first by some one who lurked in the house, and that Wong was murdered later when he returned home.

This theory is based upon several facts. The first is that Li went to the house on Wednesday and upon ringing the bell was told by a strange Chinese that Wong was not at home. Another is that there were only two discharged cartridges in the pistol, whereas at least five shots were fired into the bodies. The police think that sufficient time elapsed between the death of the students and of Wong for the murderer to hide the bodies of the first two and reload the gun before Wong reached the house.

Officials at the Chinese Embassy could throw no light on the mystery. Tsu-tsun, attaché of the legation, who is a student at George Washington University, missed Woo and Hsia from the university and it was at his suggestion that Li called at the house on Wednesday to inquire for Wong.

Mr. Wong had been the Director of the Chinese Education Mission in Washington for a number of years. He delivered addresses at most of the leading colleges of this country which were educating Chinese students. His own education was completed in this country at the University of Virginia.

TELL OF REPRIMAND TO GEN. CROWDER

Rumors of Action by Gen. March Not Officially Confirmed in Washington.

STORY OF CLASH OVER PLAN

Baker Says Crowder Has Not Resigned and That His Record Is Clear.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Secretary of War Baker and General Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff of the army, both declined tonight to comment on a report printed in Colonel Harvey's weekly magazine of Feb. 1 to the effect that Provost Marshal General Crowder had been reprimanded by General March because Crowder had worked out and presented a plan for the training of draft men, which March considered an encroachment on his province.

According to the story in Colonel Harvey's magazine, General March had refused to wipe out the alleged reprimand, and it would stand against the General's record for promotion, and General Crowder therefore intended to resign.

"I decline to make any comment on the story," said Secretary Baker to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, "except to say that so far as I am aware General Crowder has neither resigned nor asked for retirement, and has not even suggested such a thing. I have no other comment to make except that there is nothing whatever on General Crowders' record that is in any way prejudicial to him."

The story was also brought to the attention of General March, who authorized the statement that he did not care to make any comment on the article in advance of having seen it. Copies of the magazine containing the story had not reached Washington tonight.

It was impossible to obtain any comment from General Crowder, who left Washington late in the afternoon and who will probably be in New York tomorrow.

It was learned that the story of the development of very sharp differences of opinion between Generals March and Crowder has been rumored in inner army circles here for several weeks. Whether General March actually indulged in a reprimand of General Crowder could not be positively developed from any official source, but it was learned that in army circles the gossip has been that in connection with differences of opinion that developed between Generals March and Crowder, General March had written something which General Crowder had regarded as equivalent to a reprimand, whether it was so intended or not.

RAID ON STOCK CONCERN.

Prosecutor Questions Van Brandenburg About a Selling Campaign.

Assistant District Attorney E. S. Brogan, acting on information contained in an anonymous letter sent to Mayor Hylan yesterday, seized the books and papers of the Eastern Bond and Securities Company, with offices in the Grand Hotel, for the purpose of investigating the stock selling business of the concern. Mr. Brogan said that the raid had been made on a Grand Jury subpoena. No arrests were made nor was any charge made against any one connected with the concern, but a number of men were questioned at the Criminal Court Building.

Among them, Mr. Brogan said, was E. B. Van Brandenburg, President of the securities company, which, it was asserted, was acting as agent of the New York New Method and Metals Molding Company.

"It appears that the plan is to establish corporations and sell stock on the basis of the output of an asbestos mine at Tuckasegee, N. C.," said Mr. Brogan, "but Van Brandenburg admitted that he had only an option on the mine. Stock amounting to $27,000 had been sold in Buffalo, and $60,000 here, at $1 a share, but the corporation had only $10 in a bank. A sign in Van Brandenburg's office announced the stock would be advanced to $2 on Feb. 1."

Mr. Brogan said that Van Brandenburg was Broughton Brandenburg, known formerly as a literary agent and magazine writer, who had been acquitted in 1908 of the charge of larceny in connection with the sale of political letters purporting to have been written by Grover Cleveland. It was also asserted that Brandenburg had been sentenced to two years in prison in 1911, on a charge of forgery concerning a check for $50. Mr. Brogan said Brandenburg had told him that Governor Whitman had restored him to citizenship after serving his term.

BOLD RESCUE AT FATAL FIRE

Fireman and Soldier Save Woman—Man Burned to Death.

A fire, which spread with remarkable rapidity through the five-story building, 710 Lexington Avenue, yesterday, resulted in the death of Samuel Chonton of 11 East Ninety-eighth Street, a paper hanger, and gave opportunity for the rescue of a woman who was about to throw herself from a window. The building was practically destroyed, and the loss is fixed at $25,000.

Two women, Mrs. Della Cambeir, who lived on the fourth floor, and Mrs. Bernice Vaughn of 270 West Ninety-third Street, who was visiting her, started down the stairs, which were then burning. Mrs. Cambeir succeeded in reaching the street with her hair and clothing on fire.

A burst of flames drove Mrs. Vaughn back into the room. She was about to leap from the window when Martin J. Murphy, a fireman, shouted for her not to jump, and with Daniel Coughlin, a returned soldier of Long Island City, went to the fourth floor of an adjoining building and made the rescue. Murphy straddled the window ledges and passed Mrs. Vaughn to the soldier.

After the fire was under control the firemen found the body of Chonton in a rear room of the upper floor.

ATWATER GUILTY; GETS SIX MONTHS

Convicted on Charge of Pledging Liberty Bonds That Did Not Belong to His Firm.

HIS LAWYER FILES APPEAL

Defendant Out on Bail Pending Further Action—Family Making Good Claims of Creditors.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 31.—Morton Atwater, senior member of the firm of Atwater, Foote & Sherrill, accused of pledging Liberty bonds which did not belong to them as security for debts, and grand larceny in the third degree, was found guilty on the first count in the Supreme Court here this afternoon. Justice Seeger sentenced Atwater to serve six months in the county jail, but granted the appeal of his attorney for a certificate of reasonable doubt. Atwater was released on bail pending further action of the court in two weeks.

The firm of Atwater, Foote & Sherrill was thrown into bankruptcy on April 18 last, following the petition of Mrs. Henrietta D. Fraleigh of Red Hook, N. Y., and several other residents of Dutchess County. The members of the firm were Morton Atwater, Eliot Atwater, Gilbert F. Foote, and Harold W. Sherrill. Foote is serving four years in Sing Sing for forgery in the third degree, and Sherrill, the son of ex-Mayor Isaac W. Sherrill, who also pleaded guilty to the charge of forgery, is ill with influenza in the Dutchess County jail. He will be arraigned for sentence when he has sufficiently recovered.

Prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, the firm made an assignment to Alexander G. Cummings of Poughkeepsie. When Stephen H. Guernsey, the temporary receiver, took charge, he found only confusion. In a statement to the court he said that many of the bonds held by the brokerage company were claimed by creditors. More than 90 per cent. of the creditors were residents of Dutchess County.

About $90,000 of the firm's assets consisted of securities held by the firm of Post & Flagg, and about $60,000 was in Liberty bonds pledged with Poughkeepsie banks. It was charged that the firm had carried a fictitious account which was traded in from time to time, the profits, if any, being distributed by Foote.

The seven days' trial, which came to a close today, attracted all Poughkeepsie. Atwater is the son of Edward S. Atwater, President of the Farmers' and Manufacturers' National Bank, who is said to be the wealthiest man in Dutchess County. He offered to make restitution to the poor customers who suffered from the failure of his sons' firm, and in the referee's proceedings, which followed the bankruptcy, he offered to pay anything up to $500,000 to satisfy the creditors.

Mrs. Gilbert F. Foote and her two sons, it became known today, have turned over all their real estate with the exception of their home here, to satisfy the claims, which amount to a little less than $1,000,000. All the automobiles of the Atwater family have been sold by the referee. There were over 400 creditors with liabilities of $1,250,000. The assets were said to be about $260,000.

Out of the failure of the firm there grew indictments charging violations of the selective service law. The indictments were returned against Gilbert [illegible] and his two sons, Gilbert, Jr., and Arthur G. Foote, Charles W. Swift of the District Board of Appeals at White Plains, an uncle of Morton and Eliot Atwater; Dr. John S. Wilson, a Major in the Medical Corps of the United States Army and a member of the local draft board, Albert A. Simpson, Secretary of the local draft board, and [illegible] Hiehl, transportation manager of the [illegible] Manufacturing Company of New York.

The indictment set forth that Simpson, Wilson and Hiehl received checks from Atwater, Foote & Sherrill as ostensible profits in stock transactions. Five of the defendants, the Footes, Simpson and Swift, appeared before Federal Judge Hand, pleaded not guilty, and were released in $5,000 bail each.

Most of the prominent residents of Poughkeepsie figured in the trial of young Atwater. When the verdict was brought in this afternoon the members of his immediate family were surprised as they were confident that he would be acquitted.

In imposing sentence Justice Seeger said he considered Atwater too young to be sent to Sing Sing and said that no fine would be imposed, in order that more money would revert to the creditors.

Eliot Atwater, a brother, and a former member of the New York Stock Exchange, will be tried next on a charge of doing business after knowing of the insolvency of the firm.

MURDERER ELUDES GUARD IN THE TOMBS

Richard Harrison, Who Escaped Once Before, Climbs to Top of High Prison Wall.

Richard Harrison, a convicted murderer, who within a few hours was to be sentenced to die in the electric chair, sought to escape from the Tombs yesterday, and almost succeeded. He reached the top of the eighteen-foot wall on the Franklin Street side, near the Bridge of Sighs, but fell back within the prison enclosure, injuring himself. He was finally caught when he tried to conceal himself behind boxes and barrels in one of the prison buildings.

On Oct. 4, when Harrison was to be arraigned on the charge of murdering a soldier, George J. Griffiths, at the Walters' Club, in Sixth Avenue, the prisoner escaped from detectives in the Criminal Courts Building and eluded search for several weeks. He was recaptured in Newark. After his desperate effort to get free again yesterday he was taken into the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, and Justice Weeks sentenced him to die in the electric chair in the week of March 10. A half hour later Sheriff Knott and several deputies, two of whom were handcuffed to the elusive criminal, started with him for Sing Sing.

At the exercise hour yesterday morning Harrison, with other prisoners, was under guard in the corridor. Soon after the men had been returned to their cells Harrison's wife and their child and her brother called to see him. A keeper found that Harrison was gone. Apparently he had slipped past his cell on the second tier when the others were locked in, and had passed the keeper's desk and several guards in getting to the first floor and thence to the prison yard.

Chaloner Estate Grows Here.

The annual accounting of Thomas T. Sherman, as committee of the estate of John Armstrong Chaloner of Virginia, was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday, showing that in the last year he had received $112,960 and disbursed $72,319. A substantial addition to the principal of the estate is shown in Chaloner's interest of $185,520 as a one-twenty-fourth share of the estate of Henry Astor. His share of the estate of his father, John Winthrop Chanler, is now valued at $316,579, and his interest in the property left by his aunt, Laura Astor Delano, is $452,563.

SECURITY HOLDERS' RAILROAD PLAN

Provides for Return of Roads, with Minimum Income Assured by Rate Adjustments.

5-YEAR CONTROL OPPOSED

Creation of Secretary of Transportation Also Objected To by National Association.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Investors who represent $5,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000 of the outstanding $17,000,000,000 of railroad securities are not only opposed to the McAdoo five-year plan of Federal control of railways, but to the creation of a Secretary of Transportation, as proposed by the railway executives, S. Davies Warfield, President of the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today.

Mr. Warfield presented in great detail a new plan which, he said, would secure a fixed return on railroad stocks, attract investors, permit necessary extensions by carriers, provide for the creation of agencies to adjust disputes between railroad employers and employes, and give labor a share in the excess earnings of the roads, either in the form of added compensation or insurance.

The fundamentals of the plan submitted by Mr. Warfield are:

First—A minimum rate of return on the property investment of the railroads, fixed by act of Congress, through rates adjusted as occasion may demand, in order that the securities of the railroads may be stabilized and their credit established on a basis necessary to secure the money to provide to the shippers and traveling public adequate facilities and service.

Second—Recognition that a fixed return through rates that will enable the average railroad to secure an adequate return on its invested capital is not possible without giving to the more favorably situated railroads more revenue than the public will sanction, or more than would represent a fair return on its property. The earnings of railroads in excess of fixed reasonable rate of return to be applied as provided in the following section.

Divided on Percentage Basis.

Third—This excess would be distributed under the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission on a percentage basis so that railroad employes would benefit by profit-sharing or by insurance or in other ways; so that railroads showing efficiency and initiative would gain part of this percentage and so that a part of this excess should be used for improvements of railroad properties which could not be capitalized for the purposes of rate making.

Fourth—A corporation created by Congress operating without profit, under Federal control, directed by trustees composed of the nine members of the Interstate Commerce Commission and eight railroad men, which would finance in the present emergency such equipment as may be purchased by it from the Railroad Administration and allocated to the carriers; which would furnish an immediate means for assisting in financing the return of the roads, which would continue as a permanent means for mobilizing and purchasing payment of a return on the investment equipment to be leased to the roads; which would continue or effect joint use of terminals, unification of facilities, pooling of freight. The corporation would continue or adopt methods of operation found successful during Federal control and would furnish a standing trained and efficient means for immediate mobilization of railroads for war purposes without additional legislation.

Fifth—Extension of Federal rate regulation through the present Interstate Commerce Commission co-ordinating with its six subsidiary regional commissions which would have determination of rates and regulations with the right of appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Sixth—Continuation of rate committees of railroad and shipping representatives to consider and pass on changes in rates before such changes are filed with regional commissions.

Seventh—Coordination by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the work of State Commissions and the regional commissions so far as possible. Adjustment of intra-State rates to the requirements of interstate commerce as prescribed through interstate rates to be vested in the Federal commissions.

Eighth—Regional commissions would act as Boards of Conciliation in wage differences with an appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission and findings nor compulsory unless agreed upon beforehand. Wages would be supervised by the commissions as would other elements of expenditure.

Ninth—Future issues of railroad securities to be supervised by the regional commissions and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Our plan provides a method," said Mr. Warfield, "by which a percentage of the net operating income of the railroads is set aside to be applied to the [illegible] just the same as payments are required to be made for other necessities entering into railroad operation, without which they cannot operate. Everything else but the capital upon which they do business has been recognized as an essential, but the policy has been that after providing for everything else, whatever may be left over goes to take care of invested capital, which should be provided for, especially in a controlled and regulated business, for without it the business cannot be run at all.

"It is proposed, therefore, by act of Congress, to fix, through rates, a percentage of reasonable return on property investment in the railroads, at least as far as this may be practicable. And after authorizing a reserve fund to be set up as a margin of safety within prescribed limitations, surplus earnings of the railroads will be applied as set forth in the plan, part being used in profit sharing with the employee.

"A corporation is to be organized to supply the means to assist in the return of the railroads; to finance railroad equipment to be used under lease, permanently or as emergency equipment, and to give a management for the control of the joint use of railroad facilities. Regional commissions are provided to act in concert with the Interstate Commerce Commission. We realize that this calls for the extension of the regulatory powers to Federal Commissions but they are to be directed as to procedure by an act of Congress. In extending regulatory powers provision should be made for such use of the functions of the State Commissions as shall be beneficial, by co-ordinating their work with the Interstate Commerce Commission supplemented by the Regional Commissions, so located as to give the country a regulatory system on which all, locally and nationally, can depend, and free from political domination and control.

"Through the proposed leveling of railroad earnings by excess earnings reduction and through the powers to be conferred upon the above-mentioned corporation to be organized in the public interest for the unification and adjustment of operating and traffic facilities, the use of the combined facilities of all the railroads will be secured, with the competitive advantages still preserved to the shippers and the public from the individual operation of each. The Interstate Commerce Commission and the management of the corporation working in unison will be the means of correcting any inequalities, and should produce a satisfactory solution of many existing difficulties. Around these requisites our plan has been constructed.

Shippers Willing to Co-operate.

"In the consideration of plans for the return of the railroads the views of many of the interests concerned have been ascertained. In the progress of this we have co-operated with, and asked in return the co-operation of, shipping interests of the country. Shippers have recognized, in fact they have so stated, that this is the first time recognition has been made of the desirability of co-operation and understanding between those who own the railroads and those who use them. The war, if nothing else, has taught us that the interests of the two are largely identical in that adequate railroad facilities and service cannot be secured without adequate return on railroad investment. We have conferred also with others interested. We have adopted many of the suggestions made that have seemed to us constructive.

"When you consider that a fourth of the provision made after death by owners of life insurance policies is invested in railroad securities and that 30,000,000 people own the 46,000,000 life insurance policies now outstanding, secured by the investments of the great insurance companies, with one-quarter of them railroad securities, you realize how important become the methods under which these properties are to be returned to their owners."

In support of the plan Mr. Warfield left with the committee letters of approval from such constitutional authorities as former Senator Elihu Root, Hugh L. Bond, Jr., of Baltimore, John G. Milburn of New York, John S. Miller of Chicago, Luther M. Walter of Chicago, Forney Johnston of Birmingham, and B. H. Inness Brown of New York. The constitutionality of some of the suggestions from others previously appearing at the hearings, notably Federal incorporation of railroads, was denied by these authorities. Some of the important organizations of shippers of the country, Mr. Warfield said, supported many of the ideas he advanced.

Annual Report to Stockholders Shows Reduction from 6.82 Per Cent. Earned in 1917.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company held yesterday at the company's offices, 85 Clinton Street, was one of the largest in the history of the company. The business included the reading of the annual report and the re-election of four Directors, Harry C. Duval, J. H. Harding, Henry Evans, and G. W. Davidson. The financial statement showed that the net income of the company had fallen $3,595,492, compared with the previous year. For the six months ended Dec. 31, 1918, the net income was only $11,516.82.

The report, which is signed by Nicholas F. Brady, Chairman of the board, and Timothy S. Williams, President of the company, although he resigned a few days ago, reviews the conditions which brought about a receivership of three companies in the system, and then makes the following reference to the surface lines, which are not in the hands of the receiver:

"Although the net earnings of the surface lines have been largely reduced, the properties are able to pay all their fixed charges, except such as accrue to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company as the holder of their obligations, and are earning a considerable portion of these. Moreover, they are creditors of the parent company for moneys loaned, from time to time, on demand notes, the aggregate amount of which is now $2,434,514."

The report says the earnings of the company have suffered materially from the failure of the city to complete the lines which the company will operate, and urges the need for increased fares. In this connection the report says the surface lines, for many years, have been receiving a much less lower average fare than the company's franchises and the law permit the company to charge. For the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1918, the average fare on the Brooklyn surface lines, including transfers, it says, only amounted to 3.26 cents. Thus the companies are placed in the position "where they are expected properly to discharge their obligations to the public, but are prevented by official authority from charging for such service the fares they were authorized to charge when they accepted those obligations."

In the financial statement attached to the report it is shown that the operating revenue for 1918 was $30,982,682.68, against $30,087,287.09 for 1917, an increase of $895,347.59. But the operating expenses rose from $17,211,885.08 in 1917 to $20,035,790.16 in 1918, an increase of $2,823,905.08. The surplus for 1918, after deducting taxes, rentals, and interest, was $1,183,816.24, which is equivalent to 1.59 per cent. on the $74,455,159 capital stock. For 1917 the surplus was $5,079,308.37, equivalent to 6.82 per cent.

After the report had been read, the four retiring Directors were renominated. Elon S. Hobbs, a stockholder of 233 Broadway, said he would like more light on the real condition of the system than could be obtained from the report and said, also, that he thought it was about time the B. R. T. Directors came out into the open. Joseph R. Marquette, Jr., a New York importer, wanted to know if the Public Service Commission could prevent the companies from charging fares that would meet the cost of operating and fixed charges. This question inspired Mr. Hobbs to do a little more heckling and he concluded by nominating Mr. Marquette for a Director. The nomination was later withdrawn and the original ticket was elected unanimously.

IMMIGRATION BILL EXCITES PROTESTS

House Minority Report Denies Necessity for Proposed Restrictions.

PRAISES EAST SIDE TROOPS

Cites Jews of "Lost Legion" as Proof That Foreign-Born Make Patriotic Citizens.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Representative Isaac Siegel of New York, with Representative Sabath of Illinois, today filed a minority report against the bill to restrict general immigration for four years. The report, which denied the necessity for such a restriction, asserted that there would not be any great inrush of immigrants to this country for years to come.

Mr. Siegel, who wrote the report, says that the war has shown that aliens are quickly assimilated and are in full accord with American institutions, willing and eager to defend the country and uphold the principles for which it stands.

"The majority report says the 'far-famed melting pot has proved to a great degree a delusion and a snare,'" says the minority report. "We deny this. The test was when the war came. The answer is the casualty lists, which tell their own unvarnished tales of the many brave boys and men of foreign extraction who made the supreme sacrifice when the clarion notes summoned them to the defense of the nation. Have we already forgotten the brave stand of the 'Lost Battalion' in the Argonne Forest, where the boys of the east side astounded the world by their feat of withstanding the enemy for six days and taking prisoners of war?"

The report here quotes the editorial from The New York Times of Dec. 19, entitled "The Private from the Bronx." This editorial mentions especially the work of Abraham Krotoshinsky of 811 Ritter Place, the Bronx, a private in Company K, 307th Infantry, who volunteered for service which seemed to mean certain death.

After quoting the editorial, the report continues:

"We would respectfully call attention to the fact that no one will claim for a moment the people residing in those States where labor unions have been privileged to exist, where child labor is forbidden, and where the immigrant predominates, failed to respond to the country's needs as quickly as the other States of the Union.

"Krotoshinsky was only one of the many thousands upon thousands of foreign Jews who rendered yeomen's service in 'No Man's Land,' and what applies to him and his must be applied also to the many thousands of other nationalities like the Irish, Italians, Czechoslovaks, (Bohemians,) Poles, Jugoslavs, and, as a matter of fact, to those who have come here from Germany and Austria in years gone by. They demonstrated beyond contradiction that they were all loyal to their adopted country. Side by side with the native-born, they fought for what they deemed right, and once and for all they have proven that patriotism exists in all men, regardless of the place of birth.

"The members of this committee hold no brief for Bolshevism or its adherents. They fail to see, however, where this bill is going to prevent any person getting imbued with such ideas if he is foolish and weak-minded enough to believe in them. We condemn its leaders and doctrines with all the emphasis that language can command. We think too much of the patriotic common sense of our people to believe for a moment that they can be so readily led astray as the majority report would assume. That report refers to the Italian people in a manner which requires a reply, and we prefer to quote what President Wilson said on Friday, Jan. 3, 1919, at Rome, as more fittingly conveying America's opinion of the Italian emigrants.

"We have heard many times in the past few years of the alleged terrific shortage of our food supply, which we now see was given publicity for a specific reason by those interested, the same as publicity is being given by misleading statements to the effect that we have an overabundance of labor in this country. We recognize our sense of high obligation to our country, and if we were convinced by any reliable evidence or testimony that this bill is necessary to maintain a high wage for the toilers of America, or that there was the slightest danger of Bolshevism here, we would gladly join in supporting it. Every patriotic pulse-beat which quickens our minds and thoughts leads us to the one unbiased conclusion—that it would have a contrary effect. Firmly convinced that its enactment would be detrimental to the progress and best interests of the republic, we feel it our duty to oppose it to the fullest extent. It neither represents mature thought nor investigation. It does not stand for those ideals for which we entered the war. It practically says to the 144,182 men who waived their right to exemption on the ground that they were aliens, that they were fit to go into battle for America, and even die for it, but that they were not inspired by love for our institutions, and that, therefore, the doors of our country are to be closed to their younger brothers and next of kin.

"We do not know whence the call has come to close the doors of America to the men who were coming here to do the unskilled labor of the nation, and who, under the present law, must be physically fit and be capable of passing the 'literacy test'; but until our citizens speak emphatically in favor of the erection of such a wall we believe that such action is contrary to their wishes and should be defeated. Let us sink all ideas of selfish thoughts and let us give notice to the world that America will continue to welcome those who come here to be real Americans in the fullest sense of the term.

"The majority report states that there were two cogent reasons for its favoring this legislation, consisting of the alleged unsettled labor condition of the country, and the other the alleged danger to our country by the admission of thousands of so-called 'revolutionists' from foreign countries.

"When the present law was passed we remember that the main argument in its favor was that it would prevent 'an influx of a million untrained workers a year.' The sponsor of that bill now contends, with the 'literacy test' in existence, that the same number would be coming here. We have read the newspapers very carefully, and we have not learned from any source that there has been such extraordinary educational progress in Europe that all of its illiterates have suddenly become literates. If the sponsor of the bill of Feb. 5, 1917, was correct in his assertion that it would prevent about [illegible] per cent. of immigration to this country, then the same statement must be deemed to be true to-day that the most that could possibly come here would be [illegible] a year if conditions had been normal in Europe during the last four years. That continent has, however, lost over ten millions in death and disabled. In addition there is evidence before the committee establishing that more than a million to a million and a half of workers from this country are now prepared to leave it at the first opportunity offered to them."

An Italian Protest from Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Jan. 31.—Joseph J. Lunghino, editor of The Italian Courier of this city, has sent the following telegram of protest against the Immigration bill to Senators Wadsworth and Calder:

"We protest against legislation restricting immigration for four years after peace is signed. It is rank discrimination and un-American. Thousands of foreigners with the American Expeditionary Forces, unnaturalized, having families abroad, will [illegible] want to visit them. [illegible] to permit them to re-enter the United States. Freedom of the seas becomes hypocrisy when you deny these people freedom of land. Thousands of Italian boys now serving with the Italian Army are American residents, and many would like to return here to carry on their vocations. They fought for the same ideals and principles for which we entered the war. Are you going to prevent them from coming back?

"Anarchists, Bolshevists, and Reds may now be debarred by present immigration laws. No need for further immigration restrictions."

CANADIAN BANK BUYS 15-STORY HOME HERE

The Royal Pays More Than $1,000,000 for Office Building to House New York Agency.

Another important purchase of real estate in the financial district by a banking institution, as a result of the recent expansion of banking activity in New York, was closed yesterday, when the Royal Bank of Canada bought, through William A. White & Sons, Inc., for its New York agency the fifteen-story office building on the northeast corner of William and Cedar Streets. The price paid was more than $1,000,000. This purchase is in line with the tendency of banks to buy property for permanent occupancy, because of the rapidly narrowing area in the financial section available for their use.

The property, which fronts 54.5 feet on William Street and 124.2 feet on Cedar Street, was bought from the 68 William Street Corporation. The Royal Bank's New York agency now occupies the ground floor, second floor, basement, and other space in the building.

The 68 William Street Building was erected in 1901, and in 1914 was bought for occupancy by the Casualty Company of America. This company later went into the hands of the Superintendent of Insurance, who has held the property as liquidator, necessitating approval of the sale by the Supreme Court.

Purchase of the building was made necessary by recent growth in the business of the agency. The development of the agency is indicated by its growth since opening for business on July 5, 1899, in a small office not exceeding 800 square feet of space, at 16 Exchange Place, with a force consisting of the agent, three clerks, and a stenographer.

The expansion of the foreign business of the bank, which has been the outstanding feature of its history, was marked during the last year by an increase in the number of its branches from 482 in March, 1918, to 543 at present.

Organized Oct. 18, 1869, as the Merchants' Bank of Halifax, it absorbed the Union Bank of Halifax in 1910, the Traders' Bank of Canada in 1912, the Quebec Bank in 1917, and the Northern Crown Bank in March last. The present name was adopted in 1901. Deposits have grown from $283,000 at the end of the first year's business to $332,591,717 Nov. 30, 1918; assets from $954,000 to $427,512,982.

Among recent transactions which indicate the heavy demand for property for the permanent occupancy of banks in the rapidly narrowing available area of the financial district, are the purchase by the National City Company of the old Mechanics and Metals National Bank Building at 50 Wall Street; purchase by the Bank of America of the former Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company's ten-story building at 45-49 William Street, together with an extension on Pine Street; the purchase by the New York Stock Exchange of the Mortimer Building, and purchases by the Federal Reserve Bank, Brown Brothers & Co. and the National Park Bank.

POLICEMAN GETS AID OF CAPT. ROOSEVELT

Son of the Late Colonel Guards Fugitive Dropped by a Bullet.

Captain Archibald Roosevelt, son of the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, with his wife and nine months' old son, Archie, Jr., witnessed a pistol fight between police and jewel thieves at Amsterdam Avenue and Seventy-ninth Street yesterday morning, and Captain Roosevelt stood guard over one of the thieves whom a policeman had shot down, while a search was continued for the two other robbers. Policeman John Deveny of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station was slightly wounded in the fight, and was commended by his superior officers for bravery in pursuing the thieves.

The robbers, who were overtaken by the police at Seventy-ninth Street, had attempted to rob a jewelry store at 334 Columbus Avenue, near Seventy-sixth Street, but were frustrated by the owner, Henry Graham, who struck one of the men over the head with a blackjack and called for the police. His cries frightened the men, and instead of shooting at him with their leveled pistols they ran out of the shop, taking with them only about $75 worth of small gold trinkets.

As the men ran west through Seventy-sixth Street toward Amsterdam Avenue, Policeman Deveny, who had been attracted by the cries of the jeweler, gave chase in an automobile. As he came abreast the men near Seventy-ninth Street, he jumped from the running board of the car and seized Frank Marcello, who broke the policeman's grasp and began to shoot. One of the bullets tore the policeman's coat and grazed his hip, and another made a slight wound in one of his legs before he could open fire himself.

Captain Roosevelt, who was walking from his home at 291 West Seventy-eighth Street to a postal station on the corner, saw the fight from a distance of a few feet, but before he could give aid to the policeman a bullet dropped Marcello. When the policeman saw Roosevelt starting to aid him he shouted to the Captain to guard the fallen robber while he chased the two other robbers. Notwithstanding his wounds Deveny ran on for several blocks, but the thieves managed to elude him and several other policemen who had joined the chase.

Marcello was taken to Bellevue Hospital in a serious condition. He told the police he was a discharged soldier, and had decided to resort to crime after he had been unable to find work. The police disproved this story, and after investigation, asserted that he was a machinist living at 182 East 109th Street. Deveny had his wounds dressed at Roosevelt Hospital and then returned to the police station to report. Captain Roosevelt, as well as the superior police officers, praised the patrolman for his bravery.

WANTS CABLES AND WIRES TURNED BACK

C. H. Mackay Writes Every Congressman Urging Amendment of Moon Resolution.

SAYS SERVICE GETS WORSE

Opposes Increase in Rates and Accuses Burleson of Playing Bell System's Game.

Contending that the Government has advanced no reason for retaining the telegraph, telephone, and cable lines, Clarence H. Mackay, President of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, made public last night a letter which he has sent to every member of Congress, urging them to give careful consideration to the resolution reported by the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and recommending that it be so amended that the telegraph and cable lines be turned back to the companies immediately.

Mr. Mackay asserts in the letter that the telegraph service has been steadily growing worse under Postmaster General Burleson's management, and that he has done nothing but give high compensation to the Western Union and to disturb the morale of the staff of the Postal Telegraph Company. With regard to the retention of the telephone lines, he says that "the purposes are clear, namely, to raise telephone rates, finance crippled telephone companies, and enable the Bell Company to gather in the competing telephone companies."

Mr. Mackay deduces from the written and spoken statements of Theodore N. Vail of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Newcomb Carlton of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and Postmaster General Burleson at the hearing on the Moon resolution, that "they have apparently determined in their minds that the Postmaster General shall keep control as long as possible of the telegraph and telephone lines, especially the latter, in order to give those companies guaranteed Government compensation and to finance them, and most important of all, to increase telephone rates, which increase has been ordered throughout the country. The companies of which I am President are fully capable of conducting their business and financing their present needs and future extensions without any increase in rates.

"If the Postoffice Department should order an increase in rates, (and we believe an increase in rates is unjustifiable at this time,) we shall put those rates into effect under protest and shall allow them to continue only during the time of Government control. In my judgment the lines should be turned back to their owners immediately, as it is not pleasing or conducive to good management to have our business controlled as it is today by orders of the Postmaster General given through our competitors in business."

Referring to Mr. Burleson's statement before the House Committee on Jan. 21, that, "Competition should be eliminated; the period for competition is passed," Mr. Mackay says the public wishes competition to be restored. He holds that the Western Union wishes to advance telegraph rates under the shield of Mr. Burleson's control, but adds that the Postal refuses. He maintains that the Government is losing money daily on its guaranteed compensation to the Western Union, and that the extension of time from the proclamation of peace to Dec. 31, would under these circumstances, be unconstitutional.

With regard to the cable situation he states that international complications have arisen and quotes the following order of the British Government:

"His Majesty's Government do not agree to either company allowing control of its stations, staff, or working in the United Kingdom, by the other company or by any person acting directly or indirectly on behalf of the United States Government."

Mr. Mackay then says that the Postmaster General has done nothing with regard to the cables except to remove officers of the Commercial Cable Company. He concludes with this statement:

"We think it eminently unfair that a committee made up of Union N. Bethell of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, G. M. Yorke of the Western Union Telegraph Company, F. A. Stevenson of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and A. F. Adams of the Kansas City Home Telephone Company, three of them officials of competitor companies, should be authorized to exercise a dominance in our affairs. I submit these facts and views to you, the representatives in Congress of the American people, depending upon your sense of fairness and good judgment."

RED CROSS AID FOR BALKANS

American Commissions Going to Serbia and Other Stricken Countries.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—To meet the immediate needs of war-stricken Balkan countries, where there is greater distress, probably, than in any other part of Europe except Poland, the American Red Cross, after a conference here between Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross, and the American Red Cross Commission for Europe, has dispatched to the Balkans commissions recruited by Lieut. Col. Henry W. Anderson of Richmond, Va. Colonel Anderson will have with him staffs which worked during the hostilities in France and Italy, and will be able to draw upon accumulated supplies until the Allied Powers are able to organize relief measures on an extensive scale. It is hoped to save thousands of lives before the next harvest.

For northern Serbia seventy workers will operate under Lieut. Col. Thomas W. Farnam of Yale University. The personnel for southern Serbia numbers twenty-four workers, commanded by Major J. F. Carew. Transportation in northern Serbia is most difficult, and in some regions is impossible. In southern Serbia the supply of foodstuffs and clothing is very low.

The Greek commission, under command of Lieut. Col. Edward S. Capps of Princeton University, is at work. It numbers seventy-five men. The program which will be followed is based on a supply of 150 tons of necessities weekly on the Greek ships which have been detailed for the use of the American Red Cross.

Great distress prevails in Montenegro, and an American Red Cross unit of forty persons is ready to proceed thither by French ships. The Montenegrin Government has allotted the Red Cross space for 700 tons of supplies. This unit is headed by Major Edwin Grant Dexter.

The commission for Rumania will be headed by Lieutenant H. Gideon Wells of Chicago, with a staff of sixty-five. The members and 3,000 tons of supplies are ready to move to Rumania.

The Red Cross Unit for Albania consists of twenty-five members under Major Glenfred C. Bellis. The supplies for this unit include farm implements and tools.

Dry Goods Association Estimates 125,000 Signed Petition Here Against Luxury Tax Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—There was a report in Senatorial circles today that if the zone system and the luxury tax are kept in the new revenue bill an attempt will be made to repeal them in another bill. It was said that a repeal of the zone system would be placed on the Post Office bill as a rider, and that the luxury tax repeal would be added to another supply measure. This plan has the support of a number of leading Republicans who, it is declared, are expecting to resort to this course in order to bring defeat to the supply measure and thereby assure an extra session of Congress.

Petitions in the city's department, dry goods, and allied stores against the luxury tax provision of the War Revenue bill were signed so rapidly yesterday—the second of the three days' drive against this form of consumption tax—that at the close of the day those in charge of the lists were unable to say even approximately how many shoppers had entered their names on the rolls as protestants.

Representatives of the Retail Dry Goods Association of this city, who received general reports from many stores, said last night that from the best information they had, between 100,000 and 125,000 signatures were obtained yesterday in the stores. This, with the approximately 50,000 names affixed to the petitions on Thursday, was thought to bring the number to not less than 150,000, on a conservative estimate. Some of the dry goods men thought that the maximum number estimated, 175,000 for the two days, might prove nearer correct.

Yesterday's registration of popular condemnation of the luxury taxes was standardized in the stores that practically every shopper had his, or her, attention directed to the lists, with an explanation of why the visitor should sign. Out of the many hundred persons signing the petition in Macy's yesterday only one person, a woman, expressed a willingness to pay the luxury tax. The attendant said that, while this woman said she favored the consumption tax, she was unwilling to state the reason for her attitude. She did not sign.

B. Altman & Co. was thought last night to have led in the registration yesterday against the tax with a record of 500 petitioners, while the day closed with heavy registrations in all dry goods and haberdashery stores.

Telegraphs Senator Simmons.

Lew Hahn, Executive Secretary of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, which comprises 500 of the largest retail dry goods stores in all parts of the country, and which is waging a determined fight in more than 180 cities against the inclusion of the luxury taxes in the law about to be enacted, received a telegram last night from the organization's Washington representative, in which it was stated that the Conference Committee had decided to report the Revenue bill with the luxury taxes, but that after reporting the bill it was agreed to introduce a joint resolution in the Senate and the House for the purpose of eliminating these taxes from the bill.

Acting on the strength of this report, Secretary Hahn sent the following telegram to Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and to Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, both members of the Conference Committee:

> We are informed your committee has informally agreed to report Revenue bill with luxury taxes as they now stand, with the understanding that after reporting a joint resolution will be introduced in Senate and House for the purpose of removing these taxes from bill.
> Merchants and public generally feel luxury taxes should not be permitted to become law. If, however, you cannot find way to eliminate these taxes in committee we desire at once to request you personally to be responsible for the introduction of a resolution to repeal these objectionable taxes.
> Will you please wire your attitude. Public sentiment against luxury taxes rapidly crystallizing.

J. L. Lewis, Acting Secretary of the Photographic Dealers' Association of New York, yesterday sent out an appeal to the trade to do its part to encompass the defeat of the luxury tax, which, in part, was as follows:

> The new tax proposed is to levy, among other luxury articles, a 10 per cent. tax on cameras and photographic films. In view of a possibility of a slump in business, resulting from a large increase in unemployed, it will be an additional hardship on dealers of cameras and photographic supplies to have this additional tax burden.
> You are advised to send a protest to the Hon. Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Washington, D. C.; also your Congressman. Write or telegraph; get as many signatures from your employes and customers as possible, and forward the first lot Saturday night. Follow this up daily thereafter.
> The question of collection is a serious one. The law says plainly and emphatically that it is a consumer's tax, and it cannot be added to the price of the merchandise. This means that on every check there will have to be a separate audit, and that for every day's sales and every day's credits there will have to be separate records kept; that in charge ledgers, where the tax is charged to the customers, it will have to be separated, and will mean a tremendous amount of labor.

The drive for signatures will end tonight, when all stores members of the Retail Dry Goods Association will immediately send their lists to the headquarters of the organization, in the Bush Sales Building, Times Square. Later in the evening W. de S. Trenholm, Secretary of the association, will leave for Washington, where he will present the lists to the conference committee.

Mr. Trenholm desires that all retailers who have obtained the signatures of customers protesting against the enactment of the luxury tax send them to him today so that he can take them to Washington. Stores protesting against the tax, even though not members of the Retail Dry Goods Association, are asked to send in their petitions to Mr. Trenholm so they can be included in the number Secretary Trenholm expects to take with him.

RATIFIES CAMPAIGN TAX.

Long Debate in House Further Delays the Revenue Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Another delay in the preparation of the conference report on the Revenue bill came today when Representative Kitchin declined to attend the conferences and brought up in the House the section of the bill dealing with a tax on campaign contributions. He assured the Senate conferees that he had promised to permit the House to vote on that section before the House conferees acted upon it in conference.

The debate in the House occupied nearly the entire afternoon and prevented the conferees from sitting. Representative Garner of Texas, after making a speech in favor of the section, moved that the House concur in the Senate amendment. This was defeated by a vote of 61 to 244. The section which was placed in the bill against the Senate Finance Committee's protests, by Senator Thomas of Colorado, provides that there should be a tax of 100 per cent. on all election contributions over $500 made to the last campaign and all future campaigns.

The majority in the House objected to the retroactive aspect of the bill, but led by Representative Rucker of Missouri, Chairman of the Committee on Elections, the Democrats insisted that all contributions in the future should be subject to such a tax. An amendment offered by Mr. Rucker to that effect was adopted by a vote of 191 to 116 and the conferees were instructed to insist upon the House's action.

Senate conferees said tonight they would not agree to such a tax, and if they maintain their position there will be another delay in agreement on the bill. It is generally believed that the bill cannot be completed until early next week, if then. As the conferees see an end of their labors the protests against the bill are accumulating. Thousands of protests were received today by the conferees from merchants and merchants' associations to the luxury tax and periodical publishers are urging strongly that the zone system be abolished.

Senator Penrose said tonight that the conferees had not agreed to the zone system for second class mails and were still hoping to induce Mr. Kitchin to agree to amending the section and accept the Senate amendment of that section.

SPEED FILM TAX PROTEST.

Petitions Being Hastened to Washington Before Bill Is Passed.

With the report of the Conference Committee on the Revenue bill expected today or soon after, moving picture people are racing against time in their opposition to the proposed 5 per cent. tax on film rentals, which, according to those leading the fight, will cost each exhibitor from $15 to $50 a week.

Petitions urging the committee to eliminate the tax from the bill are being circulated all over the country and hastened to Washington. Representatives of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which has charge of the campaign, said yesterday that, if they could delay the report forty-eight hours, the committee would be flooded with hundreds of thousands of signatures which would convince them of the unpopularity of the intended levy. The association's offices were busy until late last night issuing the blank petitions, a third edition of which had to be printed to meet the demand, according to report.

REOPENS NEWSPRINT CASE.

Trade Commission to Have a Price Hearing on Feb. 11.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—At the request of the Attorney General the Federal Trade Commission has agreed to reopen the newsprint paper price agreement, reached last Spring, and has set Feb. 11 as the date for a preliminary hearing. The commission said in a statement today that the Attorney General had brought to its attention the fact that newspaper publishers, in accordance with the terms of the agreement, had presented a claim that lowering costs of production, beginning about Aug. 1, 1918, entitled them to a reduction of prices and had asked for a reconsideration.

The award was made with the consent of the publishers and all of the principal manufacturers in order to stabilize prices during the war.

A petition of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association for a revision of newsprint prices states that an investigation made by the Canadian Paper Control Tribunal brought out the fact that production costs ran from $2 to $8 a ton lower than those on which American present costs are based. These lower costs, the petition asserts, prevailed during the Spring and Summer of 1918, and entitle publishers to a readjustment of the prices paid during the period.

The Federal Trade Commission, at the conclusion of its first investigation, fixed a base price of $3.10 a hundred pounds for newsprint, to apply to April 1, 1918, and to continue for the duration of the war unless otherwise readjusted. By a Federal Circuit Court decision the price was raised to $3.50; as a result of a decision of the National War Labor Board increasing the pay of workers in the industry generally, the price was made $3.63¼ beginning May 1, and later increased wages awarded to railroad workers and consequent increase in rail freight rates caused the commission to fix the price from July 1 at $3.75¼, where it now stands.

FRENCH DECORATED DERBY.

Few on This Side Knew He Received the War Cross.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Jan. 31.—Lieut. Colonel Richard Derby, son-in-law of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who has been in France for eighteen months, came here a few hours this afternoon. He was accompanied by his wife and they visited the grave of the former President.

That Colonel Derby has been decorated with the War Cross by the French Government was known only to his wife and her family here until he arrived. Few of the officers who came with him on the steamship Martha Washington, which arrived at Newport News yesterday, knew of his decoration. He was extremely reticent concerning his war experiences, and his only comment was that he received the medal while American and French forces were fighting together on the Toul front. It is known that many times he went into the trenches to treat wounded men.

Dr. Derby and his wife will stay in New York City for several days and then go to Aiken, S. C., where his two children are.

SENDS SPEEDER TO JAIL.

Dr. Herman Siedler Had Been Convicted Five Times.

Dr. Herman Siedler, 34 years old, of 1,258 Fifty-first Street, Brooklyn, arraigned in the Adams Street Police Court yesterday, charged with operating his automobile across Manhattan Bridge at the rate of thirty miles an hour, was fined $100 and sentenced to ten days in the City Prison by Magistrate Folwell.

According to the police record Dr. Siedler has been arrested and convicted five times for speeding and has been fined from $25 to $100 for each offense. After looking over the doctor's record, Magistrate Folwell said to him:

"Well, what am I going to do with you? I have your record here."

"I may as well plead guilty, I suppose," Dr. Siedler replied.

"Yes, you certainly might," said the Judge. "You surely are a chronic speeder. What seems to be the reason for your being arrested and fined so many times?"

"I've never had a speedometer on my machine," the physician confessed.

The Magistrate then imposed sentence and the prisoner was taken to Raymond Street Jail to serve his ten days.

BUTTER AND EGGS LOWER.

Small Decline Shown in Prices at Washington Market.

A drop in the retail prices of eggs and butter from Thursday's price was shown in the retail price list of commodities at the Washington Market, Washington and Vesey Streets, made public by Commissioner of Public Markets Jonathan C. Day yesterday. Tub butter was quoted at 58 cents and print butter at 60 cents, a decrease of 2 cents a pound on both grades. Fresh Western eggs were quoted at 61 cents, a drop of 1 cent, and nearby fresh eggs at 60 cents, also a drop of 1 cent. Prices of all other commodities remained practically unchanged.

JONAS COMMENDED; URGED NOT TO QUIT

Offers Resignation as Brooklyn Victory Committee Head; in Riegelmann's Hands.

PROMISES TO FIGHT HEARST

Fellow-Committeemen Praise Him for Refusal to Withdraw Invitation to J. M. Beck.

Nineteen members of the Executive Committee of the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee met yesterday and voted unanimously to commend Nathan S. Jonas, the Chairman, for his refusal to cancel the invitation to James M. Beck to speak at the meeting in the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Wednesday last because of an agitation started by persons in sympathy with William Randolph Hearst, a subcommittee Chairman on the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops.

Borough President Riegelmann, who was one of the spokesmen in the demand that Mr. Beck should not be a speaker at the meeting, was censured in the resolution, and was the only member of the committee present not voting.

After the agitation failed to cause the withdrawal of Mr. Beck as a speaker because of the belief that he would attack the loyalty of some members of the Mayor's Committee the efforts of the same persons were directed against Borough President Riegelmann and Mr. Jonas to force the resignation of Mr. Jonas as Chairman of the Victory Committee.

Borough President Riegelmann, who appointed the committee members, was urged to ask the resignation of Mr. Jonas. Attacks were made in the Hearst newspapers upon John H. McCooey, the Democratic leader in Brooklyn, in attempts to force him to use his influence to oust Chairman Jonas, and Mr. Jonas himself was called upon to quit the committee.

Reads His Resignation.

Because of his desire that politics be kept out of the greeting to the returning Brooklyn soldiers, as well as out of the plans to erect a memorial to those fallen in France, Mr. Jonas yesterday read his resignation to the Executive Committee when it assembled in the Chamber of Commerce. It was directed to Mr. Riegelman, as well as to the Executive Committee, and Mr. Jonas explained that he read it to the committee before it was transmitted to the Borough President because other letters written to him demanding cancellation of the Beck invitation had been made public before they reached him. Mr. Jonas's letter said in part:

"On Jan. 28 and 29 you, Mr. President, addressed three letters to me, the latter one just prior to the mass meeting; we also had two conferences on those days, one in my office and one in yours, all appertaining to the one subject, namely, the right of free speech and of fair play.

"I have not heretofore officially answered these communications as the rapid trend of events made this practically unnecessary. I now quote from one of your letters as follows: 'The Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee is the official Brooklyn committee appointed by me in my official capacity.' The intimation here conveyed as well as in our conferences indicated your embarrassment at my remaining the Chairman of your official committee because I did not choose to do your bidding and for other obvious reasons.

"A few weeks ago I publicly stated that if friction arose between us I should resign. This I did not do before, as I would not retire under fire or in the midst of discussions where principles so vital to the life and good name of the community were involved.

"I now tender my resignation, to take effect immediately, and so that you, Mr. President, may have the privilege and opportunity of appointing as Chairman of your official committee one who can work with you more harmoniously and pleasantly than I now find myself able to do. When you honored me originally with the appointment it was only planned to raise funds for a separate reception and welcome home to our boys. This has been accomplished, and the funds are now in hand for that purpose.

"As I do not court publicity, do not desire to be involved in political quarrels, and as the condition of my health renders it imperative that I have an opportunity for rest and recuperation, I must ask to be relieved of my duties at once, but with this assurance on my part, that I shall be glad to advise with and assist my successor should such service be desired, as well as to do all in my power to aid in bringing to a successful conclusion our efforts to honor our living and dead heroes.

His Patriotism Praised.

As soon as Mr. Jonas had finished reading his letter a resolution was offered by Alexander M. White praising Mr. Jonas for his attitude in refusing to submit to those demanding the withdrawal of Mr. Beck and calling upon him to remain as Chairman of the committee. The same resolution also praised the patriotism of Mr. Beck. It was adopted unanimously, Borough President Riegelmann not voting because his name was mentioned. Other motions assuring Chairman Jonas of the support of the committee if he consented to remain also were adopted unanimously.

In reply Mr. Jonas, who was greatly affected by the action of the committee, said his resignation already was in the hands of the Borough President, but that he would be willing to continue the work and withdraw his resignation if he had assurances from the Borough President that no political influence would be exerted in the affairs of the organization.

Mr. Riegelmann said he would take the resignation under consideration, as well as the proposals made by Mr. Jonas and the members of the committee. He refused to express any opinion in the controversy or give any intimation upon his probable action.

Chairman Jonas said he could not have asked the withdrawal of Mr. Beck without "stultifying myself," and he asserted that he would rather have been beaten to death by the disturbers at the mass meeting than to have permitted Mr. Beck to leave the hall without speaking.

He read to the executive committee an editorial from the Brooklyn edition of Hearst's New York Evening Journal, asserting that there had been cries of "Throw those Irish out," when the police ejected James E. Sullivan and Edmund O'Connor, Commissioner of Records in Kings County, from the Academy of Music when they rose to protest against the presence of Mr. Beck. Chairman Jonas pointed out that the testimony of witnesses and the stenographic report of the meeting showed that no such remark had been made by anybody, although a man in the gallery shouted "We don't want any Sein Fein here."

Mr. Jonas said he saw in the editorial an effort to stir up race prejudice to hamper the work of the Victory Committee, and he declared that "Hearst was a menace to the community."

Ready to Fight Hearst.

"Some one must answer Hearst and I will if I can, even if it costs me my life," declared Chairman Jonas. "If the Borough President wishes me to remain Chairman of this committee I will stay. I will fight Hearst and I will be as radical as he ever dared to be. If Mr. Riegelmann will keep the politics out of the committee and the members will stay with me, I will see it through for the honor of our soldiers."

Several other members of the Executive Committee made speeches praising Mr. Jonas for his attitude in support of Mr. Beck and also criticising Hearst. Meier Steinbrink, the lawyer, said that "any one who would attack the loyalty of Mr. Beck was insane or a rogue." He said that while Mr. Beck was preaching the duty of humanity after the murder of Captain Fryatt and Edith Cavell others who attacked him now were spreading German propaganda in this country. He said the entire Executive Committee would quit if Mr. Jonas's resignation were accepted.

Members of the committee pointed out also that the editorial in the Hearst newspaper also had made a veiled attack upon Borough President Riegelmann. The editorial said that when Mr. Jonas was aiding a campaign for the election of Edward Lazansky as Supreme Court Justice he thought that "the Irish names of O'Connor and Sullivan are just as good as the German name of Riegelmann." The editorial concluded, in speaking of the Irish:

"And they never fall down on the job, Mr. Jonas, and they never try to use a great patriotic cause for a sordid personal end. Mr. Jonas, you and Mr. Riegelmann have much to learn in matters of loyalty from the Irish."

O'Connor, a former Vice Chairman in the Hearst Independence League, resigned yesterday from the Victory Committee. He charged that he had been "brutally assaulted" when he was ejected from the meeting in the Academy of Music. He also criticised the Borough President for not being present at the meeting.

PLAN TO AID FRENCH WOMEN

Leaders Expect to Found Hotels and Clubs for Workers and Students.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—The women of France, aided by the practical advice and guidance of their American sisters, have undertaken a big program to promote the welfare of French workingwomen. During the last two days a conference on the subject has been held under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. It was attended by French women who are leaders of organizations, such as Mme. Jules Siegfried, Jr.; Mme. Pichon, Baroness Wattville, and Mme. Landry, and a score of American women.

Several plans were adopted to meet the needs of French womanhood arising out of the war. They provide for model homes for employed women in Paris and in big French industrial centres; women's hotels at the chief French ports where they may wait for vessels to sail; hotels for French women students; houses for philanthropic and civic work, and clubs after the style of the Women's University Club and the Colony Club of New York.

In these plans Miss Constance Clark of Pasadena, Cal.; Miss Edna Sandlin of Montgomery, Ala., and Miss Young of Charlotte, N. C., are taking an active part. Mrs. Robert Lansing and Mrs. William G. Sharp were in attendance at the sessions. The former, in opening one of the meetings, said:

"The war has brought the women of the allied nations together. Because we have suffered and worked together, we must not lose this sisterhood now that peace has come."

27th Petitions Against Hearst.

Army officers returning last night on the transport Adriatic said that a petition was being circulated secretly among the men of the 27th (Empire) Division, composed of the old New York National Guard, protesting against William Randolph Hearst being a member of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops to greet them on their return home and provide a public welcome after their arrival.

END PRICE-FIXING FOR FOODSTUFFS

Restrictions in Margins of Profit Removed on All Except Cottonseed Products and Eggs.

GIVE WARNING TO DEALERS

Profiteering and Unfair Practices Will Be Punished Under the Food Control Act.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Removal of all restrictions on margins of profit on foodstuffs, except cottonseed products and eggs, and cancelation of most license requirements on importers and distributors, effective tomorrow, were announced today by the Food Administration on authority of a proclamation signed by President Wilson at Paris. The following only remain under license:

Importers and distributors of wheat, corn, rye, oats, barley, and elevators and warehouses storing these grains and rice; importers, manufacturers, and distributors of fresh, canned, or cured beef, pork, or mutton, cottonseed, cottonseed products, lard, butter, and eggs, and sugar; importers and manufacturers of rice, rice flour, wheat flour, and wheat mill feeds, and cold storage warehousemen.

The margins still allowed are: Retail cold storage and fresh eggs, 7 to 8 cents a dozen; cottonseed lard substitutes at wholesale, 1¼ to 2 cents a pound on more than fifty-pound packages, 8 to 10 per cent. on less than fifty-pound packages, and 5 to 6 cents and 18 to 22 per cent. at retail. Wholesale margins on eggs differ according to the number of services performed by the wholesaler or jobber.

In addition to regulations canceled by the proclamation, all remaining special regulations governing manufacturers and distributors of butter were repealed.

In making its announcement the Food Administration warned dealers that the provisions of the Food Control Act prohibiting profiteering and unfair practices would be rigidly enforced.

This action by the President virtually brings to an end the activities of the Food Administration, except for the continued control of the excepted commodities, which, officials explained, is necessary either because of contractual obligations of the Government or because of a determination to maintain stabilized prices. It was predicted by these officials that most remaining functions would cease before March 1.

The Board of Managers of the New York Produce Exchange, at a special meeting yesterday, passed a resolution setting forth the position of the exchange regarding official price-fixing. In the opinion of the Board of Managers, a reduction in price of the food staples is the most vital factor in bringing about a lower scale in the cost of living, which must take place if there is to be any readjustment in wages as a result of the change from war to peace conditions. The resolution, as passed at the special meeting, is as follows:

"Be it resolved, That the policy of this exchange is against any further Government price-fixing or control of foodstuffs, beyond the point of a just and equitable adjustment of existing Government obligations, in which consideration should be given to the rights of all classes, both producers and consumers, and that the exchange hereby empowers its officers or other authorized representatives to assist in any necessary constructive work, legal or otherwise, to hasten the return of business to its normal channels."

Edward Flash, Jr., President of the exchange, announced yesterday that the organization will send a delegation to Washington to attend the hearings before the House Agricultural Committee on the Food Administration's bill asking authorization of $1,250,000,000 to make good the Government's guarantee of $2.26 a bushel on wheat.

'DIAMOND T.' SENT TIPS TO PACKERS

Senate Committee Fails to Trace Authorship of Mysterious Letter.

TOLD OF INQUIRY ON MEAT

Trade Commission Offers to Give Names of Witnesses to the House Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—While unsuccessful efforts were being made before the Senate Agriculture Committee today to develop the identity of a person who sent to Swift & Co. advance information regarding Government activities affecting the meat packing industry, the House Interstate Commerce Committee was informed by the Federal Trade Commission that it would furnish the names of witnesses upon whose testimony it had made charges of collusion among the five big packing firms.

Louis F. Swift, President Swift & Co., and Henry Veeder, counsel for the company, were questioned before the Senate Committee about a writer referred to at the hearing as "Diamond T." One letter from Thomas F. Logan of Washington and another letter and several memoranda unsigned, but purporting to be from "Diamond T.," relating to plans of the Federal Trade Commission and the Food Administration, were read by Francis J. Heney, who was conducting the cross-examination of the witnesses for the committee. Both Mr. Swift and Mr. Veeder said they could not recall having previously seen the "Diamond T." correspondence.

"Diamond T" Letter Quoted.

This designation of the correspondence was given by reason of the fact that the one letter had a "T" inside a diamond at the top of the page. This letter was dated Washington, June 18, 1917, and told of plans for an investigation of food prices. It was marked "Private," and bore the stamp "Louis F. Swift," with a date two days later.

At the top was the notation, "Information received by Mr. Veeder this morning from Diamond T." The initials of six officials of Swift & Co. at the top indicated that copies had been sent to them.

The letter said:

"At a meeting of the commission today Mr. Davies was placed in charge of the meat-packing end of the food investigation, Mr. Colver in charge of wheat and wheat products, and the members allotted other phases of the inquiry.

"This is under the resolution and appropriation recently passed by Congress.

"The work is to be done as planned in conjunction with the Hoover Food Administration. Mr. Davies will shortly wire for a conference in Chicago. He will outline the procedure and ask for assistance. There will be enough delay to give plenty of time for readiness.

"It might be suggested that you have in readiness everything bearing on high prices and their causes, even though it should not be precisely what is desired. With your knowledge you should be able to give some good leads and suggestions for further inquiry.

"Mr. McManus could be helpful at this end if he could get back immediately. Exchange of telegrams inadvisable. Please destroy this immediately."

"Hurley" Written at Bottom.

At the bottom of the letter written in ink and inclosed in a rough square was the name "Hurley."

"Who wrote the name 'Hurley' there?" asked Mr. Heney.

"It looks a little like my handwriting," Mr. Swift responded.

"When you got something of that sort were you in the habit of consulting Mr. Hurley?" asked Senator Kenyon of Iowa.

"No. I might have written 'Armour' or 'Smith' on that letter just as well," said the witness.

"Isn't that the kind of information you paid Mr. Logan to get for you?" continued the Iowa Senator.

Mr. Swift denied this.

"Do you know of any letter in which Mr. Logan advised you about what went on at the White House?"

Mr. Swift said he did not.

A letter from Logan to Veeder was then read. In it the future activities of the Food Administration were detailed several days in advance of the announcement that a Food Administrator was to be appointed. Reference was made to the alleged antagonism of Secretary Houston to the appointment of Herbert C. Hoover and to the "mad scramble for power" among Cabinet members.

Mr. Heney read telegrams designed to show that buyers for the five packers did not go on the stock markets until late in the day "to keep prices down."

"But meanwhile other buyers would buy all the stock and we wouldn't get any," suggested Mr. Swift.

Mr. Heney contended that the big packers bought 90 per cent. of the total sales everywhere, and Mr. Swift said he thought it was fair "to buy as cheaply as possible, with the packers making such a small margin of profit."

"I don't know whether you make such a small margin of profit," replied Mr. Heney. "Our experts say your books are kept so that it is impossible to say how much your costs amount to."

Mr. Swift testified that his company was interested in a company manufacturing bumping posts for railroads.

"Swift & Co. in the past have accepted rebates from railroads, haven't they?" asked Mr. Heney.

Mr. Swift said they had done so at a time when it was legal.

"The bumping post business would furnish a very convenient method of getting rebates from railroads, wouldn't it?" asked Mr. Heney. He referred to a letter from A. R. Fay, Swift's traffic manager, regarding the purchase of bumping posts by railroads.

Mr. Swift said that this was an exceptional interest and not a general policy.

Logan Paid From Veeder Fund.

Payment of the $6,000 yearly salary of Mr. Logan as publicity adviser for Swift & Co. was made from the expense account of Mr. Veeder, Mr. Swift said, and his name did not appear on the books of Swift & Co. The witness said Veeder was paid $71,000 a year, of which about $25,000 represented his salary as counsel, while the balance was to cover "office expenses."

Mr. Swift testified that he had called up Mr. Logan personally, and that he knew of the latter's connection with The Philadelphia Inquirer and Leslie's Weekly, but not with other publications.

Asks if Tumulty Was Meant.

When Mr. Swift concluded Mr. Veeder was called to testify. He said he was unable to say who had written the "Diamond T" letter.

"It may have been anonymous," he said, "or it may have come from our office in Washington, but I doubt very much if it was 'Tom' Logan who wrote that letter."

Mr. Heney contended that the letter could not have been anonymous, as reference to "Diamond T" was noted in other correspondence.

"Did the 'T' mean Tumulty?" asked Senator Norris of Nebraska.

"I don't know what it meant," replied Mr. Veeder. "I don't think it meant Tumulty."

While Mr. Swift was being questioned earlier in the day by Mr. Heney, Mr. Veeder and John J. Heeley, his assistant, were threatened with banishment from the committee room because of interruptions they made to questions.

Colver to Furnish Names.

Soon after the House Committee met today it received a letter from William B. Colver, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, saying that the commission would gladly submit the names of witnesses demanded by the committee yesterday, together with all other information and evidence it had obtained during the investigation of the meat industry. He said the committee would not need to pass a resolution to get what it desired.

Charges that the packers were attempting to drive the wholesale grocers of the country out of business were made to the committee by William F. Bode, President of the Reid-Murdock Company of Chicago. He said that the packers had become a great menace to the wholesalers because they obtained special privileges from the railroads which enabled them to "smother competition."

Mr. Bode said that the packers controlled the cheese market of the world and had enormous sales of countless other products. He urged that legislation be enacted which would prohibit the railroads from giving the packers preferred service.

CITY SEEKS TO JOIN GAS SUIT

Consolidated Co. Opposes It in Argument in Federal Court.

Federal Judge Mayer heard argument yesterday on an application of the city, through Corporation Counsel Burr, to intervene in the suit of the Consolidated Gas Company to have the eighty-cent gas law declared invalid on the ground that it was confiscatory. The defendants named in the action are the Public Service Commission, the Attorney General, and the District Attorney, against whom an injunction is sought restraining them from seeking to enforce the law.

The company sets forth in its complaint that in the year ended Oct. 31 last its net income was only $99,241.65, which represented a return of 6 per cent. on $1,654,027, while its investment in the business was $69,697,700.

Mr. Burr told the court it was vital that the city's voice should be heard in the controversy, that the plaintiff was the most highly favored of any similar company in the world, and that the city was a large consumer of gas at an agreed rate of 75 cents a thousand cubic feet. John A. Carver, for the company, argued that the city had no personal interest in the suit, and was seeking to become a mischief maker and a busybody. He stated that the real representative of the city's interest was the Public Service Commission, one of the defendants. Godfrey Goldmark, chief counsel for the commission, welcomed the intervention of the city, as did representatives of the other two defendants. Mr. Goldmark said the company's position in court was doubtful, because it had been supplying its customers with gas of only fifteen and sixteen candle-power, when the law from which it is trying to be freed fixes the candle-power at twenty-two.

Decision was reserved.

$38,182,664 W. S. S. Sold Here.

The sale of War Savings Stamps in New York in 1918 reached a grand total of $38,182,664.84, according to an announcement made yesterday at the War Savings Committee headquarters. The Insurance Committee tops the list for the value of stamps sold with a total of $9,314,399, while department and retail dry goods stores came next with $2,589,051. Barbers sold more than $1,250,000.

CUT IN CARGO RATES WIDELY EXTENDED

Fifty Per Cent. Reduction to Australian, South African, and Far Eastern Ports.

MEETS ACTION BY BRITISH

Blanket Licenses Now for Great Majority of Shipments, Except to Enemy Countries.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Further steps which will make it possible for American shipping and commercial interests to compete with the interests of Great Britain and other foreign nations were taken to-day by the United States Shipping Board and the War Trade Board.

The Shipping Board, which had earlier in the week announced cuts in rates for trade with European ports which met the 66 2-3 per cent. rate reductions provided for British tonnage, to-day made heavy reductions in cargo rates from North Atlantic ports to Australia, South Africa and the Far Eastern ports. It is understood that these cuts were ordered as a result of information that similar action was to be taken by the British. The reductions ordered are about fifty per cent. of the old rates.

Today's developments, it is predicted, will give an impetus to all trades. The rates have now been lowered both by Great Britain and the United States to something approximating the pre-war levels.

Schedules of New Rates.

Here are the new rates from North Atlantic ports to Australia and South Africa:

Australia, New Zealand—Naked steel, $15 ton; packed steel, $18 ton; rough measure cargo $25 ton; fine measure cargo, $30 ton.

Beiba—Weight cargo, $23 ton; measured cargo, $30 ton.

Above rates apply per ton of 2,240 pounds, or 40 cubic feet at ship's option, and are effective immediately.

The new cargo rates from North Atlantic ports to the Far East are:

Twenty dollars per ton for close weight cargo, $25 per ton for all other cargo.

The rates are made effective Feb. 1, and will apply to usual ports of call, including Hong Kong, Shanghai, Kobe, Yokohama, Manila, and Singapore.

Rates previously in effect to the Far East have been $40 and $45 per ton.

The War Trade Board explained that broadened scope would be given to the American exporter for the conduct of his business by the simplification of procedure and the relaxation of restrictions. This simplification in most cases takes the form of easing the exporter's task of procuring export licenses.

"The procedure by which the exporter was forced to procure export licenses during the war," an announcement read, "was vitally necessary while actual hostilities were in progress, but at the same time in many instances it was admittedly cumbersome. The present policy and tendency of the War Trade Board is to relieve the exporter of any cumbersome procedure in the process of licensing as soon as it becomes possible.

"The present tendency in the relaxation of export restrictions is to transfer as many kinds of export shipments as is possible from the first class to the second. In other words, present policies aim to do away with individual licensing whenever possible and to substitute for this the system of licensing governed by the commodity in question or the country of destination.

Other developments today included an announcement by the War Trade Board that, after consultation with the Food Administration, it had been decided to consider applications to export butter and adulterated butter (including renovated and red butter) to all countries except Great Britain, France, and Italy. Butter exportations to the three countries specifically named will continue to be made by the Allied Provisions Export Commission acting on behalf of the Governments of these countries.

"As has been previously announced by the board," the statement reads, "the mild weather has already been the cause of releasing shipments of fodder for export to northern neutrals of Europe. And the relaxation of restrictions against the exportation of butter is further evidence of the part that the favorable weather conditions are playing in the alleviation of conditions caused by the European shortage of foodstuffs."

Coincident with this statement came an announcement that the board had received word from the French Ministry of Food that it had agreed to remove the present governmental restrictions on the importation of milk and fats. The War Trade Board will now consider applications for these two commodities.

Rates Cut by British Companies.

Additional cuts of 42 and 43 per cent. in present international shipping rates were announced last night by Funch, Edye & Co., Inc., of New York, representing the British South African lines, the Commonwealth and Dominion Line, Ltd., and the Cunard Line, Australasian service. These cuts, which affect South African and Australasian trade, show reductions of about 60 and 66 per cent. over pre-armistice prices.

The new South African prices quoted are: To Cape Town, $20 per ton for iron and steel and $27 per ton for general cargo, all rates per ton of 40 cubic feet, or 2,240 pounds, ship's option, freight prepaid. To the following ports a 60-cent differential is added in the order in which they appear: Algoa Bay, East London, Port Natal, Delagoa Bay, and Beira. Beira shipments are also subject to an additional 30 cents per ship's ton landing charge.

To Australasian ports the new rates are: $15 per ton naked weight, $18 per ton packed weight, $25 per ton rough general cargo, and $30 per ton fine general cargo, all rates per ton of 2,240 pounds, with ship's option of a 40 cubic foot ton on the latter two.

To Far Eastern ports—Kobe, Shanghai, Hongkong, Manila, and Singapore—$20 per ton of 2,240 pounds of 40 cubic feet, ship option, on weight cargo, on iron and steel; $25 per ton on general cargoes, same conditions, in pieces or packages not exceeding 6,600 pounds.

In announcing the new prices R. H. Goodwin, Treasurer of the company, stated that the reductions were in no sense being made to create friction with the United States Shipping Board, but in order to restore shipping to a business basis. Shippers, in general, he said, knew that prices must come down, and had been holding up shipments until the break.

Special Transaction Permits Shipment to Colombia.

Engagement of $1,000,000 gold bullion for export to Colombia was announced yesterday. The gold is to be taken from the local Assay Office, and the operation is being handled by the Mercantile Bank of the Americas. This is not an exchange operation, but a transaction of special nature. The Government of Colombia recently sent here a large shipment of gold ore and dust to be refined.

In banking circles, when it was learned that the metal was to be moved out of the country, there was some speculation as to whether the Federal Reserve Board had raised its restrictions on exports. In well-informed quarters, however, it was stated most emphatically that it had not. The attitude of the board, it was said, is to continue the restrictions at least until after the peace treaty is signed.

The mint at Philadelphia yesterday reported a withdrawal for shipment of $3,000,000 in silver bullion. This, it is understood, is to go to India. The withdrawal makes a total of $26,800,000 for the month, and brings the shipments since last April up to $113,000,000.

Will Labor's Mighty Forces Form a New Party?

"Third Parties" in this country have generally come to grief, but the scope of the new movement to organize "hand and brain" workers into a political unit and its appearance in a winter of unrest and discontent convince observers that history is likely to forget to repeat herself in this instance. Samuel Gompers, a consistent opponent of the Labor-party idea, pleaded with New York leaders on the eve of his departure for Europe not to join the new movement, but within a week, as The Evening Post, (New York) notes, a New York Central Federated Union, the Brooklyn Central Labor Union, and the Woman's Trade Union League had met in convention and created the most formidable of the local party organizations.

In an enlightening article in this week's LITERARY DIGEST—February 1st— all the particulars of this new political movement are shown. The platform adopted in New York is also presented. A new political labor party directly affects millions of men and women in this country. Don't fail to read about this latest development in our industrial life.

AMERICAN ACES HERE FROM FRANCE

Rickenbacher, Credited with Downing 26 German Airplanes, Arrives on the Adriatic.

OTHER NOTED FLIERS BACK

Major Meissmer of Brooklyn and Capt. Campbell of California Among 8,633 Arriving Troops.

Three transports arrived yesterday from France—the Minnekahda, Adriatic, and Siboney—bringing a total of 8,633 officers and men, including a large number of aviators, in addition to infantry, artillery, engineers, and ordnance troops.

The Siboney brought 3,336 troops of the 65th Regiment, United States Coast Artillery; the Ammunition Train of the 8th Division, destined to Camp Taylor, Ky.; Batteries C and D of the 339th Field Artillery, and headquarters detachment of the 37th Brigade, Coast Artillery. She anchored for the night in the North River, as it was too dark to land the troops in Hoboken. The other two transports landed at Pier 59, North River, at the foot of West Eighteenth Street.

Among the 2,559 troops on the Adriatic, which docked shortly after 6 o'clock, were ninety-five casual officers, who complained at not being allowed to go ashore. Colonel George Montgomery, a regular army officer, who was formerly in command of Frankford Arsenal, in Philadelphia, was the spokesman, when, surrounding Captain Joplin of the Debarkation Office at Hoboken, in the lounge of the Adriatic, they clamored for leave.

Officer Allowed to Land.

A Major, whose wife and baby were reported as being dangerously ill, was allowed to go ashore to telephone to the house, and the others had to remain on board and will go to Hoboken this morning.

The Adriatic brought over three of the best-known aces from the American aviation forces in France—Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, who has twenty-six German machines to his credit officially; Major James Meissner of Brooklyn, who downed seven airplanes, and Captain Douglas Campbell of California, who succeeded in shooting down six of the enemy airplanes.

Captain Rickenbacker said that he had been away twenty months and finished up with the Army of Occupation at Coblenz, Germany. The Captain, while he had no definite plans after being released from the army, made it very plain that he would not re-enter the automobile business. He said that flying was far more interesting and fascinating than motoring.

"I managed to bring down twenty-six enemy planes officially," Captain Rickenbacher continued, "according to the French system, which means that each feat must be recorded by at least two other observers besides myself. I do not know how many others I sent down, because in the heat of an aerial combat when one has to fight single-handed against five or six of the enemy planes it is difficult to see what becomes of a foe after you have hit him.

"All my flying was done in French machines, chiefly the Spad, which is very fast. I never used a Liberty motor. My most thrilling fight occurred at the end of May last year when I was flying over the German lines in the Lorraine sector with the idea of going toward Metz. I sighted three German planes rising from an aerodrome and flying toward the American lines. At that time I was up 15,000 feet and flying at 160 miles.

"When the German's observers posted below inside the lines saw what I was trying to do, they fired their anti-aircraft guns to warn their pilots that they were going to be attacked and they immediately turned and made back for their aerodrome. To chase them I had to drop 3,000 feet and alter my course. By the time I got down to their level another German plane had come to their rescue and was jockeying for a position to shoot me down. Before he succeeded I got him and sent him down inside his own lines.

"The three other machines had opened fire on me, and it was rather exciting while the fight lasted. I managed to send down another enemy machine, and one of the remaining two hit my machine and sent me toward the earth at a rate that almost took my breath away, but I managed to save myself within the American lines."

Attacked by Seven Airplanes.

Captain Rickenbacker had another lucky escape at Château-Thierry in June when he was attacked by seven big enemy planes. He said that he dropped at the rate of 300 miles an hour, and the sudden change of atmospheric conditions almost overpowered him so that he fell to within 600 feet of the ground and expected to be dashed into small fragments, but he managed to save himself in time and slid to the ground inside the American lines. He found that the German shooters had hit him in the left hand and arm but was not seriously hurt. Captain Rickenbacker has the D. S. C., the French War Cross and palms, and has been cited nine times.

Major Meissner, son of Carl A. Meissner, of 45 Lenox Road, Brooklyn, also won the D. S. C. and the bronze oakleaf for extraordinary heroism for attacking four enemy planes last May at an altitude of 12,000 feet, when he sent down one of them in flames, crippled another, and had a part of one of his own wings knocked off. He was under a heavy fire of the anti-aircraft batteries, but managed to make a successful landing inside the American lines.

Captain Douglas Campbell, son of Professor W. W. Campbell of Lick Observatory, California, who has six enemy planes to his credit, was the first American trained ace to receive recognition in the war. One of his most thrilling fights was with Eddie Rickenbacher on May 28, when they were attacked by six German planes and got two of them and drove the others back to their aerodromes. He won the War Cross for bringing down a German plane single-handed when he was attacked by three machines in April.

Lieutenant Baer, who spent eight months in a German prison camp, was shot down in a fight with four enemy planes at 12,000 feet. His machine was damaged, and he was slightly wounded.

Another officer returning on the Adriatic was Major Frederick Palmer, Chief Press Censor of the American forces in France, who later was attached to the staff of General Pershing. He said that the army as a whole had fought splendidly. The 27th Division was among those who had covered themselves with glory in the attacks on the Hindenburg line and in the Argonne, he said.

Civilians on Adriatic.

In addition to her troops the Adriatic had a big list of civilians including the Duchess of Manchester and the Countess Granard, who said that they had come over to see their families in America and would return on the Adriatic March 15; Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, returning from a second mission for the Committee on Public Information; Mrs. William B. Corey, formerly Mabelle Gilman the actress; Mrs. F. W. Whitridge and her daughter, Miss Joan Whitridge, who came from a visit to their country house in Scotland, and Mrs. Vernon Castle. Mrs. Castle said she had been to France to dance for the soldiers in the camps.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, who went to Europe in connection with the Zionist movement, said that the success of the project was assured. "England has pledged herself," he continued, "and President Wilson and Colonel House may be said to be the advocates of a Jewish Palestine. France with Alsace-Lorraine restored to her will not bar the movement."

Another passenger was Sir Horace Plunkett, who presided over the Dublin Convention in 1918. He said that he had no present program, but had come to New York to listen and learn something here of the attitude toward the Irish situation. He will remain in New York until Monday and then go to Washington and Boston. Sir Horace added that he was not attached to any party. He said that he hoped Ireland would obtain some practical form of self-government before the Peace Conference ended.

1,387 MORE ARMY CASUALTIES ANNOUNCED

Reported Total Now Up to 227,965; 129 Dead and 33 Missing in Latest Lists

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The War Department gave out four army casualty lists today, which contained 1,387 names, bringing the total for the army up to 222,206. No Marine Corps casualty list was issued today, but the total previously reported for that arm of the service was 5,759. The total for army and Marine Corps is now 227,965.

Army lists issued today contained the names of 48 killed in action, 12 died of wounds, 7 died of accident, 62 died of disease, 101 severely wounded, 500 wounded to a degree undetermined, 624 slightly wounded, and 33 missing in action.

NEW OFFERS BILL TO TRAIN ALL BOYS

Would Make Every Youth, on Reaching 18, Subject to One Year's Service in Army.

WITH PAY OF $5 A MONTH

Indiana Senator Thinks 700,000 Men Can Be Trained Each Year at Cost of $450,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Asserting that with demobilization of the military forces demanded by law for months after the peace treaty the country would find itself in a state of unpreparedness, Senator Harry New of Indiana today introduced a bill for universal military training.

"Let us confront the fact," he said. "We do not know what obligations are being prepared for us in Paris, but we do know that we have duties toward ourselves and toward posterity. It may be well to make the world safe for democracy. Let us first make it safe for ourselves."

Senator New said that the War Department had realized the need for giving serious thought to the reorganization of the army by recently submitting to the House of Representatives a plan which would provide an army of 500,000 men.

The cost of maintaining the proposed army of 500,000 men on the basis of the present emergency pay, he said, would reach $797,[illegible]0,000, and on the basis of pay before the war, $713,000,000, while the expense of the universal military training plan would be only about $450,000,000 for the training of 700,000 men.

The Indiana Senator said that his bill was merely a "nucleus," and he asked advice from the Military Affairs Committee and the General Staff, and added that he realized that the legislation could not be enacted at the present session of Congress.

Under the bill all youths, on reaching the age of 18 years, who are citizens or whose parents have declared intention of becoming citizens, would be subject to training for a continuous period of not more than one year. The training preferably would be given during the nineteenth year, but if deferred would continue during any year up to the twenty-sixth year, when it would terminate. If a man is exempted during the first legal year he must appear annually afterward to demonstrate his exemption. Whenever this exemption disappears he enters training, up to the twenty-sixth year, at the end of which time he automatically goes into the unorganized militia.

Under the terms of the bill no one is to be excused unless he is the sole support of parents, wife or child, "and then only in the event that equivalent support to dependents is not provided by the Congress; provided that such equivalent shall represent the net contribution made to the support of the dependents in the case of each youth liable under the act."

Gratuities of $5 monthly are allowed during the training period. Men serving in the army or navy since this country's declaration of war are considered as having been trained. All men trained become members of the National Reserve and subject to call by classes to the colors.

Speaking of the Presidential proclamation of peace and terminating military liability, Senator New said:

"When this proclamation may be issued is, of course, a matter of doubt. It may be months away or it may come sooner; events alone can determine that. It now appears that it is not imminent, but ninety days ago there were few who anticipated the imminence of the armistice. Whenever it comes the men now under arms have a right to assume that the law will be respected and observed and their Government's contract with them lived up to. If it is not I fear we shall find ourselves with a dissatisfied and discontented lot of soldiers, and, to put it mildly, an indignant and protesting lot of parents and wives in every walk of life from which those soldiers were drawn. Without reference to final proclamations, they all consider the war as over, they want their soldiers sent home, and any alteration of plans which will result in holding the boys in the ranks for a protracted period is not going to be received with favor. It will be well to bear that in mind."

The public mind, said Senator New, must be disabused of the impression that universal military training implies militarism and a large standing army. The scheme, he said, means that men should not be called to war unfit, and "provides the only guarantee against any occasion for the maintenance of a regular army of greater proportions than the country needs or is willing to support."

Creel

George Creel has been the object of bitter and constant attack. However he has done it, the task he was given to do is one of the biggest and most important ever asked of an American citizen.

Everybody's Magazine has lifted the curtain and makes public the story of what Creel's department did in the war—told by George Creel himself.

"America's Fight for World Opinion" by Mr. Creel in the February Everybody's is an amazing disclosure.

Creel tells how truth was jammed into Germany; how countless circulars were dropped from the sky; how the German grip on moving pictures in neutral countries was broken; how Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, by sheer courage and ability, changed the opinion of an entire nation.

Do not miss it in the February Everybody's now on sale.

New Victor Records for February

Fresh delights for the music lover! The best of the new music and some old established favorites. Magnificently rendered by famous and exclusive Victor artists. Farrar is heard in an exquisitely beautiful song; Galli-Curci gives voice to a delightful coloratura aria; Gluck presents a touching old-time ballad. The Flonzaley Quartet plays a rollicking little Irish reel; Jascha Heifetz contributes a violin solo of dazzling brilliancy; and Harry Lauder sings a cheerful peace song in his own inimitable style.

There's dance music, too, for your enjoyment; and popular songs in both humorous and sentimental vein. All are listed below, and you can hear the records at any Victor dealer's.

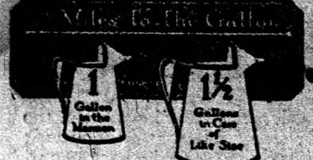
AMATEUR BILLIARD CHAMPION ESCAPES DEFEAT BY BRILLIANT RALLY AT FINISH



MARMON 34

New York Automobile Show

MARMON AUTOMOBILE CO. OF NEW YORK

62nd and Broadway

This story comes from the front direct.

A young Lieutenant of Infantry went scouting one night, wearing one of our uniform overcoats, the gift of a fond relative. He got tangled in some Boche barbed wire and it became a question whether he should risk being shot while trying to disengage himself or slip out of the overcoat and leave the much prized garment.

He chose the least dangerous course and retreated to a shell-hole, where he lay until the mist (not a *"Scotch Mist") of the early morning concealed his escape; meanwhile observing that his abandoned overcoat became a target for Boche bullets.

Possibly the overcoat held its shape so well that the enemy thought it contained a man. Our overcoats like all our clothes are built to stand up, but not to stand alone.

RALLY SAVES UNGER IN BILLIARD MATCH

Spurt in Last Innings Gives Champion Victory Over Charles Steinbugler.

NEUSTADT ALSO WINNER

Young Brooklyn Player Defeats Gardner in National Class C Cue Tourney.

A rally in the closing innings enabled Ferdinand A. Unger of Newark, N. J., present champion, to annex his fourth victory yesterday afternoon in the national Class C 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at Lawler Brothers' Academy in Brooklyn. The title holder, after trailing Charles J. Steinbugler almost from the start of the match, recovered his stroke just in time to avert his first defeat of the final round play. The score was 150 to 140 in Unger's favor. The contest went forty-six innings. Up to within six innings of the finish the champion was forced to play an uphill game. Steinbugler was in excellent stroke, and played up to the standard he has shown in his previous games. Unger, on the other hand, failed to come up to what was expected of him until his closing spurt.

Steinbugler started promisingly, and at the tenth inning had compiled 44 points to the champion's 22. Unger's play improved in the next ten innings, but Steinbugler retained the upper hand, and at the twenty-first inning was showing the way by 67 to 61. At the thirtieth inning, Steinbugler had increased his lead to 8 points, the score showing 82 against 74, with the title holder on the short end. Unger's efforts diminished, rather than increased in the subsequent ten innings so that at the fortieth inning he was trailing by 23 points, in a score of 128 to 105.

At this stage, however, the champion's efforts showed improvement. In the forty-first inning, both contestants counted 7 buttons, bring the score to 135 to 112. Unger, in his forty-second turn registered 14 and added a run of 17 to this in his forty-third inning, putting him in front by 143 to 139, Steinbugler having scored 3 and 1 for his corresponding innings. Unger then clicked off his necessary 7 points in three innings, while Steinbugler failed to count until the final inning, when he collected a single tally.

In the evening contest Joseph Neustadt, who is giving Unger a close contest for the title, added another victory to his record when he trounced Gus Gardner by a score of 150 to 92 in thirty-eight innings. Neustadt had high runs of 20 and 16, with an average of 3 36-38. Gardner made the highest run of the game, a cluster of 26 points, which he corralled in his initial turn at the table.

This contest ended in somewhat of a surprise. Gardner started strongly and for a time gave indications that he would show his rival under a defeat. For twenty innings Gardner played excellent billiards, negotiating many difficult shots and playing with a consistency which was unusual for him. Then came a surprising reversal of form, and it was only a question of Neustadt completing his string. Gardner's playing in the later innings was mediocre compared to his earlier efforts, while Neustadt, with that confidence which goes to a leader, improved as the game progressed.

Gardner's run of 26 starting the game loomed up large to Neustadt for a time. In the first seven innings Gardner compiled 40 points against Neustadt's 12. Neustadt played diligently thereafter, making marked headway against his rival. At the twentieth inning, Gardner's advantage had been cut to four points, when the score showed 71 to 67. In the following innings Neustadt returned a run of 20 points, forging to the front by 87 to 76, Gardner having registered five points in his turn at the table. A cluster of thirteen in the twenty-second inning gave Neustadt 103 against Gardner's 77, and for the remainder of the game Neustadt completely outplayed his rival.

YALE WINS IN TANK.

New Record Made in Meet with Amherst.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 31.—Yale tonight opened its swimming season by defeating Amherst 44 points to 9, capturing firsts in every event and seconds in three of the five races. Edward Binney, Jr., of Sound Beach, Conn., a Yale sophomore, furnished the sensation of the meet by lowering the intercollegiate record in the fifty-yard dash. He made the distance in 25 seconds. The previous record was 25 1-5 seconds, held by Sheldon Hoadley of Yale. The rival captains, Hincks of Yale and Cowles of Amherst, had a battle royal in the 100-yard race, the Eli leader finally splashing home a decisive winner. Benjamin's fancy diving was a feature.

Summary:

50-Yard Dash.—Won by Binney, Yale; second, Archbald, Yale; third, Cowles, Amherst. Time—0:25.

220-Yard Dash.—Won by Hopkins, Yale; second, Pryall, Yale; third, Vermilye, Amherst. Time—2:56.

Plunge for Distance.—Tie between Boyce and Loeb, Yale, 62 feet; Guild, Amherst, third, 50 feet.

Fancy Dive.—Won by Benjamin, Yale, 99 points; second, Brought, Amherst, 96.6; third, McAleeman, Yale, 96.1.

100-Yard Dash.—Won by Hincks, Yale; second, Cowles, Amherst; third, Thompson, Yale. Time—0:59 1-5. New intercollegiate record.

200-Yard Relay Race.—Won by Yale. Members of winning team, Hincks, Tyler, Archbald, and Binney. Time—1:45.

SCHAEFER AGAIN WINNER.

Defeats Cochran in Three-Night Match, 1,800 to 1,439.

Jake Schaefer scored another success over Welker Cochran last night when he completed his three nights' match at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn, showing the way to Cochran by a total score of 1,800 points to 1,439. The victory gave Schaefer his second in as many matches that have been played in the metropolitan district in the past two weeks. For his 1,800 points the son of the late "Wizard" averaged 39 6-46 points, while Cochran's grand average showed 31 13-46.

The scores:

AFTERNOON GAME.

Cochran—52 0 78 4 33 6 72 2 88 4 0 1 74 0—414. Average—29 8-14. High run—88.

SOUTHWORTH QUITS PIRATES

Pittsburgh Slugger Signs with Outlaw Delaware League.

The Delaware County outlaw league is trying to stir up dissatisfaction among major league baseball players by offering flattering terms to play two or three games a week. Frank Miller, owner of the Upland club, who has made an offer to Frank Baker of the Yankees, now announces that he has signed Bill Southworth, the sensational young Pittsburgh outfielder, who landed up among the leading batsmen in the National League last season. Miller says he has also signed Jamieson, one of Connie Mack's pitchers.

Miller has ambitions of building up an outlaw league composed of disgruntled major league players. As soon as he hears of a player who is not satisfied with the terms which have been offered in this year's contract he makes him an offer to play in the Delaware league. Miller, however, says he will not make any overtures to players who have signed contracts, for he will not make his league, he says, a refuge for contract jumpers.

Yesterday was the last day on which the club owners could submit contracts to their players, and within the next few days it is expected that there will be numerous complaints from players who have been asked to accept a cut in their salaries. It is not expected that there will be much trouble in signing the players of the two New York clubs, for both the Yankees and Giants have not followed any general plan of retrenchment.

Manager McGraw, however, is prepared for any players who show a disposition to jump over the traces. The Giants' manager was going to take a few weeks' vacation, but he has changed his mind and will be ready to go out and interview any of his players who show signs of being dissatisfied.

Frank Baker is the only member of the Yankees who has thus far shown any disposition to hold out. It is expected, however, if Baker plays anywhere it will be with the Yankees. Baker is tired of traveling around the country with ball clubs and wants to settle down on his Maryland farm.

Hippo Jim Vaughn, pitcher of the Cubs, is the latest hold-out, and when Manager Fred Mitchell refused to approve of Vaughn's demands, Hippo became all heated up and said that he wouldn't play with the Cubs any more. This is only the first of many cases which are sure to crop up within the next week or two. It is the season of the year when the ball players threaten to do this or that if they are not paid higher salaries. In the end, however, the players usually cool down and accept what is offered them.

COLUMBIA FIVE LOSES.

Princeton Gains Easy Victory by Score of 7 to 15.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 31.—Princeton had little difficulty in defeating Columbia 27 to 15 here tonight in the Tiger's first game in the Informal Basket Ball League. The New Yorkers seemed lost in the first half, passing wildly and shooting at random. The half ended 16 to 5, with Princeton on the long end. In the second half the Blue and White five rallied and gave the Tigers a hard tussle, ringing up four baskets in succession. Teirnan and Johnson were the most spectacular factors in Columbia's offensive, while Captain Gray and Davis upheld the honors of the Nassauites.

The Tigers' new combination with Trimble and Opie at the forward positions formed successfully. Fred Dawson, the Columbia Coach, shook hands with his old associate, Behring, after the game, and said that his men were handicapped by being unused to so large a floor.

The lineup:

Princeton.	Position.	Columbia.
Opie	R.F.	Tynan
Trimble	L.F.	Farrell
Gray	C.	Johnson
Davis	R.G.	Weinstein
Margetts	L.G.	Diend

Field goals—Davis 4; Tynan, 3; Margetts, 2; Gray, 2; Trimble, 1; Johnson, 1.

Foul goals—Opie, 9; Farrell, 7.

Substitutions—For Princeton, Hunt for Davis, Wood for Trimble; Columbia, Kennedy for Farrell.

Referee—Mr. Cartwright. Umpire—Mr. Reed. Time of halves—15 minutes.

PREDICT YACHTING REVIVAL.

Seawanhaka-Corinthian Club Will Restore All Racing Fixtures.

The revival of yachting was freely predicted at the annual meeting and dinner of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club, which was held at the New York Yacht Club last night. It is believed that most of the yachtsmen who have been in the service will be free to take up the sport next Summer, and it is believed that an unusually active season will follow.

For the last two seasons there has been no yachting because of the war, but it is expected that this season all the Seawanhaka Corinthian racing fixtures will be restored. These include the Leland Corinthian Challenge Cup, the Alfred Roosvelt Memorial Club, the Robert Center Memorial Cup, the Seawanhaka International Challenge Cup, and the Seawanhaka Corinthian, and Stamford Yacht Clubs Cup. Then there is also the Founders' Fund, which is applied "for the purpose of encouraging racing in small yachts manned by amateurs and of encouraging the attainment of proficiency in all other matters relating to seamanship."

The election of officers was as follows:

MANUAL TAKES LEAD IN HOCKEY TOURNEY

Defeats Commercial 4 to 0, While Erasmus Skaters Down Boys' High, 6 to 1.

A victory over Commercial High School by a score of 4 goals to 0, at the Brooklyn Ice Palace yesterday, gave Manual Training High School's hockey sextet the lead in the chase for the Brooklyn championship in the Public Schools Athletic League tournament. This success gave Manual Training a record of three victories in as many games during the tournament.

The Manual Training-Commercial encounter was one part of a double-header. In the other game Erasmus Hall High School's aggressive players overwhelmed the Boys' H. S. contingent, by the count of 6 to 1.

Commercial's players were completely outclassed by the Manual Training team. Led by Sparks, who played right wing, the victorious hockeyists furnished a varied and effective offensive which had the Commercial skaters bewildered in the opening period. Three Manual Training goals resulted before the whistle, being scored by Berry, Titus, and Sparks. In the second period the Commercial defense tightened and for a time the play shifted to Manual Training's territory. The offense was beaten off, however, without a score. Sparks managed to get the puck on the end of his stick within one minute of the final whistle and sent the rubber disc spinning on a straight shot past Thomas for Manual Training's fourth marker.

The Erasmus Hall-Boys' High game was one-sided throughout. Hall started the scoring for the victorious team, leading off with a goal 1 minute and 30 seconds after the start of the game, on a brilliant straight shot. This period ended with Erasmus Hall leading by 3 to 1, Stevenson making Boys' High's only count after nine minutes of play. Hall again started the scoring in the second half, annexing a goal after two minutes of play. Rollins accounted for two of Erasmus Hall's goals, getting one in each period.

The lineups:

Manual Tr., (4.)	Position.	Commercial, (0.)
Tredwell	G.	Thomas
Berry	P.	Peak
Titus	C. P.	Jewell
Callahan	C.	Feinler
Jahn	L. W.	Horsman

Wyckoff	R. W.	Balesh

Goals—First period: Hall in 1:30 on a straight shot; Rollins in 6:30 from scrimmage; Stevenson in 9:00 on a straight shot; Rollins in 11:30 on a straight shot. Second period: Hall in 2:00 on a straight shot; Wyckoff in 5:30 from scrimmage; Garside in 10:00 from scrimmage. Referee—Thomas Howard, Hockey Club of New York. Timekeepers—Fred B. Mohle, Brooklyn Hockey Club, and Frank Farah, Poly Prep School. Time of periods—Fifteen minutes.

YALE FIVE BEATS PENN.

Blue Scores 26 to 22 Victory in First League Game.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 31.—Yale defeated Penn 26 to 22 at basket ball tonight in Yale's first athletic event of any kind since the university reorganized on a peace basis. Although the visitors secured a 7 to 2 lead early in the first half Yale tied the score. The Quakers again temporarily took the lead, but Yale closed the first half leading 14 to 10, retaining this advantage till the referee's whistle stopped play.

Sweeney's free goal throwing feat met the visitors' play. He tossed safely eight baskets in nine tries. Van Slick's all-around game was the most brilliant feature of Yale's play. He registered 14 of Yale's points. Cohen, formerly of the College of the City of New York, exhibited the best defensive play.

The lineup:

Yale, (26.)	Position.	Penn., (22.)
Horton	R.F.	Sweeney
Van Slyck	L.F.	Stannard
Hamill	C.	Davis
Stradella	R.G.	Zucker
Cohen	L.G.	Peck

Score—Yale, 26; Pennsylvania, 22.

Goals from floor: Yale—Van Slyck, (6.) Stradella, (2.) Hamill, (2.) Horton, (2.) Sweeney, Standard, (3,) Peck, (2.) Davis. Goals from foul—Sweeney, (8.) Van Slyck, (2.) Referee—Tom Thorp. Umpire—Mr. Koch. Time—Twenty-minute halves. Substitutions: Pennsylvania—Stannard for Zucker, Mouradian for Stannard.

Easy Victory for Pratt.

Pratt Institute's basket ball team easily defeated the Moravian College five last night in a one-sided game on the Pratt court in Brooklyn. The score was 28 to 13. Fitelson, with five field goals and eight from foul, was the biggest cog in the Pratt Institute success.

Blumenthal Winner at Thum's.

W. Blumenthal and Sam Garfunkle were the winners last night in the A. A. B. A. three-cushion carrom billiard tournament at Thum's Academy. Blumenthal defeated C. Bach by a count of 35 to 23 while Garfunkle disposed of F. Grummel, by a score of 35 to 25.

TITLE FOR CLINTON FIVE.

Defeats Newtown Basket Ball Team for City Championship.

De Witt Clinton High School's basket ball team defeated the Newtown High School quintet last night on the City College court and won the city scholastic championship title. The Manhattan lads outscored their rivals from Queens by 27 to 12.

The lineup:

De Witt C., (27.)	Position.	Newtown, (13.)
Goldberger	R. F.	Moss
Militzer	L. F.	Fulgione
Siskind	C.	Stewart
Rosonowitz	R. G.	McGrattan
Wechsler	L. G.	Platow

Field goals—Goldberger, Militzer, (4.) Siskind, (4,) Wechsler, Moss, (3,) Stewart, Platow. Goals from foul—Goldberger, (7.) Platow, (2.) Substitutions—For De Witt Clinton: Coon for Goldberger, Fliegel for Siskind, Edelstein for Wechsler. Referee—Ed Thorpe, De La Salle Institute. Time of halves—Twenty minutes.

HARVARD SKATERS WIN EASY VICTORY

Crimson Hockey Team Shows Great Speed in Defeating Boston College, 7 to 2.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 31.—Harvard's hockey team beat Boston College, 7 to 2, here today. The ice on the Soldiers' Field Rink was in great condition and the 'Varsity team had its first chance in weeks to show its real game. The Boston College team was very fast, but the Crimson gave a wonderful exhibition of individual hockey and all of its goals but one were scored on well-organized combination play.

Harvard's stick work and general defense was better than that of its opponent, and with the Cambridge regulars in the game the outfit looked well up to the standard set before the war. Avery and Captain Gross each scored three goals in the first period, in combination with Cabot, Bacon, and Bigelow. Walker's defense was so good that most of Boston's shots for goals were made well out to the boards.

The visitors' goals were made individually by Morrisey and Hughes, the latter's coming at the end of a rush from one end of the rink clear across the surface.

The summary:

Harvard.	Position.	Boston College.
Holmes	G.	O'Connell
Walker	P.	Healy
White	C. P.	Morrisey
Gross	R. W.	Hughes
Bigelow	R.	Dooley
Avery	O.	Fahey
Bacon	L. W.	Corrigan

Score—Harvard, 7; Boston College, 2.

Goals—Gross, 3; Avery, 3; Bigelow, 1; Hughes, 1; Morrisey, 1.

Substitutes—Harvard, Snelling for Bacon, Baldwin for Snelling, Cabot for Avery, Adams for Cabot, Buntin for Bigelow, Bright for Cross, Clark for White, Church for Clark.

Referee—Mr. Hutchison. Goal Umpires—Mr. Kennedy and J. Morrisey. Time of periods—18 minutes.

1,500 MEN FIGHT FIRE AT AVIATION CAMP

Whole Plant at Rockaway Point Imperilled by a Wild Outburst of Flame.

8 HYDROAIRPLANES BURNED

Two Buildings Destroyed, with Heavy Loss—25 Liberty Motors Wrecked Beyond Repair.

A fire, which started from the explosion of a gasoline torch in the hands of a workman yesterday, destroyed two buildings and threatened for a time to wipe out the Naval Aviation Station at Rockaway Point. The property loss was heavy, some persons asserting that it might reach $1,000,000. Two buildings valued at $60,000 each were destroyed, twenty-five liberty motors were wrecked beyond repair, and eight modern equipped hydroairplanes and quantities of oil and other supplies were burned. The fire was fought by 1,500 men from the aviation station and from Fort Tilden.

The fire started at 10:30 o'clock in the morning when the gasoline torch which Quartermaster Johnson was using in making some repairs in the Construction Building exploded. The burst of flame caught in some linen used for wing covering, and in a few minutes the building, 100 by 100 feet, was spouting flame.

In the building were nine hydroairplanes, four of the H S-1; four of the H S-2, and one of the N-9 type. By quick work men succeeded in wheeling out the N-9 before the fire reached it and this was the only thing in the building that was saved. This is a slow type of machine equipped with a Kirkman motor, used for patrol purposes. It was in this building that twenty-five Liberty motors were destroyed.

The alarm of fire brought Ensign Ahearn and a great force of men. Their work was confined to saving property and preventing the spread of the fire by the use of water, sand, and ashes. They worked under great difficulty and in constant danger, for the wind sent the flames trailing at a great distance. Alarms brought the Fire Department apparatus from the Rockaways to the aviation field.

There was insufficient water, and until the steamboat Frank and Helen McAvoy arrived the fireman had little hope of saving the camp. Captain McAvoy saw the flames while he was carrying freight on Jamaica Bay and steamed over to the pier. The engines of the boat pumped water and in less than an hour after the boat arrived the flames were well under control.

Bucket Brigade Helps.

About 400 sailors formed a brigade and passed buckets from Jamaica Bay to a 5,000-gallon tank of gasoline which was near the danger area. Sailors, under the direction of Captain S. V. Parker, poured water from the buckets on the sand, and a shovel squad in turn piled the wet sand on the tank. It was saved from destruction.

One hundred feet from the construction building was Building No. 1, a hangar in which were several airplanes. Stored between the buildings were about 200 barrels of gasoline, which a large force of men started to roll into Jamaica Bay. While they were at this task the flames leaped the intervening space and caught Building No. 1. Under this canopy of fire and in a shower of sparks the men continued to work. They succeeded in rolling nearly all the barrels of gasoline into the water before the intense heat drove them away. In the meantime the fire had fastened on the hangar, but before it assumed large proportions all the airplanes had been saved. It was said, however, that two Liberty motors were destroyed in this building.

Soon afterward the fire spread to a shed near Building 1, in which were stored barrels of fine oil used for lubrication and quantities of an inflamable preparation used for covering wing surfaces of airplanes. The flames soared high into the air, whipped by the wind into ribbons that threatened other buildings and, indeed, the entire plant. Several times there were explosions with sheets of flame which forced the firemen to fall back. In two instances the force of the explosions sent flaming barrels high in the air. One of these fell in a field and set fire to the brush, and another landed on Building 2, and broke through the roof.

Navy Dirigible Saved.

The energy of the volunteer fighters and a shift in the wind saved the other buildings. About 300 feet from the construction building was a long steel hangar containing a navy dirigible. The engines were undergoing repairs and the men were unable to remove the airship from the shed. They managed to save the building by closing all openings, and while some banked wet sand against the sides, others, stationed on the roof, extinguished the sparks that fell upon it.

The shift in the wind saved from destruction the Curtiss hangar and its contents which were in the path of the fire. In this hangar was the N. C-1, the world's largest air and water cruiser. Besides, it contained a so-called Liberty Fighter, a plane with which the Government is experimenting, it was said, which is reported to be capable of a speed of 139 miles an hour. There were other machines in the building. The volunteer fighters saved some fifty machines in all.

READY FOR THE AUTO SHOW.

More Than 200 Cars in Exhibition Opening Tonight.

Everything is ready for the opening of New York's nineteenth automobile show at 8 o'clock this evening in Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, within one block of the Garden at Lexington Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street. Nearly all of the cars and the accessories were installed yesterday. Motorists who are interested in seeing the standard models and the new things of the year will find many attractive features to study. All of the space in both of the buildings has been taken, and in some respects the show will exceed in general interest its predecessors.

Special decorations have been worked out for both exhibition halls. The walls around the main arena floor of the Garden have been arranged in a series of alternate panels and large mirrors, and the section below the gallery will be illuminated with indirect lighting. The tall pillars have been decorated in blue, with white lattice work, from which will be suspended forty-eight iron lanterns in the old English style.

The fifty-eight makes of automobiles to be displayed will be shown in a variety of open and closed models, making a total of more than 200 cars. The six-cylinder and moderate-priced cars under $3,000 will predominate, but there will also be a number of high-powered, richly upholstered cars ranging in value from $5,000 to $10,000. It will be distinctly an American motor car show, as no foreign cars will be exhibited.

The show will be open every day during the coming week from 10:30 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night. This week the show is limited to passenger cars. The second week of the show, beginning Monday, Feb. 10, will be confined to motor trucks and smaller commercial vehicles.

$80 for 100 Pounds of Tobacco.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 31.—Price records for burley tobacco in quantity were topped today, tobacco men assert, when a hogshead sold for $80 a hundred pounds on the Louisville market. The tobacco came from the crop of a single farmer.

OPERA

By James Gibbons Huneker

"Le Chemineau."

"Le Chemineau," lyric drama in four acts, by Xavier Leroux, was sung in French for the first time here by the Chicago Opera Association at the Lexington Theatre last night. This was the cast:

Le Chemineau	Alfred Maguenat
François	Georges Baklanoff
Pierre	Gustave Huberdeau
Toinet	Octave Dua
Martin	Desire Defrere
Thomas	Constantin Nicolay
Toinette	Yvonne Gall
Aline	Myrna Sharlow
Catherine	Maria Claessens

Conductor—Louis Hasselmans.

Another première! They are Vallombrosian this season; yet among all these fluttering leaves there have been none stamped American. We should be grateful for the French offerings, though they are not masterpieces. "Le Chemineau" is not one, musically speaking. It dates back to 1907, Paris. The play by Jean Richepin was presented at the Odeon in 1897. Otis Skinner appeared here in an English version entitled "The Harvesters." The opera was first heard in America at New Orleans, 1911. The story might be considered as a symbol of the poet's years of vagabondage. Richepin was born at Médéa, (Medeah,) Algiers, Feb. 4, 1849. A grandson of French peasants, he has Touranian blood in his veins, as he boasts in that rousing lyric—like the sonorous horn of the hunter—"Hallali."

He was a poetic vagabond like the hero of his charming piece. A handsome man of robust physique, a born fighter, he has played many rôles. Porter, professor, sailor, circus Hercules, tramp—and poet; always poet. His prodigious Rabelaisian vocabulary, his unashamed sensuality, hatred of convention, are incorporated in that astounding and brilliant first volume, "Chanson des Gueux," (1876.) He had always preferred the company of "powerful uneducated persons," criminals, low drabs, scamps, in a word, his was the Walt Whitman complex; but a Whitman of the Boulevards, witty, depraved, a stout drinker, and fond of good living.

Unlike Whitman, he was a scholar. He was prosecuted, imprisoned and lost his civic rights for those splendid turbulent poems. "Les Blasphèmes" (1884) did not betray repentance for sins against taste, his savage denunciations of society; indeed, while they showed a firmer control of the mechanics of his art, they were more outrageous in spirit. Yet this one time occupant of Sainte Pélagie's prison—only for a month—is today a member of the French Academy, crowned and belaurelled, rich and admired and on the threshold of his seventieth birthday. Decidedly they order these things better in France. In America he might have become a Congressman.

In 1883 he wrote a drama, "Nana-Sahib," for Sarah Bernhardt and played with her the chief male rôle. His literary production has been remarkable in quantity as well as quality. Probably the nostalgia of the open road overcame him and he revived images of his old life in "Le Chemineau." That stark vagrom man, as Vance Thompson has called him, is the Eternal Vagabond, and in this particular play an Enoch Arden who can't be caged after his return; one who wherever he passes changes people as did Pippa in Browning's poem; as did Sanine in the most powerful fiction of the Russia of 1905. The tale Richepin tells is simplicity itself.

A merry blade of a fellow, a copain who is liked by his chums, and loved by the girls, gets a young woman into trouble and vanishes before the consequences. She remarries; her son by the fascinating vagabond becomes a young man, in turn falls in love with a nice girl, and is rejected by her father because of the stigma on his birth. Reappearing, the vagrant, who sets matters to rights, sees his son happy, refuses the offer to stay and, after the death of her sick husband, to marry his early sweetheart. The open road for him! Hallulli! Hallila! "Hardi! Traversons tout le taillis, la clairière, sautons les rus, les chemins creux!" From afar his song sounds for the last time in the ears of his friends. Le Chemineau is swallowed up in the snowy night and his passing leaves no trace except a bittersweet memory.

Leroux's musical setting proved a pleasant disappointment. Compared to his "La Reine Fiammette" it is as cheese to chalk. Evidently the subject made a deeper appeal to him; anyhow he has surrounded the story with appropriate musical atmosphere, and is especially happy in his characterization of the vagabond. The second and third acts contain the best numbers; there is a genuine climax when the rambling hero discovers that he has a son and that son is lying dead drunk in a stable. The mood of exultation is Siegfried's Rhine journey cleverly teased into the bucolic key. De Maupassant has written more than one tale with such a theme. Humor of a broad sort is in the score. The Chemineau—he has no other name—has for a leading motive for the bassoon a merry gigue. The rustic pan-pipes are often heard; open fifths drone bass. It is inseparable from a pastoral Gallic opera.

It was the harmonious ensemble work of the performance that lifted the music above the plains of mediocrity. Splendid acting, splendid singing by Alfred Maguenat and Georges Baklanoff gave a critical audience great satisfaction. Versatile Baklanoff, after his portrayal the evening previous of the rude Italian warrior, Colonna, in "Monna Vanna," was another being, a generous peasant who marries the ruined Toinette, philosophically accepts the son of the vagabond, but flares up when the brutal Maitre Pierre—Gustave Huberdeau—calls hard names. Then came an outburst from the half dying man that electrified us. Again vocally Baklanoff was most impressive. The Tramp, who makes all the trouble, was a finished, yet very vital, character, whose swaggering insolence, imperturbable flouting of old Pierre's offers, whose love making and drinking are delightfully reprehensible, was Maguenat, who sang with intensity and was a picturesque scamp. Charged with pathos was the facing of his son, but in a trice the serious mood evaporated as he flicked the young fool on the chin for his drunkenness.

In France the rôle is Dupaune's. Yvonne Gall has also sung the Toinette, we are told, as "guest" at Vichy and other places. She was in the picture, and a better, because sincerer, country girl than a Juliet. She forced her voice too much. Humorous sketches by Nicolay and Defrere were effective. The scene settings added to the atmospheric quality of the opera. And last but not least, the conducting of Louis Hasselmans was an important factor. His rhythmic beat and feeling for nuance spared us some dull moments. All in all "La Chemineau" is charming and well worth seeing.

FOR ELECTRIC CONTROL.

British Government Project for Taking Over Power Plants.

LONDON, Jan. 30, (British Wireless Service.)—Control of the generation and distribution of electricity throughout the United Kingdom is proposed by a bill now being prepared by the Government. Authority over the electric supply, which is now vested in the Board of Trade and other Government departments, would be transferred by the bill to a very small board, having probably only five members.

The United Kingdom would be divided into districts, the board members having in mind, first of all, the requirements of industrial sections. In each district a subsidiary board would be appointed to take direct charge.

All electric power stations would be purchased and placed in the hands of the local boards, each of which would be held responsible for the supply of electricity in its district, and for the establishment of new generating stations and transmission systems.

If private companies wish to enter the electric business, they would be compelled to buy their current from the local board and their earnings would be under control.

It is suggested that the local boards would only meet expenses and pay no profits. The financing of the plan would be in the hands of the Government, except where it is practicable and advisable to finance the plan locally.

This plan is brought forward as a compromise between public and private control. The report upon which the bill is based was made by a committee which conducted a careful investigation. It points out that the electric system of the country is inadequate and recommends the adoption of a plan which will meet the requirements.

EXPLOSION KILLS ONE IN NYACK DYE PLANT

3 Others Missing and 15 Hurt by Blast in American Aniline Products Company's Factory.

PROPERTY LOSS $200,000

School Building and Other Structures Damaged — Countryside Shaken for Miles Around.

Special to The New York Times.

NYACK, Jan. 31.—One person is dead, three are missing, and fifteen were injured as the result of an explosion which wrecked and set fire to the big plant of the American Aniline Products Company here today. About 100 persons were in the factory at the time. The property loss is estimated at $200,000.

Falling embers scattered over the neighborhood by two terrific blasts set fire to four other structures and for a while threatened to make a general conflagration in the village. Quick work of the firemen, however, confined the disaster to the aniline plant.

The dead man is H. A. Nakamura, a chemical mixer, and the missing are Erastus Van Houten, Louis Yakshima, and an unidentified Japanese.

Coroner A. K. Doig, M. D., who is making an inquiry into the disaster, learned that shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning a frightful explosion occurred in the drying room on the first floor. It is thought the chemicals there became overheated and blew up. Parts of the ground floor walls shot outward. At the same time the blast tore a hole through the upper floors and the roof. A shower of embers and débris went skyward and sprinkled over the neighborhood, setting fire to the abandoned Depew shoddy mill, Dr. E. H. Maynard's home, and Dr. J. W. Glie's garage nearby.

The whole countryside was rocked for miles around by the concussion and windows and plateglass for some distance were broken.

The employes became panic-stricken and fled from the building as broken glass and other wreckage flew all around them. The three missing men are thought to have been in the drying room. Nakamura escaped from the drying room, but had to be dragged out by a companion, as both his legs and one arm were broken. He died shortly after he reached Nyack hospital.

Hardly a hundred feet away from the aniline plant is the Nyack High and Grammar School. All the windows on the side of the schoolhouse facing the factory were smashed to atoms. The school fire drill alarm was sounded, and in three minutes the 400 pupils had left the building. One of the pupils was hurt by flying glass. The school will be closed for two weeks for repairs.

The injured were rushed to Nyack Hospital by the Women's Motor Corps, under Sergeant Natalie Couch.

Marcella Craft Sings Butterfly.

The American Singers at the Park had their turn at "Madame Butterfly," sung by three companies in three days, at a special performance last night with Marcella Craft as guest, singing her rôle in Italian. Miss Craft had appeared in the San Carlo season here, and her Butterfly is familiar, intelligently studied, a graceful impersonation. Orville Harrold, who with the others sang English, turned to the heroine after the interrupted wedding with "Bimba, non piangere," and they finished the duet of the first act in Puccini's own Italian. Carl Formes, Viola Robertson, and others reappeared, and for the first time John McGhie conducted.

Fire Holds Long Island Trains.

Early commuters from Flushing were delayed an hour yesterday by fire in a frame warehouse of Swift & Co., only twelve feet from the railroad tracks. The damage was estimated at $200,000. Firemen were called from half a dozen places. George Miller, a salesman for the company, discovered the fire when he stepped from the butter cooler in the plant, and had to drop fifteen feet down an elevator shaft to escape the rush of flame. He was not injured.

PLAY CZECHOSLOVAK MUSIC

Leo Ornstein and Others Give a Sombre Patriotic Concert.

A program of Czechoslovak music was given last night at Aeolian Hall, under the direction of the Czechoslovak Arts Club and with the co-operation of Leo Ornstein and other outlandish artists, for the benefit of the Czechoslovak army. As a work of patriotism it was highly successful; the hall was filled with an audience for the most part Czech. Its value as propaganda, however, is somewhat dubious, for the program was selected by a person of unduly sombre taste, and its excerpts from the wide field of Czechoslovak music were not in all cases the most favorably representative. Those who judged the Czechoslovak character by the program of last night would be apt to get the impression that the citizens of the new Central European republic are of unwonted stolidity and gloom, delighting in labor for its own sake.

Perhaps because her group of four dances by Smetana had in it somewhat more of color than did the rest of the program, Marie Mikova at the piano excelled and was received with the most enthusiastic applause of the evening. Mr. Ornstein performed with much brilliancy, but little incentive, the first three movements of Novak's Pan. Novak was also represented by the "Melancholy Songs of Love," sung by Anica Fabry-Dvorak, who found humoresque and other topics in America, was presented last night in his settings of various psalms, sung by Bernardo Olshanski, and Clarence Dickinson gave Fibich's "Paradise" on the organ. Smetana opened and closed the program; at the beginning his "From My Life," by the Berkshire String Quartet, and at the end the symphonic poems Tabor and Blanik, based on the chorale of the Hussite warriors and the legend of national resurrection, all of which done on the organ by Mr. Dickinson, with the collaboration of two pianos and some kettledrums, made a thunderously martial conclusion to an evening which might have given a more rounded presentation of the Czechoslovak musical temperament.

HACKETT SCORES AT DEBUT.

New American Tenor a Surprise and Delight in "Barber of Seville."

Every Italian opera railbird in New York was at the Metropolitan last night to hear a remarkable new tenor who had made a reputation in Italy during the war, and to join his American countrymen in giving him a home-coming welcome. "Carlo" Hackett, as Mr. Gatti-Casazza's program announced him in "his first operatic appearance here," had, therefore, a double success from the start. It was the season's first performance of the gay "Barber of Seville," the first Italian opera sung here nearly a hundred years ago, and when the young hero appeared there was cordial applause before he had uttered a sound. The greeting grew to surprise and delight at his first aria, until, after the street serenade, Mr. De Luca as Figaro, gave young Hackett the curtain alone for half a dozen recalls.

Hackett has a high, clear voice and even clearer enunciation, as shown in that first aria and much subsequent patter; his true lyric test will come when he sings Alfredo in Verdi's "Traviata" next week. As Almaviva he was a charming figure of youth, high spirits, lover-like ardor; indeed, change Charles to James K., and Count Almaviva could have been Rupert of Hentzau back on last night's stage. But aside from distinguished appearance, Mr. Hackett has as a singer also the elusive quality called style, and no opera was more calculated to display it than Rossini's aristocratic old comedy of music and manners in Seville.

Mme. Hempel as Rosina returned to a favorite rôle of prima donnas, and in the lesson scene, after singing Strauss's "Blue Danube" waltz to Italian words, she added Ries's little lullaby, "The Evening Star," in English. It was an evening of good singing of the old school, three hours with not a scream or a forced note, and Mr. De Luca shared honors with his "Factotum" air, Mr. Mardones with the "Calumny" air, Mr. Malatesta with his pranks, as when, pursued by Hackett's sword, he cried for "armistizia" and brought down the house.

Mr. Hackett's brothers, Arthur, who sang on the Farrar concert tour, and George, who was in army uniform, were present to witness the successful début. The cast of the opera included, besides the principal stars, those in comedy rôles, Mattfeld, Audisio, Reschiglian, and Mr. Papi conducted.

FORTY YEARS AGO TODAY

ON February 1st, 1879, we opened our office at 71 Broadway—in the small brownstone building which stood at the head of Wall Street. Today our downtown office is in the same place. The founder of the business, who opened his first office in Union Square in 1873, is still the head of the firm. That was the day when we stood in line five days to buy tickets for Henry Irving's first American performance—the period of Jay Gould and Cyrus W. Field and General Grant.

Forty years ago people had more time to be courteous and careful in giving service. The methods we learned then obtain now. And we doubt very much whether it would be possible for a house to feel as much responsibility toward its customers without the traditions which we have built up over our long business life.

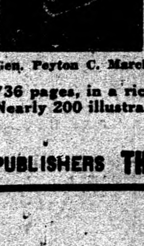
The whole story of the most stupendous conflict in all history.



Gen. Peyton C. March

Extract from Authors' Foreword—"Two ideals have been before us in the preparation of this necessary work. These are simplicity and thoroughness. Thoroughness is an historical essential beyond price. So it is that official documents prepared in many instances upon the field of battle and others taken from the files of the governments at war, are the basis of this work. Maps and photographs of unusual clearness and high authenticity illuminate the text. All that has gone into war-making, and the regeneration of the world, are herein set forth with historical particularity."

ADMIRAL MAYO'S VIEWS.

When Admiral HENRY T. MAYO appeared before the House Naval Affairs Committee to give his views about new construction, his recommendations outran those of the General Board, which hitherto has been the service authority on the subject. Formerly the General Board was supposed to go to extremes in planning naval expansion, but the opinion has been modified. Admiral MAYO does not hesitate to surpass it in his estimates of the size of the navy the United States should have. He urged an annual appropriation of $1,000,000,000 to provide an establishment as strong as Great Britain's, sixteen new superdreadnoughts to be laid down with the least possible delay "after an exhaustive review of all information we now have or can get "as to the best type of fighting craft." After hearing the Admiral the House Naval Affairs Committee declined to vote for more than ten capital ships and recommended an appropriation of $750,000,000, including $169,000,000 to be spent during the year on the new three years' program.

Secretary DANIELS, it should be noted, does not agree with Admiral MAYO that the conclusions of the Peace Conference should not be considered in planning the American navy of the future. In an address to reserve officers at the Naval Academy yesterday the Secretary said:

> We shall not build against any nation, because we have faith that the League of Peace will bring about such friendship and understanding among all nations as will ultimately cause a reduction in armament and a consequent decrease of expenditures for naval strength.

That is not Admiral MAYO's idea at all. He would build against Great Britain and ignore the Peace Conference. He can have had no authority or inspiration for this view. Certainly President WILSON takes the judgment of the Peace Conference into consideration. The Admiral's professional opinion is one thing, but his attitude toward the Peace Conference and Mr. WILSON's proposals for a League of Nations quite another. The Admiral is quoted as saying to the House Naval Affairs Committee: "This idea "is rapidly getting down to a sewing "circle, with no means of enforcement "and with no international police "force." The Commander in Chief of the Navy would not approve of this strange judgment; he would deplore it. Admiral MAYO was beyond his depth when he ventured into the domain of international polity and reflected upon the function of the Peace Conference.

THE TAX COMMISSION.

The Assembly has concurred in the resolution for the creation of a commission to consider the amendment of the State tax laws. Only $15,000 is asked for as a beginning, and distinguished experts are to be employed. If we could get a Legislature equally competent, that would better meet the needs of the case. There is nothing new to be learned about the defects of our tax laws, or about the best way to amend them. They contain all the faults of haphazard growth for generations. They contain neither symmetry nor consistency nor reason in apportioning the burdens which weigh discriminatingly against this city.

Neither is there anything to be said disparagingly about the advisers whom it is proposed to employ. But to what purpose? When they have reported, the Legislature will not adopt their work. The Legislature has a fresh and good report in the form of the Mills Commission's, but it does not occur to anybody to act upon it. There was another commission report in 1893, and another in 1871. There were also many reports by the State Assessors, and at least one good report by the 1913 Tax Board of this city. Why another report? Why not action on the reports already in hand? There can be no reason except the disposition of the Legislature to be rid of a subject which it is its duty to dispose of itself or admit its unreadiness and unfitness. It is the duty of Legislatures to legislate, not to appoint commissions. If the Governor wishes to do something which would make his administration one to date from, he could do nothing better than to see that the amendment of the tax laws is completed, if not this year, then before Dec. 31, 1920.

WHY STOP WITH "STOP"?

The great importance of the prohibition amendment lies in its demonstration that you can do anything with or through the Constitution. But this does not seem to have been appreciated by some of our public men, among them Senator POINDEXTER of Washington, who while reading a telegram in the Senate the other day paused to remark: "This telegram is transcribed in that miserable style in which the word 'stop' or 'period' is interpolated throughout, as though one did not know how to punctuate a telegram."

Why merely animadvert upon this, unless it was only disapproval of the argument of the telegram transferred to its style? A weapon is ready to the hand of those who disapprove of anything; particularly of anything which, like the word "stop," or the still more heinous usage, "quote" and "unquote," is found convenient by those who use and pay for it. Amend the Constitution! Whatever is, is wrong! The use of "stop" to indicate the end of a sentence has been found advantageous in newspaper offices, but if it offend the Senatorial sensibility, out with it. And why stop there? Why the dash, "the solecism of punctuation"? Why the semicolon, first aid to the involutions of ponderosity? Why any punctuation at all? Abolish it by constitutional amendment.

It cannot be done at once, for several new amendments are on the way. The campaign for the Nineteenth, to abolish tobacco, is already begun. After a speaker in this city the other night advocated the destruction of the domestic cat a committee at once sat down to frame Amendment Twenty, providing for the slaughter of the pet of the hearth rug. Somewhere our moral forces are gathering behind Amendment Twenty-one, requiring that evening gowns shall be high-necked and that bathing suits shall extend to the ankles. But Senator POINDEXTER can still get in line with Amendment Twenty-two, in appropriate typographical disarray:

> After one year from the date of ratification of this article the use of punctuation or of the words stop or period in lieu thereof within the United States or the Territories subject to their jurisdiction is prohibited Congress and the several States shall have power to enforce this article by concurrent legislation

It will be another step forward, and a mighty one, in our progress toward the destined pinnacle of rectitude and unintelligibility.

CONSERVATIVE GAINS IN PRUSSIA

In the elections for the Prussian Constitutional Convention the Majority and Minority Socialists and the Democrats seem to have lost somewhat as compared with the elections for the National Assembly. There are so many parties and the motives and intentions of some leaders of them are so obscure or subject to suspicion that any large or even positive conclusion from the as yet incomplete returns is unjustified. That the Majority Socialist vote should be somewhat reduced is natural enough. Some dissatisfaction with the weakness and tardiness of the Ebert Government in dealing with the Spartacan revolutionists might have been expected. Doubtless the Majority Socialist Party, as surely the leading party, and the responsible party of order, got adherents in the general elections who were not in sympathy with its policies. As Germans, such voters may have regarded the Majority Socialists as, for the purposes of those elections, essentially bourgeois, which was true.

In the Prussian elections it was inevitable that Prussian conservatism should manifest itself, having the opportunity. Moreover, the design attributed to, if denied by, the Government, of partitioning Prussia, was sure to arouse opposition and offend pride. All classes in Prussia are more or less affected with this feeling. The former Conservatives and ineffective National Liberals are said to chuckle over the decline not only in the vote of the two Socialist parties but of the Democratic Party, and to see therein a loss to the radicals. So long as the Democratic Party numbers among its members such survivors of the imperialist régime as the egregious Count VON BERNSTORFF, Dr. SOLF, Prince MAX of Baden, its "radicalism" will be queried by the cautious. That it suffered some losses, that the old Centrists and the Nationalists made slight gains, seems of little moment. What is again obvious is that the so-called bourgeois parties greatly outnumber the Socialists. What is important is that the Independent Socialists don't amount to much.

The Majority Socialists, if they form a bloc with the Democrats, will control the Prussian Convention. Various blocs are possible, and the elements of reaction are by no means confined to the official parties that are tainted with or suspected of it. The bourgeois are "on top." The revolutionary movement was the product of a fanatical but weak minority. Already conservatism in almost a political sense shows a confident face in Prussia. But the old nebulousness and unreality linger still in the new parties. They are awaiting a situation yet to come and a form of government yet to be established. That Prussia should continue to be conservative, but should become reasonably so, untouched with the old obscurantism, is not undesirable. A conservatism that broadens is to be preferred on every ground to a radicalism that contracts into reaction. It remains to be seen how honestly the reactionaries will play their game. They are in a minority, but the bloc system makes strange bedfellows.

JAPAN AND CERTAIN PACIFIC ISLANDS.

Purely for purposes of verification or denial, for the use of the historian looking back to Japan's occupation of the Marshall and Caroline Islands in 1914, it may be interesting to students of the war, and to Australians in particular, to recall the statement made by The London Daily News in an editorial article printed on Nov. 19, 1914:

> Japan's offer to hand over to Australia the islands which she has recently occupied in the Pacific is an extremely generous and honorable one, which deserves, and will, we hope, receive, full recognition in Australia and the United States. * * * Japan's offer remains a striking example of the dignity and common sense which she has more than once exhibited before.

If the last sentence is, perhaps, unconsciously a little patronizing, the first does something like justice to a nation of the finest intelligence and of a chivalrous spirit. Dignity, generosity, and uncommon sense are qualities that we expect of Japan. It is not for the repetition of these commonplaces that the reference of our London contemporary to a piece of the forgotten history of that memorable and crowded year of 1914 is here brought to mind. It is for the refreshing of Japanese and Australian memories on a subject now a part of the colonial settlement, or international colonialism, under discussion at Paris. Moreover, through some lapse in the continuity of the record, if the record contains the offer in question, we are unable to verify it. Doubtless The London Daily News can fill the gap.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.

The Milwaukee Sentinel makes a strong but futile argument in favor of electing JULIUS KAHN to the Speakership. It says that he is "decidedly on the eligible list," and points out with force his unmistakable qualification for the place. It is a waste of time to dwell on Mr. KAHN's qualifications—everybody knows them—and it is a mistake to say that he is on the eligible list. He ought to be, but he isn't. The Republican Party almost invariably passes over its conspicuously fit men for geographical reasons and takes its Speakers from the Middle West, just as the Democratic Party takes them from the South. Only in some extraordinary case like that of BLAINE or REED does the Republican Party ever go to the coast, and the Pacific Coast is just as ineligible in that party's narrow-minded calculations as the Atlantic Coast. California or Massachusetts may abound in eminent men, but that makes no difference; the Republicans would rather have a mediocrity from the prairies. And yet what a soul-filling satisfaction patriotic Americans would feel if that sound American JULIUS KAHN could be Speaker. It would do more to rehabilitate the Republican Party than all the efforts of Mr. HAYS, intelligent and well directed as those efforts are.

Passing by counsels of perfection, the need of the nation and the Republican Party is the defeat of a man whose record is the antithesis of Mr. KAHN's on the subject of Americanism. "I think we ought to maintain peace at all hazards," said JAMES R. MANN. At all hazards? What did he mean by all hazards? Can anybody imagine a thoroughgoing American saying that? Can anybody imagine JULIUS KAHN saying it? Colonel GEORGE HARVEY points out that while the net Republican gain in elections to Congress last year was 84 per cent., the net Republican loss in Mr. MANN's district was 47 per cent. It does not seem to be of much use to appeal to the Americanism of a party that elected GEORGE W. NORRIS, ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, and ASLE J. GRONNA to the Senate, but surely that party must be open to reason on the subject of loss of votes. It has the opportunity to damn itself or save itself. To damn itself no great turpitude is required—only foolishness.

THE BOLIVIAN SEACOAST.

Bolivia's claims to the littoral territory ceded to Chile in 1884 may be a proper subject for arbitration, but the intention which a Paris dispatch attributes to her of setting up a claim for it "under the doctrine of "President WILSON that nations are "entitled to an outlet to the sea," is curious. There is no such "doctrine" in the Fourteen Points, unless Bolivia argues that because Poland and Serbia should have "free and secure access to the sea," therefore Bolivia should.

The economic strangulation of the Balkan States and of Poland by the Central Powers is a special problem requiring the special solution which Mr. WILSON proposes. Should Bolivia be threatened with a similar fate at the hands of Chile, doubtless the League of Nations would furnish the remedy, insist that the economic barrier be removed. There is no "doctrine" of Mr. WILSON that applies in the sense assumed by Bolivia, if there be some obiter dictum upon which she relies. The proposal, if serious, is but a revival of the Peruvian-Bolivian case against Chile. By the treaty of 1904 with Chile, Bolivia has access to the sea, the right to build Custom Houses.

Switzerland, too, is reported, correctly or incorrectly, to have made some rather shadowy proposals, as if it were the duty of the Peace Conference to put inland countries on the seacoast. Freedom of communication and outlet there must be for them; but some of the prattle about access to the sea brings to mind the grandee of an inland Massachusetts town whose commerce he was eager to build up. "Mr. Moderator, I move you, "Sir, that East Bridgewater be and "hereby is declared a seaport taown."

A DETECTIVE WANTED.

The "mystery of the Palisades" has stirred into renewed life public curiosity of the sort that makes good detective stories best sellers, but the master detective of fiction has not yet made his appearance. Speculation in this case has turned entirely to the circumstances of the victim's marriage, if she were married, and has almost ignored questions connected with her death. It is assumed that she killed herself, always the easiest supposition, and in this case supported by much evidence. But it should not be forgotten that the woman who identified her body was led to go to see it by a mysterious telephone message from a man who suggested that the unknown dead woman of the Palisades might be a girl whom she had known, not very long and not very well. Who sent this message, and why was he able to suggest this identification? A detective of imagination would grapple eagerly with the problem.

Seventy-seven years ago New York was excited over another "mystery of the Palisades." MARY CECILIA ROGERS, widely known as "the beautiful cigar girl," was murdered near Weehawken and her body thrown into the river. Police and public followed the case for months, but without result. That she had been brutally murdered was evident, but the murderer was not found. It happened that a then obscure literary man in Philadelphia, who had lately lost his job as a magazine editor and who had previously tried his hand at the then novel art of writing detective stories, became interested in the accounts which he read in the New York papers. He had no other source of information but these, but there seem to have been no effective libel laws in those days, and a paper could express pointedly its suspicions. This impecunious fiction writer, by name EDGAR ALLAN POE, read the papers, exploded their theories and evolved one of his own, and embodied it in a story called "The Mystery of Marie Roget." And a long time afterward the confessions of the criminals revealed the fact that he was right.

POE, thou shouldst be living at this hour. New York hath need of thee; she is a den of dull detectives. Only a few days apart, and a few miles apart, two women were brutally murdered in the Long Island boroughs. There were a number of points of resemblance between the cases, but, above all, the fact that in each case the murderer had taken away the glove from the victim's left hand. The science of psychopathology was not very far advanced in POE's day, but he knew as much about it as any one; and the problem of the missing gloves would have given him intellectual pleasure of the keenest sort. What is more, he would probably have found the murderer. POE lived three-quarters of a century too soon. If he had been born, say, in 1880, he would by now be head of a national detective agency, with gold-plated offices in a downtown skyscraper, and would be making so much money out of his practice that he could afford to take a few hours off each day to write what he liked. He might not be a classic, for a living writer can hardly become a classic unless he cultivates a somewhat ponderous and inhuman state of mind; but he would be prosperous, and he might make it somewhat safer to live in the outlying parts of New York.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Winter Still May Come. Among the most ancient and deeply implanted of human fears is that of arousing the jealousy of the gods by making vaunt of prosperity or good luck. The modern expression of that fear is apt to take the form of "knocking wood," and it pretends to be wholly humorous, but there is something of reality in it, as anybody can find out, to mention only one of several ways, by asking a sea Captain who has never been wrecked what he thinks about the wisdom of dwelling upon, or even mentioning, the fact that he has escaped—as yet.

Something of the old timidity creates a certain reluctance to comment on the weather that has marked this Winter, and still marks it. Here it is the beginning of February, and the absence of snow is only one of several climatic favors this part of the country has enjoyed. There have been a few snowless Winters before, but the records do not contain any other with a continuous temperature hardly lower than autumnal or vernal. February is before us, however, and that is a month in which convincing imitations of the arctic can be given by the weather's clerk when he tries, and he usually does. Also, the Great Blizzard came well along in March, and that month is still some way off.

Incidentally, there may be protection in noting the fact that such unseasonable warmth as we have been enjoying, while it is excellent for the preservation of scanty coal piles, is not good at all for fruit buds of the tenderer sorts. Should they be deceived into thinking Spring has come, we should hear again the familiar news that the peach crop is ruined and the wheat crop lamentably diminished.

Illusions About the Weather. This Winter, coming, as it does, the immediate successor of a Winter exceptionally severe, is likely to confirm in many minds the false belief that there is, within periods more or less brief, a balancing of the weather account—in other words, that a dry season is followed by a wet one and great heat by equally great cold. On this illusion amateur meteorologists base numberless prophecies, and, after the manner of their kind, they remember all such predictions that come true and forget all those that time proved to have been untrue.

As a matter of fact, of course, it is easy to make up averages of temperature and precipitation from the records of what the weather has been for any given number of years during which observations have been taken. If the given number of years is large enough, such averages constitute a reasonable and fairly accurate basis of belief as to what the like averages will be for like periods in the future for the region covered. They tell, however, as little about what the weather for any particular year will be as the record of numbers on which the ball of a roulette wheel has fallen tells about those on which it is going to fall next—which is nothing at all, though nothing is harder than to make real gamblers admit it.

Because the Winter, thus far, has been strangely mild need cause no special anxiety as to the remainder of the season. It may be cruelly cold, with lots of snow, but, for all that is known by even the wisest watchers of the weather, this February is just as likely—and just as unlikely—as any other February to emulate or surpass the suavity of the January which has so astonished us. Presumably there is a weather cycle, but if so, it is a very long one, and nobody has yet discovered with any definiteness when it begins or ends. Much has been learned about the nature and movements of storms that are, as is said of navies, "in being," but how and why and where storms originate, in any strict sense of that word, are among the problems on which the scientists are working, as yet, with more of hope than of success.

American Soldiers Vindicated. Those of us who, when there came from Paris the terrible tale of murders and robberies committed there by American soldiers, hazarded the assertion that the criminals probably were not American soldiers, or even Americans at all, can take some modest credit to ourselves. Not only has confidence in our men abroad been justified by the later information now at hand, but with it comes confirmation of the theory that the evil deeds had been perpetrated by men with no right to wear the American uniforms they somehow had managed to acquire.

Not only do the Parisian police officials admit that both of these theories are in accord with the facts, but they also assert that there has been in the French capital no such "crime wave" as was described. The thirty-four murders, for instance, are reduced by investigation to two, and there has been a similar decrease in the number of automobiles stolen and of wayfarers held up.

It is only natural that Paris at this time should contain not only the vicious element normally present in every large city, but a considerable number of what may be called international criminals—men and women superior in intelligence and enterprise to the majority of their class. Such people read the papers and they know by experience the opportunities for the practice of their several industries that exist wherever a multitude of strangers are gathered to engage in unaccustomed activities.

That purses are in more than usual danger on "circus day" is a familiar observation in every country town, not at all because the circus folk are a particularly wicked lot, but because of the crowds they attract and the disturbed conditions they create. A much greater troubler of the waters is the Peace Conference, and inevitably there are many anglers seeking to profit by the good fishing such waters proverbially provide.

What Others Scorn Is Approved. Just why Manchester should have a welcome so ready and so warm for the Barnard Lincoln it is not easy to divine. The merit of the statue, however, is a question on which Manchester has the best of rights, or at least an undeniable right, to its own opinion, and it is under no compelling obligation to hold this work of art as uncouth, repulsive, and untrue, just because other people have done so.

But the justly and variously celebrated Manchester Guardian finds, or seems to find, an explanation of the mystery in the fact that more patiently than the rest of England did Lancashire endure the hardships imposed on British workers by the American civil war. That only makes darkness darker, for one would expect a special appreciation of what LINCOLN did to inspire a specially strong demand for a statue of him revealing the heroic qualities which, according to all who knew him, he revealed as well as possessed, and not one that exaggerates into falsity the smallness of his endowment with the more obvious physical graces.

But it's all right—it must be. Manchester "knows what it likes," in sculpture as in other things, and it is not surprising that those who like the Barnard Lincoln like it much.

A Prohibition Question.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

According to the prohibition law, no one is allowed to make any intoxicating beverage. The word "make" requires adjudication, perhaps. The farmer who squeezes out a barrel of apple juice does not "make an intoxicating beverage," but it becomes that in a couple of months. If we cannot have cider, what will the cooks do for vinegar? We must first have the intermediate step as an intoxicating beverage.

Mr. Bryan's Idea.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your paper of Jan. 21, under the heading "League Structure Becomes More Definite," appears this sentence: "The general plan which is most talked about now embodies the treaties negotiated by William Jennings Bryan." If this statement is a fact, why should not Mr. Bryan be invited to participate in the making of this wonderful League of Nations? A. H. K.

THE WOMEN'S WELCOME.

Those in Army Hospital Work Claim Our Recognition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In these days when the returning soldiers rightly claim a first place in public attention, are we not, probably unwittingly, doing an injustice to the hundreds and thousands of equally brave American women officially attached to the army hospitals abroad? Those who have gone over for the Y. W. C. A., for rehabilitation work, for relief of devastated Belgium and France, for canteen work, and similar service under the auspices of the numerous private relief organizations have been praised, and rightly, for their work. But those women have been practically free to return when they pleased and to select their place and kind of work.

But how about the great number who are directly enlisted under our War Department in the military hospitals? They all volunteered, none were drafted; they have been directly subject to military orders at all times; though not in the trenches, they have been stationed in areas constantly subject to air raids; they have been on duty seven days a week for months, with only such short and infrequent "leaves" as the commanding officer saw fit to grant; they have been denied (because they are women) the right or privilege of commissions as officers, no matter how deserving. The newspapers and magazines seem to ignore their existence, and now even the War Department in its published lists of returning regiments, brigades, and divisions rarely mentions a hospital unit by definite designation. Our American cities are organizing great committees to welcome home the returning "boys," but the returning women seem destined to creep back into their home country, unheralded by the Government, unnoted by the newspapers, and almost unthanked for their service.

Our women in the Army Hospital Service, while they enlisted for work, not for praise, do not understand this seeming indifference.

Y. M. C. A. COMPLAINTS.

A Correspondent Attributes Them to a Lack of Business Method.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Sunday, Jan. 19, there was an interesting article dealing with the complaints against the Y. M. C. A. and endeavoring to explain them away on the ground of the difference in religious belief or code between the "Y" workers and the men of the A. E. F. While this was illuminating to me as touching upon a phase not within my personal observation while in France, Belgium, and England as a correspondent, I do not believe the article goes to the root of the matter.

Differences in a religious sense there undoubtedly were, but the actual cause of the "Y's" principal difficulties as I saw, felt, and understood them on the ground, in the front lines as well as in the cities and the country behind, throughout the United States and right in the "Y" headquarters building itself on Madison Avenue, was pure inefficiency—inability, if you will, to conduct secular and commercial affairs with ordinary business sense, accuracy, and promptness.

Nobody with whom I have come into personal contact in the "Y" was anything but honest, upright, 100 per cent. devoted to the job in hand. I honor and admire the men I have met and with whom I have been privileged to work on behalf of the Y. M. C. A. But mon Dieu! When it came to the simplest business transaction they simply were "not there," except in the financial department. They do pay their bills right on the dot, and without question. System they know nothing of, co-ordination of effort is an esoteric art to be shunned, practical "horse sense" something to be marveled at in others but not encouraged.

These are the true reasons for the charges and the friction, the discontent of the men whom the "Y" tried so hard, so nobly, to serve.

It is a tremendous pity that faith and works do not seem to pair well. A religious organization rarely understands or practices business methods. The foundation of the Y. M. C. A.'s inefficiency, moreover, is certainly not due to any malice or prejudice, but, more than anything else, to its expansion from a mere loose collection of athletic-religious clubs, scattered all over the nation, into an international corporation attempting to purvey everything from chewing gum to salvation in a dozen languages, by means of men who were experts at salvation and infants in worldly experience. Necessarily the expansion overnight brought in men who were hopelessly incompetent for everything but religious work, pure and simple, which was, as it happened, the least important thing to the armies. Consequently, while religion flourished mightily, the physical and practical side was either neglected or badly done.

It was a pity, a tremendous pity, that nobody at headquarters (where I personally came in contact with some of the very stupidest of all the blundering) had business vision and a firm hand. But what is done is done. As a whole nation we blundered, often and gravely. Let us be glad on the whole that the "Y" did as well as it did.

THE MENACE.

If the dread time comes and the crimson flag
Flaunts the news that its day is born;
If the Stars and Stripes for this grim red rag
From the topmost staff must be torn;
When we see the banner our fathers gave,
Trampled down in the gutter's slime,
And the sign of all that is true and brave
Mocked and scorned in that mob-crazed time—

Where shall Freedom hide from the scarlet shame?
Is there sanctuary on earth
For her sons who were pledged to her sacred name
From the hour when she gave us birth?
Can we gaze with eyes that the flaming tears
Do not sear with the smart and burn,
At the flag, unstained through our country's years,
That the feet of the rabble spurn?

But this must not be, for the very dead
Who have died for the flag—these men,
Though their wounds reopen and still run red—
Would come back to the fight again!
They would tear the false flag from staff and pole—
Woe to them who would say them nay!
They would raise Old Glory up over all
Though the fiends of earth barred the way.

Strike this crimson shape ere its ugly tongue,
With the filth of its poisoned breath,
Spreads the fatal stuff that is deadly strong—
Shameful words that spell sin and death.
Truth and honor and love are the trusts we hold—
Dare we wait for their threatened fate?
No—with word and sword and a purpose bold
Kill this Thing ere it grows too great!

LOTOS CLUB LOAN EXHIBIT.

Work of Great XVIIth Century Painters on View to Guests.

Not for many a long year has anything been seen in New York finer than the great loan exhibition of Dutch, Flemish, Spanish, and Italian seventeenth century paintings now on view to invited guests at the Lotos Club. The late Mr. Lawrence felt before his death that a higher standard of exhibitions for the club should be achieved and the present magnificent assemblage of masterpieces marks the carrying out of his idea and the initiation of a new policy on the part of the Art Committee.

The contributors to the exhibition are well known collectors, Michael Friedsam, Manton Metcalf, William A. Clark, S. de Jonge, Edward Drummond Libbey, John N. Willys, Elbert H. Gary, Samuel Untermyer, John McCormack.

The painters represented are Brouwer, Miranda, Albert Cuyp, Flinck, Hals, Pieter de Hooch, Thomas de Keyser, Maes, Rembrandt, Rubens, Van Ruisdael, Steen, Terborch, Teniers, Tintoretto, Van Dyck, and Velasquez.

The place of honor is held by "La Tabagie," painted by Brouwer, and lent by Mr. Friedsam, a picture in which the wanton artist has commemorated the pleasantest side of his wild life in taverns and also the fullest splendor of his great talent, besides preserving for us the portraits of himself and his companions, Hals, Ostade, and Aris de Vois. Upon either side of this brilliant performance is a painting by Rembrandt, one the often described "Pilgrim at Prayer," lent by Mr. Willys, the other the "Marquis d'Andelot," or "The Warrior Putting On His Armor," lent by Judge Gary, a work of 1634, when the young Rembrandt was in the realistic mood of his early years, stirred by objective beauty strikingly original and personal in his expression, and confident of his mighty powers, a picture offering a vivid contrast to the reflective pathos of the kneeling "Pilgrim."

The other Rembrandts are "Rembrandt's Sister," lent by Mr. McCormack, the enchanting portrait of a girl with red frizzled hair in a black bodice embroidered in gold, with a simple white collar at the throat, from the Marquis de Carcano's collection; Mr. Libbey's "Portrait of the Artist," painted when Rembrandt was about leaving Leyden for the larger world of Amsterdam, and the "Portrait of a Man" from Lord Ashburton's collection, lent by William A. Clark, a painting of noble vigor and powerful chiaroscuro.

The Dutch school is well represented. In addition to the Rembrandts, four examples of Frans Hals are shown, Mr. Huntington's portrait of Joseph Coeymans; a "Laughing Boy," small, blond, and joyous, a marvelous example of vivacious brushwork belonging to Mr. Willys; Judge Gary's "A Young Cavalier," and the splendid "Flute Player," belonging to Mr. Libbey, a composition built on a diagonal and exultant mood. There are also two examples of Niclaes Maes, Mr. Friedsam's "A Woman Making Lace" and a portrait belonging to Mr. Untermyer. Gerard Terborch is represented by the distinguished small portraits of a man and woman, belonging to Mr. Clark; Jan Steen by Mr. de Jonge's "Le Pigeonnies," one of the artist's rare and ingratiating outdoor subjects in which satire and boisterous humor are laid aside and an idyl of rustic life is tenderly expressed; Thomas de Keyser by two fine portraits belonging to Mr. de Jonge, and Govaert Flinck by a "Portrait of Menasseh Ben Israel."

"A Music Party," by Pieter de Hooch, lent by Mr. Willys, is an extraordinary example of the treatment of reds in varying tones and shades, the apartment in which the six figures are placed being hung with red draperies and red appearing in the costumes heightened by vivid yellows.

The brighter and more delicate side of the Dutch landscape is recorded with exquisite precision and a quiet palette in Albert Cuyp's "Landscape and Cattle," lent by Mr. Clark, and the "Pasturage," lent by Mr. de Jonge, and its richer beauty in Jacob van Ruisdael's "Landscape," from Mr. de Jonge's collection. Brouwer's pupil, David Teniers, is represented by Mr. McCormack's "The Flirtation," a pleasant silvery bit of genre, informed by a gentle sentiment.

The great Rubens, too scantily represented in American collections, also is here. Mr. Willys has lent his "Suzanne Fourment," and Mr. Untermyer his "Festival of the Gods," rich in color and gayety of spirit, adorning the wall on which it hangs as though it were a lusty garland from a Flemish garden. Mr. Untermyer also lends his "Portrait of a Lady," by Van Dyck.

Judge Gary's noble Tintoretto, the "Portrait of a Young Man," reflects the highest aristocracy of Italian art. This young figure, clad in black, simple, unassuming, an almost deprecating sweetness of expression resting on the delicate features, commands the exhibition with its dignity of aspect. The picture was recently purchased from the Marchesa Spinola of Genoa, who was induced to sell it before the Italian Government should place it on the Index, thereby preventing its sale out of Italy.

Mr. Libbey's witty and brilliant Velasquez, the "Man with a Wine Glass," a lovely "Portrait of a Girl," belonging to Mr. Willys, also a Velasquez, and a "Portrait of a Lady," by Carreno de Miranda, lent by Mr. Metcalf, comprise the Spanish section of the exhibition, which should be seen by every one fortunate enough to receive a card of invitation.

Course of Study in Art Museum.

A course of study of the paintings of the Metropolitan Museum of Art planned for those who wish to learn how to judge and enjoy paintings is announced by the Department of Extension Teaching of Columbia University. Instruction will be given by George Kriehn, lecturer in the history of art, and is a part of the Fine Arts course of Columbia University, but may be taken by persons not enrolled students. The lectures will be given in the Metropolitan Museum, and readings will be assigned where desired with the use of the Metropolitan Library. The course embraces the technical qualities of painting as well as the meaning of pictures and the treatment will be in historic sequence. The course will start on Feb. 7, and applications should be addressed to the Secretary of Columbia University.

An Appeal.

The influenza epidemic robbed many homes—rich and poor alike—but there were few left more desolate than a little tenement on the upper east side. Mrs. P. had for a long time suffered from a serious stomach trouble and so has required her husband's continual care and attention. Now he is dead and she, ill as she is, is faced with the responsibility of supporting herself and her two babies—2-year-old Jerry and little Michael, who was born in October. The Charity Organization Society appeals for $270 to help the P.'s through the next six months. Contributions sent to the office of the society at 105 East Twenty-second Street will be promptly acknowledged.

SEE GOOD, ALSO BAD, IN PRACTICE MANUAL

Bar Association Committee Reports on Proposed Simplification of Court Procedure.

SHORTENS EXISTING CODE

But Changes in Arrangement and Phraseology May Lead to Confusion, It Is Said.

The special committee of the Bar Association, appointed in 1915 to consider the simplification of the rules of practice in the courts and to report on a practice manual proposed by the Joint Legislative Committee appointed at Albany, made public its conclusions yesterday.

The committee, now composed of John Godfrey Saxe, Chairman; Phoenix Ingraham, Secretary, and John A. Garver, Louis Marshall, Herbert C. Smyth, and Nelson S. Spencer, drew up the report after studying the proposed practice manual, conferences with the Joint Legislative Committee and committees of other bar associations and organizations, and after holding a public hearing.

The report states that a majority of the committee believes there is enough merit in the practice manual to justify its enactment, and says: "But in balancing its merits with resultant disadvantages your committee cannot so strongly recommend its adoption as it could have done if the Joint Legislative Committee had seen fit to propose a more radical simplification of the code. The committee therefore concurs with the committee of the State Bar Association in its report that in view of the indubitable advance toward a simplified practice which would be accomplished if the plan of the joint committee were adopted, we do not feel that this association (the State Bar Association) should range itself among those opposing it."

The Bar Association committee reports that the minority of the committee believes the best result could be obtained by eliminating from the present code all matters of substantive law and by amending existing sections rather than by the proposed recasting of the entire Code of Civil Procedure, until something approaching the brevity and clearness of the old Field Code adopted in 1848, and repealed in 1877, containing only 301 sections, is presented.

The present code contains 3,384 sections, while the section numbers of the proposed manual run to 2,144, but many of the sections have been shortened and many long sections divided into two. In the words of the Bar Association committee, the proposed manual will be materially shorter, more compact, and more intelligible than the existing code. It will change the numbering of every section and lawyers will not only be obliged to study and learn the new provisions of law, but, according to the report, "substantial changes in arrangement and phraseology may lead to much confusion and difficulty in referring to reported decisions under the existing arrangement, while slight verbal changes will raise new questions of construction and will add to the great volume of litigation upon questions of practice, resulting in a period of uncertainty while the construction of the new provisions is in progress."

The report of the committee makes this further comment:

"Any and all attempts at reform in procedure have been opposed, on the one hand, by those who insist on preserving the present code and object vigorously to anything except gradual amendments, and by those, on the other hand, who favor a short practice act of a few sections, leaving all other matters of practice and procedure to court rules. After numerous hearings and conferences, and a very full consideration of the subject, the Joint Legislative Committee has adopted a middle course. It has simplified the code and proposes in its place a practice manual to be supplemented by court rules. It preserves in statutory form provisions as to rights of action and practice in the course of an action, but leaves to court rules the details of procedure. While this may be attacked as a compromise, it is, in the opinion of your committee, a plan which has a scientific as well as a reasonable basis."

NEW POLICIES FOR SOLDIERS

Government to Offer Six Forms of Insurance to Them.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Conditions under which soldiers or sailors holding Government life insurance may convert these policies within five years into other forms were announced to-day by Colonel Henry D. Lindsley of the War Risk Insurance Bureau. Rates will be made public soon, and the new policies will not be available until then.

There will be six different kinds of insurance—ordinary life, twenty-payment life, thirty-payment life, twenty-year endowment, thirty-year endowment, and endowment payable at the age of 62. All policies will contain clauses providing that in case of permanent total disability of the insured man the Government will make monthly payments to him and premium payments will cease. This amounts virtually to old-age pensioning and disability insurance, and insures that no man who has served in the Army or Navy need ever de destitute if he carries the Government insurance.

All policy holders will participate in dividends, and earnings of over 3½ per cent. from the insurance fund will go into dividends. Since the reserves will be invested in Government securities, most of which will pay in the neighborhood of 4½ per cent., it is certain that there will be large dividends to be returned periodically to policy holders.

Collections of premiums will be made through postmasters in each community.

Up to to-day 34,969 awards had been made on deaths of insured soldiers and sailors for amounts aggregating $294,720,000.

PAY FOR ARMY OF 500,000.

House Military Committee Makes This the Basis of Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—An army of 500,000 men was unanimously decided on today by the House Military Committee as the basis for determining the appropriation for army pay for the year beginning next July. Committee members said the number was expected to be the average force during the year.

The decision marked the beginning of the committee's work of framing the annual Military Appropriation bill. Members said it had no bearing on permanent future military policy, and that while pay was figured for a half million men, it did not follow that appropriations for various branches of service would be such as to provide for an army actually organized as a permanent force of that size.

During the earlier part of the year, it was said, the army was expected to exceed the half million mark, but would be reduced below that number with demobilization. Although no final decision was reached by the committee, it appeared that no effort would be made to outline a permanent army reorganization plan at this session of Congress.

ARRAIGN CONDITIONS IN CITY HIGH SCHOOL

Education Association Investigators Find It Unsanitary and Generally Unclean.

BAD MORAL EFFECT ON BOYS

Unable to Get Board of Education to Act—Other Schools Said to be Worse, Says Report.

Damp and grimy walls, an unsanitary lunchroom, foul air, a swimming pool in which the water is changed only twice a week, although it is used by hundreds of boys every period in the day; a generally unclean building which can have nothing but a bad moral effect on both teachers and pupils—these are the conditions amid which 2,000 New York boys live during six hours of the day, according to a report issued yesterday by the Public Education Association in connection with its investigation of the High School of Commerce, in Sixty-fifth Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue.

Every count in the arraignment is confirmed by the Principal of the school, Dr. Arthur M. Wolfson, who in most cases testifies that he has again and again urged that the conditions should be improved, but that it has been impossible to get the Board of Education to act.

The report was made to the Public Education Association by a committee consisting of Mrs. Emil L. Boas and Mrs. Walter L. Jonas, whose findings were submitted to the Principal for comment.

"The High School of Commerce is pretty bad," says the report, "but the Julia Richman High School is said to be worse! If you are interested in younger children, we can send you to an elementary school that will make your heart sick.

Can't Stir Board of Education.

"Is it possible that there may be many other buildings of a similar character? The City Superintendent has instituted a city-wide investigation through the Principals to find out. Meanwhile this report on the High School of Commerce will furnish ample suggestions for action by the authorities, and serve as an example of how a frank and courageous Principal can solicit real aid for his pupils and teachers."

According to Dr. Wolfson, the condition of the building is primarily due to two causes. In the first place, the pay of the janitor is such that he cannot hire or keep efficient help to maintain the building in a state of cleanliness. Second, all attempts to get the Board of Education to make repairs have been fruitless, and as a result the whole plant has deteriorated to the point where it is not fit for habitation.

The association minces no words in describing the conditions found to exist. With regard to the condition of the building as a whole it says: "The stairway and corridors generally throughout the building are very dirty. Chewing gum is tramped into the floor, glass windows along the stairways are cracked and broken in many places. Locker rooms are evidently never swept or cleaned. Dust in all the classrooms is very thick. Windows are streaked with dirt.

"Instructors testified that cleaning is done by means of feather dusters and dry floor brushes. Sometimes oil is used to 'catch the dust.' Windows are cleaned on rare occasion by dashing water on them and then brushing it down with a whiskbroom. No sweeping or mopping is done under the desks or tables. When these pieces of furniture were shoved out of position slightly for the committee's inspection, the accumulation of dirt and refuse under them was appalling.

"The lunchroom is situated in the basement, and the ventilation is from one window below the street level. The room is dark, the stone floor in many spots damp, and the committee was informed that it is at no time absolutely dry."

Other unsanitary conditions adjoining the lunchroom, which are described in detail, are called "unspeakable."

"The general system of ventilation is absolutely inadequate," the report continues. "The ventilation for the whole building is situated below the street level and does not perform its functions properly. The system is supposed to ventilate the whole building without the necessity of opening windows. The committee found, however, that windows must be opened in order to make conditions in any degree bearable.

"The committee found the air vitiated throughout the whole building even in unoccupied rooms. In the auditorium the air is foul, especially in the gallery. According to one instructor, when it is filled with students, 'a gas mask is necessary.' In one classroom on the third floor seventy-five pupils were accommodated in a room supposed to seat fifty. The air was most offensive, the thermometer broken and no windows open.

"The gymnasium is in the basement, adjoining the lunchroom. It is very dark, low ceilinged, very hot, full of dust, and the air is most foul. In the swimming pool, which is used every period of the day, the water is changed but twice a week. The playground is always damp or wet in places.

"It was also brought to our notice that despite the newspaper announcement that the schools of the city were to be closed the Monday before election day for the purpose of the fumigation of the buildings, the High School of Commerce was not fumigated.

Bad Moral Effect on Students.

"Several instructors stated that in their opinion much of the wanton destructiveness, thievery and general carelessness of the student body was due to the fact that the boys had no respect for their building—its dirty and broken-down conditions having a distinctly bad moral effect."

Although in several instances the principal points out that the statements of the committee are somewhat exaggerated, in the main he holds that they are a true presentation of the facts. The generally unsanitary condition of the building, he says, is a "matter of lack of time, lack of help, and lack of sufficient funds." The windows are cleaned once every two months or ten weeks, and "it would be no exaggeration to say," he admits, "that there are at least 100 or 150 broken glass plates throughout the building."

With regard to the lunchroom he says: "We feel that the committee have not stated the case half strongly enough. For the past year and a half the janitor-engineer and I, and Mr. Hahn, who is in charge of the lunchroom, and all others concerned, have been writing, telephoning, holding personal interviews with various department heads in the Building Department in an effort to have conditions remedied. We have drawn up plans, we have submitted specifications, we have done everything in our power. Nothing short of complete remodeling here will do any good.

"In reference to the committee's statement concerning the bad effect of the existing conditions upon the morals and discipline of the school, we are ready to agree that what they say in the main is true. There is no doubt that the general physical conditions in the building have a lowering effect upon the tone of both instructors and students. It is more than ordinarily difficult, in view of the conditions, to arouse in them pride in their 'home.'"

Miss Phillips to Wed F. J. Dennis.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wright Phillips of Chicago and Los Angeles announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Angelita Phillips, to Frederic James Dennis of this city. Mr. Dennis is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren E. Dennis of 112 East Seventy-fourth Street, and a lawyer. He was graduated from Harvard, class of '12, and belongs to the Union, University, and other clubs. He is at present in Pasadena, Cal., and his parents are to leave in a few days for California to spend the remainder of the Winter.

3,000 AT OLD GUARD BALL.

Veterans Give Their 93d Dance at New Hotel Commodore.

The first big military ball in New York since the armistice was signed took place last night at the new Hotel Commodore, when the Old Guard Veteran Battalion, better known as the Old Guard, celebrated victory with one of the most brilliant assemblies in its long history. It marked the ninety-third reception and ball of the battalion, and was also the first social function to be held in the ballroom of the hotel, which accommodated more than three thousand people last night.

The orchid, white and gold of the ballroom, with a base of emerald green, was an excellent background for the display of the full dress uniforms and the pretty frocks. The splendor of the uniforms was heightened by the presence of many officers of the allied nations and scores of diplomatic and consular officials in broadcloth and gold braid. The Old Guard wore its famous white coat and bearskin shako.

More than two hundred members of the veteran battalion headed the grand march and review, which assembled at bugle call at midnight. Brig. Gen. Harry E. Wilkins, U. S. A., and Rear Admiral Nathaniel R. Usher, U. S. N., reviewed the march from a specially decorated box.

To the marching tune of "Universal Peace," the guard passed the box, followed by the foreign Consuls and Military Attachés, members of the allied army and naval forces, officers of the United States Army and Navy, who were followed by members of the State Guard and veteran organizations. Rear Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee, U. S. N., who headed the Honorary Committee of the ball, was absent on account of mourning.

There were forty-eight numbers in the order of dancing, including the promenade selections, ending in the early hours of the morning with "Till We Meet Again" and the retreat as a finale. All the public rooms on the ballroom floor were called into use for the occasion. In the boxes were delegations from the Honorable Artillery Company of London, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston, the Governor's Foot Guard of New Haven, the National Lancers of Boston, and Major Edward Havemeyer Snyder, commanding officer of the Old Guard, and the honorary and active staff.

Edgar F. Luckenbach Marries Miss Andrea Fenwick at the Ritz.

Edgar Frederick Luckenbach, the President of the Luckenbach Company of this city, and the Commodore of the Atlantic Yacht Club, and Miss Andrea Marie Fenwick, a daughter of the late Andrew A. Fenwick, and niece of the late James Fenwick of Parkdale, Toronto, Canada, were married at noon yesterday in a private drawing room of the Ritz-Carlton, by the Rev. Dr. James M. Farrar. Smilax covered the walls of the drawing room and the two adjoining rooms, and jars filled with apple boughs covered with their pink and white flowers were placed about, and a bower of green lined with pansies, daisies, and roses was the setting for the bride and bridegroom.

Miss Fenwick wore a straight line frock of pale gray panne velvet with point lace around the square neck, a hat of gray faille silk, and carried orchids and lilies. She wore a string of pearls, costing $100,000, the gift of the bridegroom. There were no attendants, and a breakfast for the families followed the ceremony. The honeymoon will be spent in Florida. Their city home will be at Carlton House, and during their absence their country estate adjoining Castle Gould at Sands Point, L. I., is being put in order for them.

Mrs. Luckenbach inherited a fortune from her uncle. This is Mr. Luckenbach's second marriage. His first wife, Mrs. Sue V. Luckenbach, obtained a decree of divorce from him at Houston, Texas, in January, 1915. The previous August they had signed an agreement of separation, in which it was stipulated that Mrs. Luckenbach was to receive $5,000 yearly, and this agreement was not altered by the divorce. His son, John L. Luckenbach, married Miss Lillian Lundbach. Both father and son are members of the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club. Mr. Luckenbach's company owns many steamships.

JUDGE BEAUTY AT GAY BALL.

Women Vie for Golden Apple at Artists' Chu Chin Chow.

There was a riot of Oriental color at the Chu Chin Chow Ball held last night at the Hotel des Artistes, 1 West Sixty-seventh Street, and a brilliant galaxy of feminine beauty. All the famed beauties of prominence were there to take part in the contest for the golden apple, a trophy designed by Stuart Travis, to be presented to the most beautiful woman present.

Like all artistic costume functions, the ball began very late, and the clock struck midnight even before the general dancing commenced. The pageant, arranged by Sacha Votichenko, and called a Russian gypsy pageant, with its weird music, songs, and dances, was staged at 1 o'clock around a realistic campfire in the ballroom.

The town was ransacked by the guests for Chinese and Japanese costumes as no one was admitted without fancy attire.

Ernest D. Anderson was Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and Penrhyn Stanlaws, Howard Chandler Christy, Harrison Fisher, J. Montgomery Flagg, and Charles Dana Gibson the judges for the beauty trophy. The allied arts and society will await today to hear the verdict of this famous group of artists.

J. L. BREESE TO WED AGAIN.

Wealthy New Yorker, 64, to Marry Miss Grace L. Mormand, 23.

No date has been set for the wedding of James Lawrence Breese and Miss Grace Lucille Mormand of 226 West Seventieth Street, who on Thursday obtained at the Municipal Building a license to marry.

Mr. Breese, who resides at 1 West Sixty-seventh Street, is 64 years old, and is wealthy. His first wife, who was the only daughter of General Robert B. Potter, and a niece of Bishop Potter, died two years ago. His fiancée is 23 years old, and is the daughter of Mrs. Roland Mormand, who came to New York to live from Mississippi many years ago. Miss Mormand made her début about five years ago.

Mr. Breese has a married daughter and a son, and he has been keenly interested in photography as an art.

Moore Art Sale Reaches $82,493.

A turquois blue bottle, Chien-lung, 14 inches high, brought the highest price at the Rufus E. Moore sale at the American Art Galleries yesterday afternoon, going to Harris Watson for $750. A yellow K'ang-hsi jar went to Seaman, agent, for $410, and to the same buyer went also a café au lait crackle jar, K'ang-hsi, for $220, and a Ming celadon jardinière for $700. Lorenz, agent, bought two mirror black K'ang-hsi pieces, the one a club-shaped vase for $420 and the other an ovoid vase for $400. A dense celadon jardiniere, Ming, went to H. I. Riker for $475.

The returns for the day were $11,458, making a grand total to date of $82,493. More single color porcelains will be sold this afternoon.

Vaamonde-Sweeney.

Miss Beatrice Frances Sweeney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sweeney of 204 West 121st Street, and Joseph Vaamonde were married yesterday forenoon in St. Thomas's Church, 118th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, with a breakfast afterward at the Hotel Majestic. The couple have gone South on their honeymoon.

Dinner to Mrs. O'Grady.

Arrangements have been completed for a dinner to be given on Monday night at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to Deputy Police Commissioner Mrs. Ellen O'Grady, in celebration of her first year of service as a Deputy Commissioner. The members of the Welfare Bureau of the Police Department have planned the dinner.

NAT C. GOODWIN DIES OF APOPLEXY

Famous Comedian, Briefly Ill, Never Recovered from Operation for Removal of Eye.

ACTRESS AT HIS BEDSIDE

Georgia Gardner, It Was Said, Was to be His Sixth Wife—61, He Began His Notable Career at 17.

Nat C. Goodwin, one of the best known of native American actors, died at the Hotel Claridge early yesterday morning. He was in his sixty-second year. The direct cause of death was a stroke of apoplexy, which, in turn, had been brought on by the shock following the removal of his right eye a little less than two months ago. Mr. Goodwin, following this operation, had rejoined the "Why Marry?" company on tour, and appeared in the play last week in Baltimore. On Sunday, instead of proceeding to Philadelphia with the rest of the company, he came to New York for an additional rest period, which he felt to be necessary as the result of his operation. Not even his intimate friends knew that he was seriously ill.

With the actor at the time of his death were Miss Georgia Gardner, who, it was said, was to have become the sixth Mrs. Goodwin; his physician, Dr. Melvin E. Wolk, and a servant who had been in his employ for many years. Miss Gardner, who was connected with the "Why Marry?" company in the capacity of understudy, had preceded Mr. Goodwin to New York to arrange for his coming here.

At the time of Mr. Goodwin's operation it was denied that the eye had been removed, but friends of the actor said yesterday that he had admitted the fact privately, but had qualified it with the statement that the eye had long been of no use to him. It had not troubled him greatly, however, until he applied to it through error a solution of chloroform several months ago, thereby necessitating the operation. Prior to the operation, although in constant pain, he had continued to play his rôle for several weeks in the Middle West.

Mr. Goodwin is survived by his mother and father, who live in Roxbury, Mass., and three sisters. The father is 92 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin reached New York late last night, and will accompany the body back to Roxbury late today. Funeral services will be held at half-past eleven this morning at the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street. They will be under the auspices of The Lambs, and the service will be read by De Wolf Hopper, who was a lifelong friend of Goodwin. There will be another service when the body is buried in Albany Rural Cemetery in Roxbury.

His Many Adventures.

Although long recognized as one of America's foremost actors, Nat Goodwin's personal eccentricities and the frequency with which his adventures figured in the newspapers in recent years have led the present public to regard him more as a unique personality than as a distinguished actor. In the main, of course, it was his many marriages which brought him public attention, but he figured in the news for other reasons as well. On one occasion, about ten years ago, he announced his retirement from the stage to devote all his time to a mining venture in Nevada, and had a meteoric career in this field, which was suddenly terminated by the collapse of his company. At another time he opened the Café Goodwin in Santa Monica, Cal., and only a year ago he figured extensively in the papers in connection with a suit brought against a motion picture company with which he had been affiliated. Of his various marital adventures, the discovery that he had settled $1,700,000 upon Edna Goodrich prior to their marriage was perhaps the most fruitful from the popular standpoint.

Nathaniel Carl Goodwin was born in Boston on July 25, 1857, and was educated at Farmington, Me. At the age of 17 he made his first appearance at Howard's Athenaeum, Boston, as a newsboy in a play called "Law in New York." It is told of him that upon this occasion he fell unconscious from stage fright immediately after his first entrance.

His Debut Here at Tony Pastor's.

A year and a half later, after considerable experience in Boston and Providence, he made his New York début at Tony Pastor's in a vaudeville sketch. His first appearance here on the legitimate stage took place at the Lyceum Theatre on March 13, 1876, in "Off the Stage," in which he gave imitations of prominent players. A little later he joined E. E. Rice's "Evangeline," and in 1878, with his first wife, Eliza Weathersby, he starred in "Cruets." There followed "Hobbies," "The Member for Slocum," and a long list of other plays, which gradually won him his place as the most popular comedian on the American stage.

His great comedy successes were "A Gilded Fool," "In Mizzoura," "An American Citizen," "Confusion," "Turned Up" and "When We Were Twenty-One." These he played, off and on, throughout the late eighties and the nineties. He appeared both in this country and England, making his appearance in London in 1890 in "The Gold Mine." As recently as 1906 he played "A Gilded Fool" and "An American Citizen" in London.

Played Many Serious Roles.

Although generally known as a comedian, Mr. Goodwin played many serious parts as well, particularly in recent years. He had played two Shakespearean rôles—Shylock and Bottom—and had also appeared here as Fagin in "Oliver Twist." His final appearance here, a year ago, was in "Why Marry?" Many years ago, in a single all-star performance of "Julius Caesar," he won general praise for his reading of Antony.

In recent years Goodwin had been much in vaudeville, where his skill as a raconteur, which had won him fame among his friends, stood him in good stead.

Goodwin was married five times, his wives having been Eliza Weathersby, Nellie Pease, Maxine Elliott, Edna Goodrich, and Margaret Moreland. He was divorced from the last of these only a few months ago.

In August of 1912, following an accident to Goodwin in the surf at Santa Monica, it was falsely reported that he was so severely injured that he would never act again.

SAW TURKISH ATROCITIES.

Elkus Tells of a Maine Girl Who May Give Valuable Testimony.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Hidden in a Maine town is a young American woman who may be the only living eye-witness, except the Turks themselves, of the atrocities practiced upon the Armenians in the enforced deportations from Armenia, and who, by virtue of her knowledge, may some day find herself advanced from a waitress in a Portland restaurant to a position of international importance.

Abram I. Elkus, former American Ambassador to Turkey, told of her in Chicago for the first time today. He declined to make public her name or address, giving as his reason the statement:

"She has escaped a lot of dangers, but it is not too late for something to happen to her yet."

Her testimony would be mainly valuable, Mr. Elkus explained, as evidence that the Turks could control the outrages upon Armenians when they had sufficient reason.

"This young woman had married a barber in Portland," he said, "and had gone with him to his native country to claim a patrimony when the war broke out. She became an eye-witness to the Turkish atrocities, was taken prisoner by the Turks, confined in a prison in Aleppo, and subsequently released on the urgent demand of the American Ambassador and returned to the United States."

WANTS SEPARATE STATE MADE OF THIS CITY

Senator Dunnigan Offers Bill in Albany to Create a New State Called Liberty.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 31.—Senator John J. Dunnigan of New York introduced today a bill in the Senate to create a forty-ninth State out of New York City. The proposed new State would include the counties of New York, Bronx, Kings, Queens, and Richmond. The remainder of the State could, under the terms of the bill retain the name "New York." The proposed new State would be named "Liberty."

The bill contains a provision that the proposal be submitted to the people at the general elections of 1919.

Senator Sage, Chairman of the Finance Committee, introduced a deficiency appropriation bill today, carrying an appropriation of $1,534,221, one-half of last year's total. An additional appropriation of $100,000 is asked for the Manhattan State Hospital.

WAR VETERANS IN COMMONS

250 Among 703 Members of New Parliament—Pacifists Eliminated.

LONDON, Jan. 31, (British Wireless Service.)—Although the ordinary lines of party cleavage will be absent from the new Parliament, the Government will not lack independent critics. The general elections, which marked the disappearance of the pacifist group in the House of Commons, sent back to Westminster in place of the pacifists a body of men who, by reason of their practical experience, are peculiarly well fitted to assist the Government and guide the nation in the transition period.

No less than 250 members of the new House have served in the war in one capacity or another. All ranks in the army will be represented in the new House, from General to Sergeant. Some of the leading Generals in the war will probably soon be elevated to the peerage and take their seats in the upper chamber; but the House of Commons is already assured of the expert knowledge of several prominent officers in debates on the army. Included among these are General Sir Archibald Hunter, Major Gne. Sir J. H. Davidson, Director of Operations under Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, and Lieut. Gen. Sir Aylmer Hunter Weston, a distinguished corps commander under General Plumer of the Second Army.

Other new service members of the House will be Colonel Moore Brabazon, who was the first Englishman to fly a biplane, and Major Cohen, who lost both his legs at Ypres. Three members of the House took part in the naval raid on Zeebrugge. They are Commander Dean, who won the Victoria Cross for gallantry; Commander Hilton Young, who lost an arm in the attack on the mole, and Commander Hamilton Denn.

The navy will be represented also by Commander Douglas King, who was in command of the North Atlantic section of the convoy system.

Of the 703 members comprising the new House of Commons, 338 members will be new to Parliament.

John T. Milliken.

John T. Milliken, who was probably the wealthiest citizen of St. Louis, Mo., brother-in-law of Albert T. Patrick, who was condemned to death for the murder in this city of William Marsh Rice of Houston, Texas, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 35 Portland Place, St. Louis. Mr. Milliken financed the legal fight that save Patrick from the electric chair, paying $100,000 of the $162,687 the case is said to have cost.

Mr. Milliken was President of the Milliken Company, chemists, of St. Louis, Director of the National Bank of Commerce of that city, and a mining and oil operator.

William Henry Abbott.

William Henry Abbott, since January of last year Superintendent of the Lebanon Hospital, in the Bronx, died at 6 o'clock last night at the hospital of pneumonia, following influenza. Mr. Abbott was born in London, England, forty-six years ago, and came to this country with his parents in 1890. He was graduated from Kingston Academy, Kingston, England, and became an architect soon after coming to this country, practicing his profession until 1902, when he was made Tenement House Inspector. Later he was First Deputy Tenement House Commissioner.

In Memory of Cromwell Sisters.

A memorial service will be held at St. Bartholomew's Church next Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock for Misses Gladys and Dorothea Cromwell, war workers, daughters of the late Frederic and Esther Husted Cromwell, who were drowned at sea on Jan. 19, by jumping overboard soon after the French liner Lorraine, on which they had taken passage for New York, left Bordeaux.

BARON L. ROTHSCHILD DIES.

Brussels Banker Who Gave Great Sums for Relief of Belgium.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Baron Lambert Rothschild, a leading Brussels banker who aided in the formation of the Belgian Relief Commission, died in Paris yesterday.

When the Germans occupied Belgium in 1914 and a famine was threatening Brussels because food was unobtainable Baron Rothschild went to London with Hugh S. Gibson, Secretary of the American Legation in Brussels, and guaranteed to pay for 38,000 tons of foodstuffs. The food was purchased through Herbert C. Hoover, now the Director General of Relief. It was the first purchase made by the organization which afterward became the Commission for Relief in Belgium.

Later when General von Bissing, the German Governor General, levied a fine of $10,000,000 on the City of Brussels, the coffers of which were empty, Baron Rothschild came to the rescue and assumed responsibility for part of the tribute demanded by the Germans.

Baron Rothschild's wife died in Paris during the war. She and her husband played a part in bringing Rumania into the war on the side of the Allies. On one occasion a courier being sent to Rumania was intercepted and suspicion was turned against Baroness Rothschild. She escaped arrest only through the intervention of Brand Whitlock, the American Minister, but had to apologize to von Bissing and promised to refrain from such acts in the future. Baron Rothschild himself was held hostage by the Germans in 1914 because he was slow in paying a tribute of $2,000,000. While serving in the Belgian Army Baron Rothschild was wounded severely.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Continue Their Drifting Tendency Under a Light Demand—Auto Issues Improve.

Stocks fluctuated yesterday in a fashion to emphasize more than recently the lack of a definite force in the market. While a broad survey of quotations at the close characterized the market as weak on the whole, still there were enough forward movements on record at the end of the day to show that business had not been by any means one-sided. The automobile stocks were in fair demand, and a number of railroad issues gained ground under moderate purchases. There was nothing in the news developments to stimulate interest one way or the other in the general run of industrial shares, and a small turnover showed that traders were still waiting for something to arrive which would help them form opinions.

The financial community received the plan for returning the railroads to their owners as prepared by the Association of Owners of Railway Securities, and the main features were the subject of comment in the Street. Quite naturally, comparisons were made between salient features of the program and the points raised in the suggestions filed recently with the Senate Committee by the Association of Railway Managers. It was found that in some important respects, in regard to adequate freight rates, to mention one, and also in regard to regional commissions to supervise operations, the plans were parallel. The securities owners would not, however, have Federal incorporation of the railroads, nor a Cabinet officer to be responsible for railroad affairs, nor rate regulations which withheld from the Government initiation and determination of rates. The new proposal provides for a division of profits with employes. A point of much value in respect to the proposal of the securities owners lies in the fact that it has been thoroughly considered by astute legal talent, and gives Congress fresh material to use in working out the future of the carriers. It seems reasonable to believe that in the end a railroad scheme will be completed that combines features of numerous suggestions.

The report of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company for 1918 appeared during the day and made clear some of the factors which necessitated the receivership. In the last six months operating expenses, interest and taxes, increased over $3,000,000, resulting in a fall of more than $2,600,000 in surplus from the total reported for the same period the year before. The six months' surplus was only $11,500. The first half of the year made a much better showing, but the contraction of profits was in evidence all the way along. The annual report bore out previous expectations, and for that reason had little, if any, reflection in the securities of the company.

The money market was in about the same state as the day before. The weekly statement of the Bank of France again attracted notice in banking quarters because of the expansion of circulation. The increase was around $38,000,000, and brought the outstanding notes to the highest level on record. Because of the close connection which exists between French Government financing and the circulation of the Bank of France, the increase of notes indicates that war expenditures continue to run on a high plane.

PIPE LINE PROFITS DROP.

With the exception of the Cumberland Pipe Line Company the reports of four of the segregated pipe line companies of the Standard Oil Company show decreased profits for 1918. The Cumberland Company's gains for the year were $564,054, compared with $487,758 in 1917, while profit and loss as of Dec. 31, 1918, increased to $979,903 from $595,839, and cash increased to $284,561 from $79,284. Dividends amounting to $179,991 were paid in the course of the year, against $148,879 paid in 1917.

The Southern Pipe Line Company reported $2,069,038 in profits for 1918, compared with $2,584,565 in the preceding year, while dividends paid in 1918 decreased to $2,199,999 from $2,399,999. Profit and loss decreased from $2,725,655 in 1917 to $2,594,694.

The Southwest Pennsylvania Pipe Lines reported profit for the year decreased to $295,723 from $388,536 in 1917, with a decrease in profit and loss from $967,887 to $843,611. The balance sheet as of Dec. 31 showed that the company had cash on hand amounting to $123,218, compared with $78,339 in the preceding year.

The Eureka Pipe Line reported a profit of $848,713 for 1918, compared with $1,111,883 in 1917. About $100,000 less was paid in dividends, and profit and loss account as of Dec. 31 showed $4,214,480, against $4,465,767 in 1917. Cash on hand on the last of the year was $191,490, compared with $326,820 the year before.

Bankers and Railroad Clients.

The impression prevails in some local railroad banking quarters that the fiscal relations of long standing between bankers and railway companies is in process of an important change. This has appeared in connection with the decision of the Railroad Administration to go "shopping" for the best available terms in arranging new financing. The sale of $25,000,000 Southern Railway notes to a Western syndicate this week disrupted relations which had existed for years between the company and its New York banking affiliations. Bankers felt prior to the period of Government control that a duty existed to look after the financial interests of railroad clients. The transfer of financing elsewhere, it is learned, is bringing about an altered feeling in this regard which promises to carry in its train some interesting details of future financial transactions on the part of the carriers.

Bank Capital Increases.

The State Banking Department has approved an increase in the stock of the Corn Exchange Bank from $3,500,000 to $4,200,000. The expanding business of the last two years has brought about large bank deposits and increased surpluses with the result that a number of banks and trust companies have either increased their capital or are planning to do so. Within the last month the Bankers Trust Company, the East River National Bank, the Gotham National Bank, and New Netherlands Bank have expanded their capital. The fact that deposits of the Equitable Trust Company, which amounted to more than $217,600,000 at the close of 1918, stand much out of line with the capital of $6,000,000, has aroused expectations that an increase would occur. The question is not expected, however, to come before the Trustees for some time, as President A. W. Krech is abroad.

Lead Price Reduced.

American Smelting and Refining Company has reduced its price for lead from 5½ cents to 5¼ cents per pound. When the downward movement began after the signing of the armistice the quotation was around 7¾ cents a pound.

Copper Miners at Washington.

There was considerable speculation yesterday as to why the copper producers had not been called into the conference at Washington between representatives of the miners and Secretary of Labor Wilson. The wage scale has been a source of worriment to the miners for some time and their delegates have on different occasions held conferences in this city with the copper producers. It was the contention of the miners when here that their pay should be maintained on the basis of 26 cents a pound for copper. This the producers would not accede to.

The Railroad Outlook.

An increase in the passenger traffic of the country has been noted by the Regional Railroad Directors. More important from the standpoint of earnings however, is the fact that the prospect is for an increased freight traffic in certain sections. This is especially true with regard to the wheat carrying roads of the West. Every indication now points to a bumper wheat crop if the lack of a snow covering for the plantings does not eventuate in a "kill" that would seriously affect the yield.

The Cost of Shipbuilding.

Some interesting figures as to the cost of building ships during the war period have been given to the public as a result of the suit brought by the Atlantic Corporation against the Emergency Fleet Corporation. The former company it is said had a contract to build ten 8,800 ton ships at a fixed rate of $160 a ton. The price compares with $60 a ton for similar ships in New England yards in 1913. Testimony in Washington was to the effect that the first ship turned out at Hog Island cost at the rate of $300 a ton and that the cost of subsequent ships was greater than $200 a ton.

A Large Short Interest.

It seems to be generally agreed that there is a large short interest in the market and many of the rallies that have occurred have been attributed to covering operations. That the short interest has not been driven to cover with very marked success may afford food for reflection. On the other hand the sombre reflections which have been evident for some time have momentarily at least lost their effectiveness in bringing out actual stock. The market is best described as lazily drifting. The fact that prices could not be forced down as easily yesterday, as on some days of last week, was construed in some quarters as perhaps indicating a gradual change in opinion. The stock market is credited with that sagacious judgment which discounts the happenings of the future and it is therefore not at all improbable, if this holds true, that the market may show a reversal of sentiment before the business horizon has actually cleared.

Ohio Cities Gas Plans.

Reports from Columbus, Ohio, are to the effect that the Directors of the Ohio Cities Gas Company have authorized an additional issue of $9,187,500 common stock, to which common stock holders of record Feb. 15 will be entitled to subscribe at the par value, $25, to the extent of one-fourth of their holdings on that date. The right to subscribe will expire on March 21. The proceeds derived from this sale of stock, it is said, will be used in part for further development plans of the company in Mexico and Texas. The company is also reported to be contemplating an extension of its foreign business.

Financing Belgium

Cabled advices yesterday spoke of the advancement by the Allies to Belgium of $2,000,000,000 for purposes of reconstruction and to be liquidated out of the German indemnity. In financial circles the belief prevailed that if anything of this sort was done it would be handled as a Government proposition, and would not be brought to Wall Street as a popular offering of securities. However, with such a credit established for Belgium, and with the United States, presumably, participating in it, there would be a good deal of speculation here as to how the money was to be spent. Yesterday the idea seemed to be that if America advances money to Belgium the money would be spent here.

Texas Company Stock.

A report circulated in the financial district yesterday quoted John J. Mitchell, President of the Illinois Trust Company of Chicago, as saying that the stockholders of Texas Company would receive another "melon" within the current year. The company had just issued some new stock, and the Chicago report credited Mr. Mitchell with the flat statement that more would follow. Texas Company, oddly enough, was rather weak in the market, losing something like 2 points on the day.

CHEMICAL EARNINGS DROP.

General Company Reports a Decline in Profits of $3,625,542.

A heavy falling off in earnings is shown in the annual report of the General Chemical Company for the year ended Dec. 31, 1918. The net profits after charges and taxes amounted to $4,045,639, a decline of $3,625,542 from the figures of 1917. After the deduction of preferred dividends there was a balance available for the common stock of $3,133,131, the equivalent of $18.96 a share. This compares with $42.25 a share in the preceding year.

The gross profits of the company were $9,970,260, a decrease of nearly $2,000,000. Charges for taxes were $2,550,000, as compared with $1,[illegible]00,000 in the preceding year. After the payment of common and preferred dividends there was a balance of $1,398,6[illegible], which added to the previous surplus, makes the total surplus of the company $17,117,805. The plant valuation is placed at $43,326,652, as compared with $[illegible]9,620,157 in 1917. The inventory of $10,814,389 is an increase of nearly $1,50[illegible],000.

COPPER MINES TO GO ON SLIDING SCALE

Producers Plan to Restore Wage Arrangement Dropped as a War Measure.

SURPLUS IS PILING UP

Miners Expected to Accept Wage Reduction in View of Conditions of the Industry.

The sliding scale as applied to the wages of copper miners, which was abandoned as a war measure when the price of copper was fixed by governmental decree, is shortly to be installed again throughout the copper mining regions of the West. At present the miners are receiving a wage based on a price of 26 to 28 cents a pound and this, in view of the lower price for copper and the lack of demand even at 23 cents, has brought about a condition where operating costs, according to leaders in the industry, are out of proportion to the return. It was believed in trade circles yesterday that a price of 20 cents for copper might be quoted within a short time by some of the larger producers, who have until now been holding for 23 cents without receiving any substantial bids.

Just at present the miners are receiving a wage of about $5.50 a day in the Butte region. This is based on the sliding scale which was last adopted prior to the Government price-fixing of copper. If the pay of the miners is to return to the sliding scale system and the price of copper is from 19 to 21 cents, the pay would be $4.50 a day, or a reduction of a dollar from the present wage. A representative of one of the most important copper-producing companies said yesterday that there was no anticipation of labor difficulties, even though there was a reduction in the present wage because of the application of the sliding scale. He asserted that the lowest pay on the sliding scale basis still provided a living wage, and it was his belief that the miners would accept a cut in wages in view of the conditions in the industry.

Many of the copper companies, it was asserted yesterday, would rather close down than continue operations at present high costs, but they were influenced otherwise by the fact that they wished to provide for their employes and not cause hardships. The companies, it was said, were producing copper at high cost, which, in view of the downward trend of prices generally, might have to be sold at a sacrifice. It was because of this that operations were largely curtailed during the last month, some of the copper companies not producing from 40 to 60 per cent. of capacity, with further curtailment a possibility.

An estimate of the surplus supply of copper in this country was given yesterday by an authority on the subject as 1,000,000,000 pounds. The lack of buying since the signing of the armistice has resulted in most of this surplus being piled up. Until the first of the year production was on a large scale, and even until Jan. 15 production had not been much curtailed by the big companies. During the first fifteen days of January it is estimated that the copper companies sold at the rate of 1,000,000 pounds a day, while the production during that time was from 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 pounds daily.

Not only is there a surplus of copper in this country but there are heavy stocks in Europe. The amount on hand in Great Britain, according to the latest figures, is 8,064,000 pounds, and in France there is said to be a total of about 9,000,000 pounds. The French Government has declared an embargo on copper, effective until the heavy supply on hand has been liquidated.

A committee of the Copper Export Association is in Europe studying conditions. According to first reports, the committee, which includes representatives of the largest producing companies, intended visiting France, Great Britain, Italy, and some of the neutral countries. It develops now that the committee has obtained passports for visiting Germany as well. It is understood that the committee will arrange for establishing branch offices in many of the leading cities of the countries visited and have conferences with the large foreign buying agencies which have recently been formed.

JANUARY TRANSACTIONS.

Transactions in stocks on the New York Stock Exchange for the month of January aggregate 11,634,661 shares, a decrease of 326,474 shares as compared with the previous month, and of 1,870,113 shares as compared with the corresponding week last year. The heaviest day's trading was 736,043 shares, on the 3d, and the lightest 367,864 shares, on the 14th. There was a total of only 298,217 shares on the 8th but business was suspended for the day at 12:30 P. M. out of respect to the memory of the late Col. Roosevelt. For the Saturday half holiday the maximum total was 405,330 shares on the 25th and the minimum 218,528 shares on the 11th.

The following is a comparison of the total dealings in stocks for January of this year and the same month in previous years:

NEW ROCK ISLAND ISSUE.

$4,500,000 6 Per Cent. Gold Notes Offered by Bankers.

There were two announcements of new financing in Wall Street yesterday. Speyer & Co. and Hayden, Stone & Co. offered $4,500,000 Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company three-year 6 per cent. collateral trust gold notes, due Feb. 1, 1922, redeemable at par and interest on any interest date on thirty days' notice.

The notes are secured by $7,500,000 of the company's first and refunding mortgage 4 per cent. bonds, which are pledged at 60, while the trust agreement will provide that the collateral security shall at all times be equal at market price to not less than 120 per cent. of the face amount of the outstanding notes.

Bids were offered on Thursday for $5,500,000 General Mortgage 5 per cent. gold bonds, series "A," of the newly formed Brooklyn Edison Company, and announcement was made yesterday that the bonds had been sold to the Guaranty Trust Company. The sale of the bonds was authorized by the Public Service Commission. The proceeds will be used to reimburse the company's treasury for expenditures and betterments.

Bank Opens Industrial Bureau.

The Liberty National Bank has announced the creation of an Industrial Department for the purpose of offering services in an advisory capacity on matters pertaining to manufacturing and industrial problems. The new department it is expected will bring about a closer relationship between the bank's customers who come under this general heading and the bank's officers.

Prices Irregular on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Prices on the Bourse today were irregular. Three per cent. rentes were quoted at 63f. 75c. for cash, exchange on London at 25f. 98c, and 5 per cent. loans at 93f. 25c.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Controller of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company has prepared an estimated income account of the company for 1918 based on the average net operating income of the property during the three test years stipulated in the Railroad bill. This shows a total gross corporate income of $16,294,147 and a surplus of $5,317,147 available for dividends. After deductions are made for the preferred the balance is equivalent to 2.81 per cent. on the $74,359,700 common stock.

The Empire Pipe-Line Company, a Cities Service Company subsidiary, has begun operations to enter the Burkburnett oil field in Texas, which has an estimated production of 30,000 barrels daily.

The following appointments have been announced by the Irving National Bank: Eugene D. Junior, Cashier, Hayward S. Kirby, Assistant Cashier, and Claude E. Allnutt, Auditor.

The National Bank of Commerce in New York has announced the appointment of H. C. Stevens as an Assistant Cashier.

The Lackawanna County Coal Company, which owns more than 750,000 tons of white ash coal in Pennsylvania, is planning for a considerable increase in production, as well as the acquisition of new properties. The company, which is independent, reports that orders are in excess of production.

Stock of the Pinar Copper Company, of which Charles H. Hyde, former City Chamberlain, is President, was listed and traded in for the first time on the Curb market yesterday. The company's properties are in Cuba.

The Twenty-third Ward Bank has announced the election of the following officers: Charles P. Bogart, President; John M. Haffen, Vice President, and Henry J. Van Cook, Cashier.

The Baltimore syndicate which offered $710,000 Elk Horn Coal Corporation 6 per cent. sinking fund convertible gold notes yesterday announced that they were all sold within a short time.

COTTON MAKES SMALL GAIN.

Market Feels Influence of Short Covering of Local Dealers.

Influences of a technical rather than of a general character, governed yesterday's cotton market. The movement of prices, which was somewhat subdued, relatively speaking, was upward and was controlled by the local ring crowd as much as by any other group or factor. Buying for Liverpool account, and some scattered purchases for Southern interests were noted; but, for the most part, covering of shorts by local dealers had most to do with the modest rise.

The market, in many respects was similar to that of the previous day. There was not much activity and the range was narrower than usual. There was no aggressive selling by ring traders, but, on the contrary, the people bought. That the market is strong technically, there can be no doubt, as it must be badly oversold by this time. However, the short interest is brave, not easily frightened by sharp advances, and with news developments such as they have been recently is not likely to lose its courage soon.

After the first call had displayed some irregularity, with prices 16 points down to 5 points up, there was a mild buying movement which took values up from 55 to 70 points and held them at the higher levels for some time. A slight reaction in the afternoon caused some losses, but price did not go to the low of the opening, and for the most part the market ranged well above the previous day's closing figures. At the finish of business the level was up 22 to 35 points for the active options.

Manchester: Yarns were quiet and cloths were in better demand.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Commercial agency reviews of business in the last week indicate that buyers are waiting for a definite price trend and that while there have been day-to-day purchases, most lines are waiting for a definite swing in all of the markets before committing themselves. Dun's Review says:

From practically every trade and centre of importance comes multiplying evidence that business is richer in promise than in actual performance. Of factors presaging future and more stable expansion, there are many clearly apparent, and the reductions in ocean freights on both sides of the Atlantic have strengthened hopes of a coming noteworthy development of overseas commerce. Yet various perplexing problems and uncertainties have not unnaturally arisen from the economic transformation which is now everywhere in progress, and hesitation and caution continue the rule while the necessary readjustments are being effected. That buyers are confident of further downward revisions from the extreme prices is plainly indicated by their general policy of purchasing only that which is immediately required, and leading industries have changed from a state of unexampled activity and prosperity to one of increasing unemployment of machinery and labor.

Bradstreet's says:

Wholesale and jobbing trade is still at a waiting stage, retail trade is less active, and the industrial pace, particularly in textile and iron and steel lines, is slower. Even collections are rather more tardy, and the number of unemployed is officially reported larger, this being confirmed by the advices of reduced active mill, blast furnace, and mine capacity from a number of points, of old orders running out, and of munition works turning over capacity to peace lines.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

There was a reactionary tendency to the market at the close yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final prices represented net losses of from a fraction to about 2 points in the active shares. Values held firm during the greater part of the session until toward the close, when general selling pressure eliminated gains and made for losses. Speculative interest centred in the industrials. Railroad shares were neglected and lower.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday .5@5¼ per cent. for the best names
Thursday .5@5¼ " " " " "
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Little Interest in Woolen Socks.

The sale of woolen socks is at a standstill, according to some of the firms jobbing these goods. The reasons ascribed are the continued mild weather and the high prices. One jobber said that half wool and cotton socks that formerly sold for $1.25 a dozen were sold up to about three months ago for $5 a dozen. Conditons at present, however, are entirely different. Some of the jobbers are now offering these goods at a 50 per cent. reduction. Even at these prices the sales are relatively small.

Few Calls for Woolen Gloves.

Unless there is a sudden change in the weather conditions the jobbing trade will have plenty of woolen gloves left over for next season without placing any more orders. Although these goods are now being offered at reductions in price that run anywhere from 25 to 30 per cent., it has not increased the sale to any great extent. In fact, one jobber said yesterday he was unable to dispose of them at any price.

Straight Line Petticoats.

Due to the tight skirts now being worn, manufacturers of petticoats are receiving more calls for the straight line styles. In almost every instance the merchandise that is being purchased by the out-of-town buyers is from the higher-priced lines. Practically no cancellations are being received for the better grade of cotton petticoats.

Lines of Fancy Vests.

The new lines of men's fancy vests have, from all accounts, met with much success in the retail trade. In the city there is a brisk demand for the one-button double-breasted style that retails at $5. The road business has shown a great improvement over that of last year, and many out-of-town stores are already duplicating their original orders. One manufacturer said that his business this season has increased nearly 100 per cent.

Orders for Men's Sweaters.

Though very few orders are being placed by the jobbing trade for men's wool sweaters, the buying on the part of the retailers is much stronger in some sections than it was a week ago. One of the local firms received an order for Fall delivery that amounted to $30,000. The city trade is also placing some small orders for future delivery. Some of the makers have made known the fact that they will not start work on any orders unless they have the assurance of the buyer that they will not be canceled at a later date.

Coal Trade Situation.

One of the mildest Januaries on record following two months of abnormally high temperatures has reduced the demand for anthracite to a point where the market is barely able to absorb a maximum output of prepared sizes. Saward's Weekly will say today. It adds that curtailment will have to be resorted to in a short time unless there is a change for the better. Loaded cargoes of stove and chestnut, the two which continued active long after everything else was in oversupply, have been offered to the local trade at the company circular this week without finding retailers very anxious to take them in. Steam sizes are going from bad to worse. Offerings of lower port No. 1 buckwheat have been made on a basis as low as $2.75, while rice is selling all the way down to $2 and barley at $1 or slightly less. In bituminous the demand has dropped to a point which makes it hard to sell coal at any price.

Looking to Foreign Trade.

Learning that there is a possible market in France and Great Britain for American made women's apparel, the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association has put itself in touch with reliable manufacturers' agents in various cities of the two countries. These cities are London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Dublin, Belfast, Bradford, Bristol, Aberdeen, Manchester, and Paris. A list of such agents is on file in the office of the association which is prepared to give its members such information as they may desire regarding exports of their wares. Ellis H. Steinhart, acting manager of the association, has sent a letter to the members informing them of the facts.

Moire ribbon "tams" are shown in smart effects with or without a trim in a combination of straw and Georgette with the ribbon, according to the bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America. Such hats range in price from $36 to $48 a dozen. In a solid taupe model the top is of moire ribbon about three-fourths of an inch wide interlaced in a basket weave effect. The side crown is of rough straw. In a henna model the ribbon forms the entire "tam" crown and is put on scantily shirred, one row overlapping the other. A little mushroom brim of Georgette lends a soft line. Still another model has cherry and navy moire ribbon interlaced to form a "tam" crown which tops a little short back poke brim.

Sales of Gray Goods Varied.

Again the local gray goods market yesterday showed considerable variety in the fabrics disposed of, although no large transactions in any were reported. In the print cloths 39-inch 80-squares, 72-76s and 64-72s sold at 15, 13½, and 11¼ cents, respectively, and 38½-inch 64-60s and 64-56s went at 9½ and 9¼ cents, respectively. These were from first hands and were for February delivery. Sales also were reported of drills, pongees, and fine goods, but there were no special features of note concerning them.

Men's Shirts Selling Better.

During the first part of this week there has been much more activity in the local shirt trade, and the outlook for the future seems much better. Both the local and out-of-town stores are buying more freely. Although the orders are not exceptionally large they are being duplicated more often. Many retailers are buying just enough merchandise to last about thirty days. This precaution is being taken in anticipation of a lower market. Salesmen who have just returned from the South say that business there is much better.

SHIP CREDITORS UNITE.

Seek Protection in Atlantic Corporation's Suit.

BOSTON, Jan. 31.—Representatives in this city of the Atlantic Corporation, which operates a shipbuilding plant at Portsmouth, N. H., were informed today that a committee of creditors of the corporation had been formed in New York to protect creditors in connection with the action brought by the corporation in the Maine courts against the Emergency Fleet Corporation. The Atlantic Corporation, incorporated in Maine, seeks to have its contract with the Fleet Corporation adjudged unfair and inequitable on the ground that to carry out its agreement to build ten steel ships for $14,000,000 would mean financial ruin.

Creditors took action after they had learned that attachment and mechanics' liens had been placed on the Portsmouth plant, on the steamer Kisnop, launched three two weeks ago, and on the hulls of five steamers under construction. The creditors' committee is composed of William A. Adams of Ryerson & Co., Chicago; H. W. Webber of the Norton Engineering Company, Philadelphia; Howard Zachariah of the Williams & Thomas Machinery Company, Pittsburgh, and P. E. Mathews of the Camden Iron Works, Camden, N. J.

The committee has sent letters to creditors of the corporation all over the country asking them to forward statements of their claims. Officials of the corporation today estimated the total outstanding indebtedness of the corporation as $609,000.

BUSINESS NOTES.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The feature of yesterday's realty market was the sale of the fifteen-story office building at the northeast corner of William and Cedar Streets to the Royal Bank of Canada.

The purchase was made through William A. White & Sons, Inc., from the New York State Insurance Department, the price being in excess of $1,000,000. There were also several important transactions on the Heights, while the Bronx continued active, especially in the new-law tenement line, which are in good demand among operators and investors.

Five Houses on the Heights Sold to Frederick Brown.

The four five-story apartment houses occupying the block front on the east side of Audubon Avenue between 185th and 186th Streets were acquired by Frederick Brown, operator, yesterday from Benjamin Mordecai.

The houses, which occupy a plot 215 by 120, were awarded the medal by the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects for being the best designed buildings erected in Manhattan and the Bronx during the year 1914. The property was held at $275,000.

Mr. Brown also purchased, through Nehring Brothers, from W. Miller of Zanesville, Ohio, 656 West 178th Street, a five-story flat on a plot 50 by 100, held at $85,000.

Resale on West End Avenue.

Daniel H. Jackson, operator, sold to Max S. Grifenhagen, the ex-Sheriff of New York City, 355 West End Avenue, an eight-story fire-proof elevator apartment house, on a plot 51 by 75. The house is arranged for one apartment of ten rooms and three baths to each floor, and was erected by the late Maggie Mitchell.

Mr. Jackson bought the property a few weeks ago from the Mace estate. The purchaser gave in part payment the South Shore Hotel property, covering a city block front on Main Street, Freeport, L. I., which Mr. Jackson resold immediately for all cash. Dwight, Archibald & Perry were the brokers.

Buyers for Private Dwellings.

Miss Sophie Moore sold to a client of W. V. Wechsler 110 West Eighty-fifth Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 100. The buyer will alter the building into small apartments.

John D. Barrett sold to an investor 24 West Seventy-first Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 100.

Tenement Deals.

James H. Cruikshank, operator, resold [illegible] Central Park West, a five-story single flat, on a plot 18 by 100, to H. Bard[illegible]. Assessed by the city at $23,000. Located between 106th and 107th Streets. William C. Hyde and E. A. Polak were the brokers.

The Julius Realty Company, Inc., purchased from the 3,157 Broadway Corporation the six-story apartment house with stores at 3,157 Broadway, on a plot 41.8 by 100. It rents for about $10,000, and was held at $90,000. William S. Baker was the broker in the transaction.

The Henry Garken estate sold to George [illegible]berdorfen 2,411 and 2,413 Eighth Avenue, two five-story flats, on a plot 4[illegible].11 by 100. The property, which is located on the northwest corner of 129th Street, was held at $90,000. O'Reilly & Dahn negotiated the sale.

Quick Resale of Bronx Commercial Property.

J. Clarence Davies sold for the Benenson Realty Company to the H. D. Bahr Trucking Company 281 and 283 East 137th Street, 100 feet east of Lincoln Avenue, a six-story loft and factory building, on a plot 50 by 100. The Benenson Realty Company acquired this property on Wednesday last, and have resold for cash. The new owners own and occupy 285 and 287 adjoining. After making improvements they will also occupy the premises purchased. The property is assessed at $40,000.

The Bronx Market.

Williamson & Bryan sold to I. Sacks the southwest corner of Third Avenue and 173d Street, 25 by 100. The buyer owns the adjoining property.

Charles [illegible] Trent sold for Frederic Ehrlich to Charles J. Schurheck 2,169 and 2,171 Arthur Avenue, two three-family houses, on a plot 44 by 93, located near 182d Street.

Schwab & Co. in conjunction with Harry W. Davis sold for the Clinton Avenue Realty Inc. the five-story new-law apartment house, 825 East 167th Street, 40 by 125, to the Newat Realty Company, Inc. It was an all-cash transaction, the property being held at $12,000.

The Ulster Court Corporation, Joseph G. Abramson, President, has sold to Joseph Fried 1,208 College Avenue, a new-law five-story apartment house on a plot 40 by 100, having an annual rental of over $7,000 and held for $45,000. The transaction was all cash. This completes the sale of the five houses which the seller took over about two years ago from James C. Gaffney, the builder. Hiram T. Wood was the broker in the transaction.

McLernon Brothers sold for Frederick Charles Ringer the two-story private residence upon plot 85 by 100 at 2,241 Sedgwick Avenue, University Heights. After extensive alterations the building will be used as the local home of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity of the New York University.

The Chateau, a new five-story apartment house, occupying a plot 70 by 90 on the southeast corner of 180th Street and the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, has been sold by Fisher and Irving Lewine to George N. Reinhardt. The property was held at $85,000. In part payment the buyer gave the three-story building, 541 East 169th Street, on a lot 22 by 100.

The William H. Moore Holding Company, Inc., sold to investing clients of Elfers & A[illegible]berley the new five-story apartment house completed last Fall on the northeast corner of University Avenue and 192d Street. The building occupies a plot 107 by 79, and was held at $155,000.

The Isaac Lowenfeld Realty Corporation sold to [illegible]ene Posner 1,251 and 1,253 Franklin Avenue, a five-story new-law tenement, 77 by 161 by 138, held at $95,000. The buyer paid all cash. Rubin & Lefkowitz negotiated the sale.

Cahn & Pittman, operators, purchased from Charles B. Hallock 2,323 Davidson Avenue, northwest corner of Evelyn Place, 100 feet on Davidson Avenue, 25 feet on street. A. D. Phelps and Demiance negotiated the sale.

New Theatre for Brooklyn.

A large up-to-date theatre, to cover the plot, 100 by 171, on the corner of Fulton Street and Howard Avenue, running through to McDougal Street, will be erected by Herman Weingarten. The auditorium, which will be one of the largest in Brooklyn, will accommodate 3,000 people. Montrose Morris Sons prepared the plans, which have been approved by the Building Department, enabling the work to start immediately. James R. Ross & Co., the brokers who negotiated the sale of the plot, have also secured for the owner a satisfactory building loan.

Brooklyn.

The Kingsway Realty Corporation, James P. Kelly, President, purchased a plot on the northwest corner of Kings Highway and East Twelfth Street, 120 by 104, which includes a two-family house on East Twelfth Street, as a site for a moving picture and vaudeville theatre. The tentative plans call for a house seating 1,900 people, and a roof garden seating 1,500 people. Both plots concerned in the transaction were held at $33,000. James A. Chalmers negotiated the sale.

The Meister Builders, Inc., resold to S. Monastero 1,5[illegible]7 Bath Avenue, a two-story stucco dwelling. This completes the resale of the five houses purchased by this company in July, 1918.

Queens Borough Sales.

The Schley Realty Corporation sold a plot fronting 100 feet on Borden Avenue, extending through to Third Street, with railroad frontage, through G. E. Clay, to the Cole-Duncan Boiler Works, Inc., who will remove their plant from Brooklyn to the new site within a few weeks.

H. Winne sold to the Long Island Bond and Mortgage Company a plot 40 by 100 on the west side of Queens Avenue, south of State Street, Jamaica.

W. Bond sold to P. Ruffini a plot 48 by 100 on the north side of Camelia Street, east of Sunswick Terrace, Long Island City.

H. Clark purchased a plot 50 by 100 on the north side of Sixth Street, east of Snedeker Avenue, Woodhaven.

Westchester County.

W. J. Bolles sold for G. Maurice Heckscher the Homewood Farms, consisting of 137 acres at Purchase, near Rye, and adjoining Blind Brook Golf Club. The new owner intends improving the property and putting it on the market.

George Howe sold for H. W. Utter his residence on Lansdowne Drive, Larchmont Gardens, to Mrs. Natalie M. Nielsen.

Howell C. [illegible]errin sold for Harold L. Flint a plot of land 87.5 by 121 feet, on the corner of Locust Avenue and Bonnett Avenue, Larchmont Manor, to E. I. B[illegible]th, and for the Howell Realty Company Plots 7 and 8, Block 1, on the corner of P[illegible]er Avenue and Chestnut Street, Howell Park, to S. A. Thomas. These two lots comprise a plot 100 by 175 feet. The purchaser will improve the property immediately with a private dwelling.

New Jersey.

Harvey W[illegible]or purchased a six-room cottage on [illegible]arclyffe Road, at Mountain Lakes, N. J., overlooking Wildwood Lake. It is understood the purchase price was $6,000.

Machine Shop For Sale

The property of the undersigned, who has been engaged in the manufacture of 155 Millimeter Common Steel Shell. Offers will be received for the entire property on which there is no mortgage or encumbrance.

This consists of a machine shop and about seven and one-half acres of land located on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, on Clyde Avenue, Buffalo, having a spur track on each side of the building. The land is fenced. The main building is single story, well lighted and in good condition, of stone construction, 80 feet x 300 feet, a stone addition thereto, 30 feet x 200 feet and a frame addition, 88 feet x 304 feet, together with other outbuildings, among which are a restaurant and time and employment office.

This is a modern plant with a low tax rate and cheap electric power. The equipment consists of electric motors and transformers, air compressors, boilers and heating system, high class tool room equipment, office fixtures and furnishings, belting, shafting and hangers, furnaces, lathes, boring mills, drill presses, grinders, pumping and conveyor systems, benches, special machinery, etc., all being in good operating condition.

The property is open to inspection and may be seen by applying at the premises. Any offer made must have the approval of the Ordnance Department before acceptance.

HELP WANTED—Male.

Instruction.

Forty-two cents an agate line.

DO YOU WANT to get a license as a marine engineer? If you do, you can get free instruction in the United States Shipping Board's schools. No enlistment is required. Course from four to eight weeks. Day and night classes are held, so you can support yourself while at school. You can get in if you have had two years' experience as oiler or water tender of ocean or coastwise steam vessels; if you are a graduate of a nautical school ship, or a mechanical engineer from a recognized school of technology; or if you have been a stationary engineer for one year; or a locomotive engineer for one year; or a journeyman machinist engaged in the construction or repair of marine, locomotive, or stationary engines for one year; or an apprentice to the machinist trade with three years' experience engaged in the repair or construction of stationary locomotive, or marine engines; or if you are an engineer of lake, bay, sound, or river steamers; or have had three years' experience as a fireman on ocean or coastwise steam vessels. Knowledge of the plain rules of arithmetic is necessary. Applicants must be American citizens over nineteen years of age. Apply to Principal Spaulding at the Dickinson High School, Jersey City, or to Principal Kotteamp at the Pratt Institute, Brooklyn.

The Civil Service.

City.

The practical examination for inspector of pianos will be held on Feb. 4 at P. S. 59, 228 East 57th Street.

The practical test for typewriter accountant will be held Feb. 11. There are twenty-two applicants.

The medical and mental examinations for school farm attendant will be held on Feb. 10. There are twenty-nine applicants.

The mental test for clerk, Grade 2, with knowledge of addressograph machines, will be held on Feb. 14. There are forty-nine applicants.

United States.

The commission is perfecting arrangements whereby men who are about to be discharged from the army or navy may receive first-hand information concerning opportunities for employment in the Federal civil service. The commission has received authority from the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy to appoint its representative at all establishments where enlisted men are assembled in considerable numbers. These representatives are now being appointed. They will be prepared to inform the men fully concerning positions which are open, to supply them with application blanks, to assist them, if necessary, with the execution of their applications, and to advise them relative to civil service matters generally. It is the plan of the Civil Service Commission to intrust this work to educational directors of welfare organizations already operating at the camps, cantonments, &c. The representatives of the commission who are appointed from the personnel of these welfare organizations will have the benefit of the advice and assistance of the commission's local boards of examiners at nearby cities, in addition to the instructions received from the commission.

Education Notes.

Its prevocational equipment will be transferred from P. S. 158 to P. S. 64, Brooklyn. P. S. 64 will be organized as a prevocational school. P. S. 158 will be reorganized so as to provide classes from kindergarten through the 6B.

The teacher assigned to give instruction in shopwork and the teacher of printing in the New York Parental School will be granted $200 annual pay in addition to the salary allowed by schedule P3.

The bylaws of the Board of Education have been amended so as to provide for the payment of substitute teachers, assigned as additional teachers to the New York Parental School at the rate of $4 a day of actual service.

Louis L. Lambert has been appointed first assistant teacher of music in the New York Training School for Teachers.

George E. Gartlan will receive $1,000 a year additional to his salary as assistant director of music during the continuance of his assignment to take sole charge of the purchase, maintenance and use of all pianos and organs in elementary and high schools.

The Teachers' Council has appointed the following officers: President, William J. McAuliffe; Vice President, Agnes M. Marshall; recording secretary, S. McKee Smith; corresponding secretary, Isabel A. Ennis.

Mark Hoffman of the Manual Training High School will give a vocal recital of Jewish Folk Songs at the Toynbee House, Grand Street and East Broadway, Manhattan, tomorrow at 3 P. M. This recital is part of the regular work of the community singing class, which meets at the Toynbee House the first and third Sunday of each month, under the direction of Mr. Hoffman.

Courses for the training of workers in the Americanization movement are announced by the University of the State of New York, cooperating with the Board of Education. The sessions will open Monday, Feb. 3, at 4 P. M., at P. S. 25, 330 East Fifth Street, and teachers of one year's experience; or other persons experienced in supervising men or women in industry or in the social welfare work are eligible to enroll. Instruction will include in addition to special methods of teaching English to foreigners, the following topics: Background of and approach to the immigrant, social psychology of the immigrant, educational aspects of Americanization, teaching of civics and citizenship, increased work among immigrants; home teaching and visiting, method of conducting survey, organization of classes and classroom technic, shops and factories, publicity work, the immigrant and his place in the community.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Air pressure has increased decidedly along the northern border from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Coast, with the centre of maximum pressure north of Minnesota. Low pressure prevails over the St. Lawrence Valley and the Canadian provinces, and a decided depression of the barometer is charted west of the Rocky Mountains, its centre being over Nevada.

The outlook is for generally fair weather Saturday and Sunday east of the Mississippi River, except that conditions will become unsettled Sunday in the Mississippi Valley and the upper Lake region.

Temperature will be lower Saturday throughout the Middle Atlantic States and New England, the Upper Ohio Valley, and lower lake region. Mild temperature will continue throughout the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and Tennessee.

Winds for Saturday and Sunday along the North Atlantic Coast will be strong west to northwest, fair; Middle Atlantic Coast, fresh northwest, fair; South Atlantic Coast, gentle variable, partly cloudy.

FORECAST TODAY AND SUNDAY.

New York, Southern New England, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair and somewhat colder Saturday; Sunday, fair.

Northern New England—Fair and colder Saturday; Sunday fair.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at [illegible] P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1918.	1919.		1918.	1919.

GOVERNMENT FIRM IN BROOKLYN STRIKE

No Sign of Yielding to Carpenters, Who Hold Up Building of Quartermaster's Stores.

INVESTIGATING WAGES HERE

Effort to Learn if Prevailing Rate on Which Agreement Is Based Has Changed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—It was learned today that there is no disposition on the part of the War Department to yield to the carpenters whose strike since last November at New York has held up construction on the Quartermaster's stores that have been under construction in Brooklyn.

This is the strike which was approved by W. L. Hutcheson, International President of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, who is a member of the War Labor Board, and concerning which the Building Trades Employers' Association of New York City last night issued an appeal to the public for moral support.

Some of the facts leading up to the present status of this strike were ascertained today. Secretary Baker made an agreement in June, 1917, with Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, which provided that in the construction of cantonments the War Department would pay the prevailing union rate of wages in the vicinity where the work was being carried on. The agreement also provided for the creation of a commission of three to determine, in case of dispute, what the prevailing union scale of wages was at a particular point.

Subsequently, by executive order of the Secretry of War, the provisions of this agreement were extended to all construction work of the department during the period of the emergency.

Immediately after the signing of the armistice on Nov. 11, the War Department, the Navy Department, and the Shipping Board issued orders eliminating all over-time work, this effecting a saving of many hundreds of thousands of dollars a day in extra cost. Upon the promulgation of this order the carpenters employed on the army supply base at Brooklyn struck.

When the carpenters were informed that the War Department would in no event continue over-time because the emergency having ceased, it was not justified in incurring the additional expense, the carpenters demanded an increase in wages from $5.50 to $6.50 a day.

The question was referred to the Emergency Construction Wage Commission provided for in the agreement of June, 1917, between the Secretary of War and Mr. Gompers. The commission is made up of Dr. E. M. Hopkins, President of Dartmouth College, representing the public; John R. Alpine, Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, representing labor, and Colonel J. H. Alexander of the Construction Division of the army, representing the War Department.

Evidence was submitted to the commission that the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners in New York was then under an agreement with the Building Trades Employers' Association of New York which did not expire until Dec. 31, 1918, providing for a wage of $5.50 per day. The commission deemed this adequate evidence that $5.50 per day was the prevailing rate in the New York district in accordance with the signed agreement of the union and the employers. It therefore unanimously refused the carpenters' demand for $6.50 a day.

The carpenters have declined to accept the decision of the commission.

The question was brought personally to the attention of the Secretary of War early in December, and the suggestion was made that the dispute be referred to the War Labor Board, of which Mr. Hutcheson is a member. Secretary Baker advised Mr. Gompers that if the carpenters were dissatisfied with the decision, their remedy was to return to work and to request the Emergency Wage Commission to consider any additional evidence which they desired to present. The carpenters refused to return to work.

The commission, by direction of the Secretary, has been making an exhaustive inquiry into the prevailing wages of carpenters in New York since Jan. 1, 1919 ,and is about to submit its report. In the meantime, the carpenters have declared a sympathetic strike upon the Quartermaster's stores under construction at New Orleans, and both strikes are still on.

THREAT TO REPLACE GARMENT STRIKERS

Manufacturers Have Plan to Engage Workers Without Union Affiliations.

Harry Gordon, counsel for the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, against which a strike of 35,000 workers is being waged by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, said yesterday that the manufacturers would begin on Monday to employ not only strikebreakers, but workers who had no union connections and of "a type wholly different from our present class of workers."

There were enough workers unemployed in this city due to the abandonment of government work, he said, to supplant the strikers, "women and men who do not submit to the Bolshevistic doctrines which the strikers drink in so readily."

"The new class of help which the manufacturers intend to employ," Mr. Gordon said, "they will keep permanently. The workers will be carefully selected from the army of unemployed which is at present marching the streets in this and other cities, and our permanent solution of the great difficulty in the garment industry—the class of help—will have been solved."

Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the union, issued a statement at union headquarters yesterday in which he said:

"The moral and financial support of the American Federation of Labor has again been pledged to the striking dress and waist makers. Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, in a letter to me, congratulated the workers upon the splendid fight they are making for the preservation of decent and humane working conditions in their industry. This is a rebuke and a refutation of the malicious stories being spread by the Manufacturers' Association that the strikers are disloyalists and I. W. W.'s, and that they are not supported by American organized labor, Monday morning will see 10,000 girl strikers on picket duty around the shops in the dress and waist district.

"The General Strike Committee, at a meeting held on Thursday night, unanimously decided to consider under no circumstances a settlement with the Manufacturers' Association as long as they adhere to their present policies of the right to discharge without review."

REJECTS TEXTILE PLAN.

Attitude of Cohoes Mill Upsets Proposed Compromise on Hours.

As a result of the conference held in Albany on Thursday, the Governor's Reconstruction Commission announced yesterday that a truce apparently had been arranged between the manufacturers and the workers in the textile mills in Central New York, as it seemed likely that they would agree to a compromise suggested by the commission. However, late last night Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, Secretary of the commission, said that she had received a telegram from John A. Perkins, agent for the Harmony Mills, the largest in Cohoes, saying that his concern would not agree to the conditions laid down.

The workers had already accepted the arrangement, but the refusal of the manufacturers throws the controversy back to where it was before the Reconstruction Commission took up the matter. In order that the 40,000 persons employed in the mills in Central New York may not be thrown out of employment on Monday the commission will hold another conference in Albany on Sunday.

The compromise suggested provided that the mill owners run the factories eight hours a day for five days a week instead of the prevailing ten hours a day for four days a week, the workers to be paid at the prevailing rate. John Golden, President of the United Textile Workers of America, after conferring with the Executive Committee of that organization, said that he would recommend to the organizations in Cohoes that they accept this compromise for two weeks on the understanding that during that time further negotiations should proceed toward a final settlement. The purpose was to avoid the shutdown that was theatened for Feb. 3.

An open meeting of the Commission's Committee on Education, of which Dr. Felix Adler is Chairman, will be held this morning at 10:30 o'clock in the hall of the Board of Education, Fifty-ninth Street and Park Avenue. This will be the beginning of the investigation into the Slater Military Training Law. Members of the Military Training Commission are expected to be present.

Workers Announce a Time Schedule.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 31.—A compromise offer by the leaders of the United Textile Workers was sent to silk manufacturers tonight, announcing that a working week of forty-seven hours would begin on Monday, and if refused by employers a general strike would be called. The present schedule of hours is fifty, and the first demand upon the employers called for forty-four hours. At the meeting of representatives of employers and employes at the Chamber of Commerce the proposition by the manufacturers to submit the situation to the War Labor Board was declined.

Labor committees were instructed at tonight's meeting to notify the 30,000 silk workers, men and women, to report a half hour later for work on Monday, or at 7:30 o'clock, the starting time of the proposed new schedule. Employers will be notified of this decision and refusal to admit employees to any of the plants will cause a strike. Only one manufacturer had agreed to the terms tonight.

30,000 VOTE FOR STRIKE.

Employes of Lawrence Mills Give Ultimatum to Employers.

BOSTON, Jan. 31.—The movement for a forty-eight-hour week in the textile mills of New England reached a critical stage tonight when the General Committee of the Textile Workers at Lawrence voted to call a strike of the 30,000 operatives in all the mills of that city on Monday next unless the manufacturers previously grant their demand for a forty-eight-hour week with fifty-four hours' pay.

The outlook in other mill cities in New England where the operatives have demanded that the 48-hour week be put into effect on Feb. 3 was uncertain tonight. In Lowell, where there are about 22,000 textile workers, the Manufacturers' Association, representing the cotton mills, has rejected the 48-hour demand. The Lowell Textile Council, which has not mentioned the subject of wages in its negotiations, has accepted the offer of the American Woolen Company to give the employes of its five mills in Lowell a 48-hour week, with 48 hours' pay.

The Fall River Executive Council of the National Amalgamation of Textile Operatives today instructed members of its affiliated unions to work no more than forty-eight hours next week. The Manufacturers' Association of that city, where there are 30,000 textile workers, had previously rejected the forty-eight hour demand made by the Textile Council.

In Rhode Island and Southeastern Massachusetts, the manufacturers in the Blackstone Valley and Pawtucket have rejected the forty-eight-hour demand, made without any mention of wages, on behalf of 20,000 workers. The demand has been made in Manchester, N. H.; Saco and Biddeford, Me., and Salem, Mass., where the manufacturers have not yet announced their attitude. In Manchester action by the operatives will be deferred because the mills will be on short-time schedule next week.

ACQUIT MAYOR T. B. SMITH.

Philadelphia Jury Reaches Quick Decision in Fifth Ward Case.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 31.—Thomas B. Smith, Mayor of Philadelphia, the last of the principal figures to be brought to trial in the Fifth Ward political row which resulted in the killing of a policeman at the primary election in September, 1917, was tonight acquitted by a jury of the charges of misdemeanor in office and conspiracy to violate an election law which prohibits city office holders from taking an active part in politics. The Mayor was on trial nine days, and the jury was out less than two hours in considering its verdict.

Surrounded by friends and members of his cabinet, the Mayor shook hands with the jurors and wanted to address them, but the court said it was not necessary.

The Fifth Ward row resulted over the election of a city Councilman which carried with it the ward's leadership. Mayor Smith was alleged to favor Isaac Deutsch, and was accused of using police to swing the election and of failing to protect voters by taking no action to prevent the bringing of New York gunmen into the war.

The New York gunman who slew the policeman is serving fifteen years in the penitentiary, and several others brought from New York received shorter terms. Deutsch and a number of policemen are under sentence of from one to two years on charges of preventing a fair election. They are out on bail pending an appeal to the higher court.

4,460 SAIL AWAY TODAY.

Great Exodus of Italians, Greeks, and Spaniards.

Three steamships leaving today for France and Italy will carry away 4,460 passengers, most of them Italians, Greeks, and Spaniards. The first-cabin passengers are chiefly Americans going over on business, and French and Italian people returning home.

The State Department is seeking to discourage American women going abroad and heads of large industrial concerns going to France to remain for several months were not permitted to take their wives with them.

The Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi sails at 3 P. M. for Genoa with 2,060 passengers, and the French liners Rochambeau and Chicago leave for Bordeaux with 1,500 and 1,200 passengers, respectively. Hundreds of Italians seeking passage have been turned away for lack of accommodations. The Custom House was thronged yesterday with Italians waiting to have their passports stamped at the Intelligence Bureau.

The White Star liner Canopic sailing for Italy on Feb. 27 has already a large part of her steerage accommodation booked. An agent in a small town in the Middle West telegraphed the line yesterday that he had sold 500 berths on the Canopic and that he expected to have another 500 sold by next week.

Shipping men expect the biggest exodus since the Summer of 1907, after the peace treaty has been signed and the restrictions on the sailing of enemy aliens have been removed.

ASSAIL AIR-MAIL SYSTEM.

Senators Characterize It as an Expensive Experiment.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The Senate made little progress today on the $400,000,000 Post Office appropriation bill, and some leaders tonight expressed doubt that the measure would be passed before next week. Efforts of Senator Thomas of Colorado to eliminate the $200,000,000 appropriation for good roads failed in the first skirmish today, the Chair refusing to sustain his point of order that the amendment was general legislation, added as a rider to an appropriation bill, in violation of the rules.

An amendment by Senator New of Indiana reducing the appropriation for the air-mail service from $850,500 to $300,000 resulted in a general discussion of that branch of the service and the deferring of a vote on the amendment. Senator New characterized the air mail service as an "expensive experiment," while Senator King of Utah declared this was "no time for the Government to take money from a depleted Treasury for purposes of this kind." Senators Swanson of Virginia and McKellar of Tennessee defended the service and urged that the original appropriation be retained.

WOMEN PUT UP 3 TICKETS.

Federation of Clubs Faces a Lively Election Contest.

There were predictions yesterday of a lively contest for the Presidency of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs at the election which will be held next Friday. At the pre-election meeting in the Hotel Astor yesterday Federation members were working hard for their favorite candidates.

There are two regular tickets headed by Mrs. Thomas Slack and Mrs. Harry Lilly respectively and a third on which Mrs. Lilly's friends are running her for President with the First and Second Vice Presidents of the Slack ticket, Mrs. August Dreyer and Mrs. Haryot Holt Dey. Mrs. Dreyer has been President of the Long Island Council of Women, President of the Urban and of the Century Theatre Clubs, and Chairman of Brooklyn for the Federal and State Food Commission. Mrs. Dey is President of the Woman's Press Club and Chairman of Press for the Federation.

PRESSES DEPORTATION BILL

House Asked to Act on Measure Aimed at Interned Aliens.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Immediate consideration of a measure providing for the deportation of aliens interned during the war and those convicted of war offenses was urged today by Representative Burnett of Alabama, Chairman of the House Immigration Committee, in asking the Rules Committee to give the legislation a privilege status for action.

"The immediate importance of this measure," said Mr. Burnett, "is that when a treaty of peace is signed these people will have to be discharged and allowed to run at large in this country."

Action on the question was postponed until next week by the Rules Committee.

FAMILY TAKES BODY OF PALISADE SUICIDE

Lawyer Who Drew Papers for Miss Packwood Last November Refuses to Discuss Marriage.

PROSECUTOR DROPS CASE

Documents Supposed to Transfer Estate to Her Parents in Safe Deposit Vault.

Arleigh Pelham, a lawyer, of 149 Broadway, who acted during her lifetime for Miss Azeele Packwood, who committed suicide on the Palisades, took charge of the body at Englewood, N. J., yesterday at the request of the family.

Mr. Pelham said that early in November of last year he had done some legal business for Miss Packwood, but that he was not at liberty to say anything as to the nature of it. Mr. Pelham refused to discuss the theory that the young woman had been attached to Major Clarence Fahnestock and had killed herself because of his death from influenza in France.

Mrs. Hugh Cameron of 25 East Forty-eighth Street, the housekeeper of the apartment house, where Miss Packwood lived, said Mr. Pelham had called twice on Miss Packwood just before she gave up her apartment in November. The young woman, who came of a wealthy family and was understood to have considerable money in her own right, evidently called in the lawyer to wind up her affairs, just at the time that she intimated to Mrs. Bradford Ellsworth and other acquaintances in the Red Cross Motor Corps that she intended to take her life. Such papers as were made out at the time were sent to a safety deposit vault of the Equitable Trust Company. From dispatches from Tampa, Fla., where the young woman lived, it was understood that she had not made a will, but had turned over her property by transfer to her family, before killing herself.

Mr. Pelham refused yesterday to discuss whether the young woman was married. According to her father, she was engaged to a Major Fenton, while she registered on the rolls of the Motor Corps of America as Mrs. C. Farnum, saying she was the wife of a Major Farnum in France. No trace has been found of a Major Fenton or a Major Farnum, and while there are witnesses who tell of a friendship between Major Clarence Fahnestock and Miss Packwood, no evidence has come to light indicating a marriage.

Mr. Pelham said he had first acted as counsel for Miss Packwood in 1915, when he was introduced to her by a friend, whose name he refused to make known.

Prosecutor Thomas Huckin, of Bergen County, said yesterday that his investigation of the case had been completed when identity and suicide became fully established. He said he would make no inquiries to ascertain whether or not the young woman's name at the time of death was Miss Packwood, Mrs. Farnum or some other. The only thing that might cause him to re-open the case, he said, would be a report from the chemists examining the body that there was evidence which might indicate murder. He considered this extremely unlikely.

OUR DIVISIONS LOST 56,592 IN BATTLE, BESIDES WOUNDED

Official Tables Show 27,762 Killed, 11,396 Died of Wounds, 14,649 Missing.

INFANTRY BORE THE BRUNT

First Regular Division Suffered Most—Corrections Bring Unaccounted For Down to 10,000.

LOSSES OF NEW YORK UNITS

In the 27th Division, 2,036 Men Are Dead or Missing; in the 77th 2,357.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Battle deaths, missing in action and prisoners for thirty combat divisions in France were made public today by General Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff. The tabulation does not include major casualties of this character sustained by the Field Signal Battalions and trains of the divisions, and the totals given, representing figures cabled to the War Department up to Jan. 10, cover an aggregate of 56,592, of which 27,762 represent killed in action, 11,396 died of wounds, 14,649 missing in action, and 2,705 prisoners.

According to the tabulation, the 1st (Regular Army) Division sustained more battle deaths, missing and prisoners than any other. This division, which has been highly praised for its work in France, and which was feared by crack German forces, sustained 2,303 killed in action alone, while 1,050 of its men died of wounds, and 1,789 are reported missing in action.

Ranking second in the total number of battle deaths, missing and prisoners is the 28th or Pennsylvania National Guard Division, for which the total given is 3,890. The only other divisions, other than the 1st and 28th, to sustain more than 3,000 in deaths, missing and prisoners were the 3d (Regular Army) Division and the 32d (National Guard) Division from Michigan and Wisconsin.

The divisions in which New York combat troops served, the 27th, 77th, and 42d, stand well up in the list in battle deaths, missing and prisoners. The Rainbow Division was exceeded in battle deaths, missing and prisoners only by the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th (Regulars), and 28th and 30th (National Guard) Divisions. The 27th Division, composed of the New York National Guard, stands tenth on the list and the 77th, of the draft army division from New York City, trained at Camp Upton, stands twelfth.

Ten Thousand Unaccounted For.

The tables show that approximately 10,000 men remain wholly unaccounted for nearly three months after the ending of hostilities. A total of 17,434 are classified as missing or captured. An appended statement shows that only 29 American military prisoners were believed to be still in Germany on Jan. 8 and that 4,800 prisoners had been checked up as returned and 118 died in captivity.

Some portion of the great body of missing men may be located as the return of the army thins out the American force in France. Indications are, however, that the majority of the 10,000 finally will be added to the roll of honor shown in the tables of those killed or died of wounds, now recorded as 39,158 men.

To that figure, also, must be added 1,551 men of the marine brigade, figures for which, not carried in the tables, were obtained from official sources. This brings the grand aggregate of deaths from battle up to 40,709 on returns estimated officially to be 95 per cent. complete. As figures on missing and prisoners of the marines are lacking, the number of unaccounted for which finally will be added to the roll of the dead cannot be accurately estimated.

Up to tonight the War Department has published the names of 43,882 men killed or died of wounds as against 39,158 shown in the 95 per cent. tables. The difference is made up by additional returns since the tables were closed Jan. 10.

On Nov. 27 General Pershing estimated that his total killed and died of wounds would be 40,455. Presumably publication of the lists of these known deaths and exclusive of the unaccounted for is nearly completed, having exceeded the estimate by more than 3,000, due in part to additional deaths from wounds and to the listing as dead of men formerly reported missing.

The names of 149,418 wounded had been published up to tonight, compared with a November estimated total of 189,955. Of those missing in action 11,676 have been published, against the estimated 14,260 total and compared with the 17,434 missing and prisoners shown in today's tables.

Brunt Fell on Infantry.

Examination of the losses by regiments shows clearly that the brunt of the fighting fell on the infantry. In every division which got into action losses were many times greater, even proportionately to the strength of the units, than those of the artillery, machine-gun battalions, trench mortar batteries, or engineers. A score of regiments lost fully one-third of the full strength of 3,700 men in killed, died of wounds, missing, and prisoners. When figures on the wounded are available, officers believe, the total casual-

Dutch in Fear of Annexation; Plan Unity Demonstration

THE HAGUE, Jan. 29.—Fear of the annexation of Dutch territory is becoming a bugbear in Government circles at The Hague, and there are growing evidences of a fear of arbitrary decisions at Paris.

A committee composed of many well-known members of the Government, politicians, and Deputies is to hold a demonstration against annexation and for the unity of Holland in the largest orchestral hall at The Hague on Feb. 6. The committee will be presided over by the President of the Second Chamber and a Committee of Honor will also be formed of high governmental and other authorities who will invite the Queen to attend the meeting.

SOLDIERS PATROL GLASGOW STREETS

Thousands of Troops Reach City to Prevent Further Disorder by Strikers.

TALK OF FORCE IN BELFAST

Strikers Threaten to Bar Owners from Their Plants—Many Homes Robbed.

GLASGOW, Feb. 1.—Thousands of troops have arrived here, and sentries, with fixed bayonets, are stationed at strategic points about the city to prevent further rioting. Everything was quiet up to noon today.

Councilor Shipwell, Chairman of the Strike Committee, in the Clyde district, was arrested this morning. Bail for his release has been refused, and he is being held on charges of inciting to riot. He is a tailor.

Except for many broken windows, the streets of Glasgow today bore a normal aspect. The street cars were running as usual, and only fifteen cars were unfit for service.

Great crowds were about the streets all day, but there was no disorder. Officials have arranged for calling in more troops from outlying districts in case of emergency. Highland regiments are guarding the railway stations, bridges, electric power stations and gas works.

The strike leaders, Emanuel Shipwell, William Gallagher, and David Kirkwood, were charged before Police Magistrates with inciting to riot and assembling for unlawful purposes. Gallagher was also charged with assaulting a policeman. They were remanded to jail without bail until Feb. 6. Minor leaders were dealt with similarly on about the same charges. Shipwell is an official of the British Seafarers' Union and a member of the Town Council.

The Council of Scottish Trade Unionists held a meeting to discuss a resolution brought up by the Parliamentary Committee. The delegates pledged themselves and their organizations to do their utmost for the success of the forty-hour movement, protested against "the brutal behavior of the authorities," and demanded the release of the prisoners.

A statement issued in behalf of the employers declares that the extremist party among the workmen had repudiated the bargain made by the trade union leaders, and challenged their authority. It asserts that the extremists made no demands on the employers and had expressly said they would not approach the employers. The issue was between the "revolutionary section" of trade unionists and the supporters of the accredited representatives. Continental Bolsheviki, the statement goes on to declare, were using malcontents to upset society.

The local newspapers say that no prominent trade unionists are supporting the strike. Many labor meetings today repudiated the strike and protested against the picketing of the districts around the works in an attempt to prevent workmen who are not on strike from getting in. Numbers of these men have been roughly handled and have gone away.

It is estimated that 100,000 men are idle on the Clyde, of whom one-third are strikers.

The bakers have given notice of their intention to go on strike next Saturday unless they get a forty-hour week.

One hundred and eighty-five delegates attended a meeting of the trade union council, which adopted a resolution by a vote of 92 to 22, asking the Government to embody the forty-hour week in a legislative measure.

BELFAST, Feb. 1.—The strike situation here is assuming an uglier phase. The Strike Bulletin, issued by the strikers, announces that because of the refusal of the employers to consult with the Lord Mayor regarding the situation "serious consideration is being given to the question whether a more drastic policy should not be adopted."

Strike pickets have intimated to the owners of two of the big shipbuilding plants that they will not be allowed to visit their works without a permit from the strikers' committee.

There have been several highway robberies in the fashionable suburbs of the city.

London Expects Strike to Spread.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—There is no improvement in the strike situation in the United Kingdom today. If anything, there seems to be a probability of the trouble spreading, although the intervention of the military at Glasgow is Soldiers Angry Because They Know National Convention Will Dissolve Their Councils.

BERLIN, Jan. 31, (via Copenhagen.)—With the National Convention approaching certain local Soldiers' Councils, especially those in North Sea and Baltic ports, have become daily more unruly, worrying the Government to an intolerable degree. Every day new reports of their terrorist methods, which are hardly distinguishable from those of the Spartacides, shock the German people.

While in Wilhemshaven they are subdued for the present and in Bremen they may be tomorrow, they still terrorize Hamburg, Stettin, Königsberg, Brunswick, Breslau, Leipzig, and even in Berlin they are beginning again to disturb the public peace. They know quite well that the National Convention will immediately decree their total abolishment to avoid which they seek to create conditions that will make their temporary continuation desirable.

At present they are doing everything to prevent the soldiers joining the Government forces, but with apparently little success, because the recruting offices are crowded day after day.

Incensed at this failure, the Hamburg Soldiers' Council now seeks to compel the Government to withdraw a recent decree which considerably curtails the power of the Soldiers' Councils and restores some officers to authority. This morning the Hamburg Soldiers' Council informed the People's Commissioners that unless they withdraw the objectionable decree they would by force prevent the first group of German ships which is to fetch foodstuffs from America, and scheduled to leave Hamburg on Feb. 1, from sailing.

The newspapers, excepting the independent Bolshevist organs, are wrathful at "the base selfishness of the Soldiers' Councils who would rather see the whole of Germany perish than relinquish some of their own ill-gained power, of which, in their natal ignorance, they make the worst possible use."

The Zeitung Amittag says the Soldiers' Councils are asking for the occupation of seaports by Entente troops.

The People's Commissioners, now in session, are considering what measures to employ in securing the safe departure of the first group of ships.

The situation at Hamburg is aggravated by the fact that the Soldiers' Council is allied with the Seamen's League, which also threatens to stop the ships unless the men get fantastic wages.

Germans Mourn for Ships.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 29.—There have been repeated signs recently that the Germans are forgetting that they are not negotiating at the Peace Conference or dictating the armistice terms.

Thus the Rhenish Westphalian Gazette waxes highly indignant over "Erzberger's levity and arbitrary action" in giving up part of the German mercantile fleet in exchange for foodstuffs. The Gazette fears that more tonnage will be demanded, and says:

"It is the same thing as the prolongation of the armistice. Our delegates tell us that they were obliged to accept the terms to prevent a worse catastrophe from befalling Germany. In reality there is no question of negotiating, but Marshal Foch states the terms and Erzberger helplessly accepts them. We have not even obtained a promise of final peace negotiations, or, at least, of the conclusion of a preliminary peace. It is high time for another spirit, another procedure, to be adopted in negotiations with the enemy."

The Weser Zeitung announces the arrival of American foodstuffs for Bremen, saying:

"After America has fed the non-German population of the Hapsburg monarchy and Vienna, finally large supplies for Germany are to be expected which will counteract the serious food crisis in the Spring. Our only hope at present is that America will send us the necessary foodstuffs. American inspectors have already investigated food conditions in various towns, and yesterday President Wilson's representatives were in Bremen in order to confer with Henke on the food situation of the city. After a short stay the inspectors departed for Berlin. Let us hope that the conference will have the result of bringing food soon."

According to the Berlin correspondent of the Handelsblad, Rosa Luxemburg is not dead, but is being treated at a private hospital in West Berlin.

Preliminary Peace Terms to Go to Germany Feb. 17

PARIS, Feb. 1, (Associated Press.)—Preliminary peace terms will probably be presented to Germany along with conditions for a further renewal of the armistice this month, if present plans are not deranged.

Recognizing the need for a return of the world to a normal peace-time basis, the nations associated against Germany are considering making a start toward the actual peace treaty by inserting some of the elementary terms into the conditions which will be submitted to the German Armistice Commission on Feb. 17.

This decision is reflected also in the examination, now under way, to determine what American troops it will be necessary to leave in occupied territory. The plan is to get them all out as soon as it seems advisable and it has been thought that a start might well be made in laying down the terms of peace. Some officials who have been studying the situation closely believe that the armistice itself might well be developed into a peace treaty, just as they think that a society of nations might be developed out of the deliberations of the Peace Conference. President Wilson is known to have examined this view and considered its possibilities.

MALICIOUS RUMORS CURRENT IN PARIS

Evidence of Organized Propaganda to Alienate French and Americans.

MYTH OF A. E. F. CRIME WAVE

Obviously Circulated with the Same Object—Sowing Distrust of Italy's Policy.

By WALTER DURANTY.
Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to The New York Times.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—Is there hostile propaganda at work in Paris, and, if so, on what lines are its efforts directed? Delicate as is the subject for treatment by a foreigner in the French capital, the common interest not only of Franco-American friendship, but of satisfactory relations between all the Allies demands its investigation.

To begin with, the French themselves gave tacit admission of the existence of enemy agents among them when Millerand, then War Minister, issued in 1915, his famous notice: "Be silent. Be guarded. Enemy ears are listening."

The cases of Mata Hari, Bolo and the Bonnet Rouge—to take three of the most notorious from the great number that occurred, many of which received no publicity but are recorded in the archives of the Anti-espionage Department of the War Office—show that espionage and enemy propaganda not only existed, but were well organized and lavishly provided with funds.

No one who was in Paris in the Summer of 1917 could have the least doubt that a very widespread, deliberate, and well-planned campaign was being conducted in favor of "defeatism," both by the circulation of depressing and harmful stories among soldiers and civilians and by the fomenting of trouble among the labor federations. The poison was more or less openly disseminated by certain newspapers, of which the Bonnet Rouge was the worst, but by no means the only offender.

There is every reason to suppose that a deliberate attempt is now being made to create bad blood between France and America on the one hand and France and Italy on the other. Those responsible are clever. They take care to have the element of probability in their stories or base them on certain known facts.

Mythical Fight at Maxim's.

Thus, the fact that Maxim's restaurant was temporarily closed to any one in uniform—solely owing to the infringement of rules about the closing hour and serving alcohol to soldiers—became the basis of a widespread rumor whose double purpose, anti-French to Americans and anti-American to French, was obvious from its nature.

In brief, the story ran that there had been a shooting affray in which either one or two French officers shot one or two Americans, or vice versa—in both cases for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. The story was calculated to prejudice Americans against French if told one way, or French against Americans in the other event. Any way, it was entirely untrue.

I was informed by the President of the Restaurateurs' Association that after hearing the story he had told M. Cornichet, manager of Maxim's, that he could count on the support of the association in subsequent proceedings. He said that M. Cornichet seemed surprised by his statement and utterly staggered when he explained why he had made it.

M. Cornichet assured him that nothing of the kind had taken place and that there was absolutely no necessity for the intervention of the association.

Such testimony from the inside is even more conclusive than the denials of the police and military authorities, which were issued equally promptly. The mischief was done, and the story is believed by very many people in Paris today.

Americans and Living Costs.

Another thing one hears continually is that the Americans are responsible for the high cost of living, especially as regards eggs, butter, and vegetables, which the American Army is said to

ALLIES AGAIN FALL BACK BEFORE REDS IN NORTH RUSSIA

Outflanked and Outnumbered, Americans, British, and Russians Retire Forty Miles.

RETREAT IN GOOD ORDER

Americans Evacuate Taresevo After a Week of Fighting—Foe Numbers 15,000.

BOLSHEVIKI ARE USING GAS

Shells Are of the German Type—Allies Equipped with Anti-Gas Apparatus.

ARCHANGEL, Feb. 1, (Associated Press.)—Another violent attack by the Bolsheviki on the American, Russian, and British positions at Taresevo compelled the hard-pressed and outnumbered little allied column in this sector to withdraw Thursday approximately forty miles. Its new position is at the village of Srdmakrenga.

The Bolshevist attack followed a bombardment in which gas, incendiary, shrapnel, and high explosive shells were used. It was the first time that gas shells had been employed in this northern Russian warfare. The shells were of the German type.

It has been learned that early in January in connection with the general plan to make the Bolshevist Army a formidable force by early Spring, gas schools were opened at Moscow.

The Bolsheviki, whose active forces in the field from the river Dvina to the Vologda Railroad are now estimated to number 15,000, brought up still more artillery yesterday and are heavily shelling the new American position on the Vaga River and also the position on the Dvina, at Tulgas. The other sectors are comparatively quiet.

The American evacuation of Taresevo came only after a week of fighting in this sector, in which the Bolsheviki kept persistently on the offensive after suffering considerable loss in their first attack, which was repulsed. Although attacked at Taresevo from three sides and greatly outgunned, the defenders held on there until yesterday, when a flanking column of the enemy, with guns, proceeded northwestward over a Winter road, and began an attack on the village of Gora, which is on the line of communications northward between Taresevo and Srdmakrenga.

The little detachment of British and Russians at Gora held out until the American Taresevo force completed its evacuation. The two forces then joined, retreating northward in good order.

The weather for the two days was unusually warm, with slight snowfalls today. The Winter trails are in splendid condition for sleighs, and the relief from the extreme cold is facilitating the movement of enemy troops from the southward.

The official statement on the operations on the Northern Russian front, issued today, says:

Wednesday and Thursday the Bolsheviki strongly attacked the positions at Taresevo, compelling the Allies to retire northward, and they are now holding positions twenty miles north of Taresevo. It is reported that the Bolsheviki are using gas shells. The Allies are completely equipped with anti-gas apparatus.

In Murmansk Allied patrols consisting of Karelian volunteers have reached Onlozero (Notosero?). From this village the Karelians have been enabled to enlist more volunteers.

Red Cross Supplies Our Men.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Comforts and supplemental supplies are reaching the American troops on the Archangel front regularly through the American Red Cross, which has established a sled service between its base at Archangel and the outlying posts where the Americans are opposing the Bolsheviki. A cablegram from Archangel made public by the Red Cross today said that icebreakers were keeping the harbor there open, so that supplies might be received.

The same cablegram told of a trip made by Major C. T. Williams of Baltimore, head of the Red Cross Commission to Archangel, to the villages bordering on the White Sea, in order to carry relief to the native population. Major Williams and his party made the trip of 350 miles to Klem by sled and the rest of the journey to Murmansk by railroad. In some villages, the message said, were found many persons who had been without proper nourishment for two years.

American books and magazines are aiding the American troops in the Vladivostok region to while away the long Siberian Winter. The American Library Association announced today that since last Summer more than 12,000 volumes had been sent to Siberia from San Francisco and the Philippines. Twenty-two collections of books were reported to be located in the vicinity of Vladivostok, and others have been placed at intervals in the camps of the American and other troops guarding the more than 4,000 miles of the Trans-Siberian railroad.

LEAGUE TO RULE BY ECONOMIC PRESSURE; USE OF FORCE BY NATIONS OPTIONAL; ARMAMENTS CUT; SUBMARINES BARRED

Definite Accord Is Reached on German Colonies; Conquered Regions To Be Detached From Turkey

PARIS, Feb. 1. (Associated Press.)—The accord reached by the council of the great powers concerning the disposal of the German colonies and the occupied regions of Turkey in Asia is much more definite than was generally supposed. In addition to acceptance in principle of the American plan of mandatories, the plan embraces the following main features:

The allied and associated powers are agreed that the German colonies shall not be returned to Germany, owing, primarily, to mismanagement, cruelty, and the use of these colonies as submarine bases.

The conquered regions of Armenia, Syria, Mesopotamia, Palestine, and Arabia are to be detached from the Turkish Empire.

Provision is made whereby the well-being and development of backward colonial regions are regarded as the sacred trust of civilization, over which the League of Nations exercises supervisory care. The administration or tutelage of these regions would be intrusted to the more advanced nations, who would act as mandatories in behalf of the League of Nations.

These mandatories would not be uniform, but vary according to the degree of development of the colonial region and its approach to the state of self-government. The mandates in Palestine, Syria, and other portions of Turkey, where well-developed civilization exists, would be comparatively light and would probably permit of provisional recognition of the independence of these communities.

On the other hand, colonies like those in Central Africa would require a mandatory with large powers of administration, responsible for the suppression of slave trade, liquor, ammunition and arms traffic, and the prevention of exercise of military authority on the part of the natives except for native police purposes.

Other colonies and localities, such as those in German Southwest Africa and some of the South Pacific islands, have such sparse and scattered populations and are so separated from other communities that the laws of the mandatory country would probably prevail in these regions.

The mandatories would report at stated intervals to the League of Nations concerning the manner in which a colony was being administered.

The foregoing general outline indicates in broad lines the terms whereby, it is stated, the conflicting views were finally reconciled and a common agreement was reached, acceptable to all the great and colonial powers.

"Freedom of the Seas" Proposal Is Drafted by Our Delegation

No One Fleet to Dominate Is First Principle Offered in All Friendship to Britain—Contraband to be Clearly Defined—League to Hold All Nations to the Sea Rules.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The American peace delegation is now formulating its views as to what, in its opinion, constitutes "the freedom of the seas," and is ready to present its formula to the other great powers and the Peace Conference whenever they reach the subject.

The interpretation of this expression has not been clear to the outside world, and even the statesmen of the other nations most interested have been mystified as to the exact position of President Wilson and his advisers.

Until very recently the other representatives seem to have had only broad outlines. At any rate they have been reticent as to all that term implied, but now I am able to answer in detail the question as to what America expects the Peace Conference to do, when it comes to write into the fundamental international law the regulations for the government of the navies and the mercantile marine of the world in war and, it may be said, in peace.

Points of the Formula.

The principal points of the American definition of what constitutes the rules of the sea that would be applied to all nations in the future may be thus set forth:

First—No nation shall have a fleet so large as to be able alone to control the seas.

Second—Sea rules for a period of belligerency, laid down in time of peace, shall not be changed while the war is in progress.

Third—Every nation, whether belligerent or neutral, shall be held to strict accountability by the League of Nations for observance of sea rules in time of war.

Fourth—Contraband of war shall be explicitly defined in time of peace and no neutral shall ship contraband, so defined, to a belligerent, nor shall the ships of a neutral attempt to run a blockade, established by a belligerent.

Fifth—The use of submarines shall be greatly restricted or preferably forbidden altogether.

These in general are the principles, broadly stated, which the American representatives hope the Peace Conference will adopt. They are certain to meet opposition, but some members of the American delegation appear to be so sure of the justice of their position that they are confident that something approximating their formula will be accepted by the other powers.

As to the British Fleet.

The obvious thing to say upon reading the points of the American formula, as here informally and broadly outlined, is that the first is aimed at Great Britain.

The American representatives do not deny that the British fleet is the only naval force capable of controlling the seas without assistance from any other naval power.

Great Britain now more than ever can claim to be mistress of the seas. The German and Austrian fleets have passed into history. The Russian fleet is merely a name. The naval forces of France and Italy have not been kept to the standard during the great war because of their dependence on the strength of the British fleet.

This leaves the United States and Japan as the only rivals of Britain in sea power, and neither nation can boast of such an array of dreadnoughts and lesser war vessels as appear on the British list of fighting ships.

It may, therefore, be accepted as axiomatic that Britannia rules the waves, and it may be added that the American officials, who are committed to a formula which has as its first principle that no nation shall have a fleet sufficiently powerful to overcome any or all other national fleets, are saying: "And thank God she has, for otherwise the war would not have been won so soon or not at all, if the magnificent British fleet had not been a bulwark against German aggression on the seas."

But, according to the American view, the successful ending of the war, fought by the Allies for a great ideal, has changed the situation, has given the world another viewpoint which must be adhered to. President Wilson, it is pointed out by the advocates of our commission's plan, is seeking to bring about conditions that will appeal to the sense of fair play of all nations. They contend that a single fleet, powerful enough to defeat the combined naval forces of all other powers, cannot properly be maintained without giving an unfair advantage to that particular maritime giant.

Primarily the American representatives maintain that it would be contrary to the spirit of the League of Nations to permit one Government to be in a position absolutely to rule the seas.

The basic principle of the league, it is argued, is that no nation shall be so strong that it may defy the rest of the world when a verdict is rendered against it or defeat the rest of the world if it so chooses.

The answer to the contention that this position of the United States is directly aimed at Great Britain is that America knows the British fleet would never be used against America. To suggest otherwise is to go contrary to the conviction that has been all the stronger in the minds of the British and American representatives in Paris since President Wilson came to France and paid his notable visit to England in Christmas week.

If nothing else comes out of this

DAILY MEETINGS PLANNED

Divergences on Details Can Be Settled Before Wilson Departs, It Is Felt.

CONSCRIPTION ONE PUZZLE

Scheme of Central Organization for League Is Also Still in Question.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The basic principles for the formation of the League of Nations have been agreed upon by the United States, Great Britain, and Italy, with France acquiescing in most particulars.

A formula, drawn by the American commission, will be presented at a meeting on Monday of the League of Nations Committee of the Peace Conference of which President Wilson and Colonel House are the American members. Daily meetings will be held until an agreement is reached.

There are still some divergences on important questions, such as the abolition of conscription, but it seems certain that these will yield to further discussion.

The tentative draft forbids the use of submarines.

The use of force to discipline a recalcitrant nation is left optional with the individual members of the league. Combined action in employing the economic disciplinary weapon is compulsory.

Land and naval armaments are to be reduced.

Neutral nations have been asked to submit plans for the league which will be considered by the league committee.

A hopeful feeling exists that the league program will be settled before President Wilson leaves for home. A spirit of harmony is being shown by all parties.

Italy has indicated her uncertainty over the abolishment of conscription, fearing that she cannot afford to pay enough to induce volunteering.

Some objection has been made to the permanent league organization which President Wilson desires and the committee is to consider whether the league shall conduct its business through a resident secretariat or will have league delegates meet at stated times.

A suggestion will be considered of having the diplomatic representatives of the nations at the league headquarters form a permanent executive council with each nation privileged to keep a special representative there.

The mandatory system for the government of former enemy territory is recognized in the formula, but this does not apply to Trentino and Alsace Lorraine, which are regarded as invaded regions.

Presents International Society's Idea.

PARIS, Feb. 1. (Associated Press.)—Leon Bourgeois, the French delegate on the Society of Nations, presented today to President Wilson, Premier Clemenceau, Premier Lloyd George, and Premier Orlando the text of the proposal for the formation of a League of Nations as agreed upon by the International Organization, embracing the American Society of which William H. Taft is President, the British, of which Viscount Grey is President, the Italian, French, and other associations.

M. Clemenceau had previously asked M. Bourgeois to obtain an agreement on details among the advocates of the project in all countries, and the plan presented today was in response to this request.

The scheme provides for compulsory arbitration in all disputes without exception, the limitation of armaments, and a series of penalties against nations provoking war. Detailed provisions are made for the organization of a Society of Nations, to which all countries, giving guarantees of loyal intentions, are to be admitted.

Under this plan the various nations would agree:

First—To submit all disputes arising between themselves to methods of peaceful settlement.

Second — To prevent or suppress jointly by the use of all means at their disposal any attempt by any State to disturb the peace of the world by acts of war.

Third—To establish an international court of justice charged with the duty of deciding all justiciable disputes and to insure the execution of its decisions by all appropriate international sanctions — diplomatic, juridic, economic, and, if necessary, military.

For an International Council.

Fourth—(1) To establish an international representative council, which will provide for the development of international law and take common action in matters of general concern.

(2) The representative council will watch over the freedom of nations and the maintenance of international order.

(3) Considering itself invested with the moral guardianship of uncivilized races, the representative council will secure the execution and, in case of need, promote the development of international covenants necessary for the protection and progress of those races.

(4) A permanent Committee of Conciliation shall take in hand all differences between the associated nations. The committee will act, in the first instance, as conciliator or mediator, and, if necessary, it will refer the differences, according to their nature, either to arbitration or to a court of justice. It will be charged with making all such inquiries as it considers useful, and will determine the necessary limits of time and conditions. In every and any case of a State refusing to obey either the award of the arbitrator or the decision of the committee, the application of appropriate sanctions will be proposed to the representative council and the associated Governments by the committee. These sanctions shall be obligatory in the case of violence or aggression.

(5) To limit and supervise the armaments of each nation and the manufacture of all material and munations of war, having regard to the requirements of the league.

(6) To renounce the making of secret treaties.

(7) To admit to the league on the basis of equal right before the law all people able and willing to give effective guarantees of their loyal intention to observe its covenants.

No official statement of the details of the "compromise plan" for the Government of former German colonies by mandatories has been made, but it is understood that the use of the word "colonies" in official statements does not limit the scope of the plan to former German territory. It may also apply to such territories as Mesopotamia, Armenia, and Palestine.

Chinese and Japanese claims to Tsing-tao, it is understood, will be left for adjustment to the league, and it is also believed that the same order will prevail as to Dalmatia and Albania, over which Italy and Jugoslavia are at odds.

In framing details for applying the principle of internationalization to the colonies under the mandatory system the Peace Conference Committee is understood to have agreed that the present immigration laws of Australia should obtain in New Guinea.

One of the main assertions of Australia in behalf of outright annexation of this territory was that under internationalization she would be unable to maintain her present laws, which provide for exclusion in certain cases. The conferees decided, it is stated, that Australia would have the right to say what immigration was desirable.

The present program contemplates the hastening of the League of Nations' plan by the committee having it in charge so that a report may be made before President Wilson's departure. The Secretariat has changed the name of this body to "The Commission on the Society of Nations," in deference to the wishes of a number of delegates who regarded the use of the word "league" as indicating an alliance for offensive and defensive purposes.

CRUCIAL STRUGGLE OVER COLONIES

Wilson Fought for "No Annexations" as Vital to Whole League Program.

BIG ECONOMIC OBSTACLE

This Was One Question Set Up by Allies in Provisional Acceptance of Plan.

BY RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The sessions of the leading plenipotentiaries of the five great powers who compose the Supreme Council of the Interallied Peace Conference have assumed their most interesting, and, if those of pessimistic mind are to be our guides, their most critical phase.

One argument advanced by those who take the pessimistic slant is that the success of the whole program for a League of Nations is bound up in a report in the present star chamber proceedings in the Foreign Office at the Quai d'Orsay. But the more general opinion is that the league as a combination of Governments capable of making this world a better place to live in is assured. From this point, however, the ramifications of view as to the league's usefulness begin.

What is the present situation in the council chamber of the Quai d'Orsay, where Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau, and other men whose names have become famous all over the world are sitting today as they have sat many days, endeavoring to straighten out what seems to be a tangle resulting from their acceptance—in some instances a very reluctant acceptance—of a principle laid down by the President of the United States, and which he regards as vital to the life and stability of the whole league scheme? That principle was that there should be no annexations of enemy territory, but that provisions should be made for the governmen. of such territory under a League of Nations as a federated organization of States.

Many Obstacles to Overcome.

At the very outset the President encountered an obstacle in the arrangement made secretly between Great Britain and Japan during the progress of the war. Under this arrangement—some call it an "understanding" and others a "treaty"—the German colonies in the South Pacific were to be divided between Japan and the British self-governing colonies in that part of the world. Japan was to obtain actual ownership of all German islands north of the equator and Australia and New Zealand to divide those lying south of the equator.

Australia, curiously enough, has proved a stumbling block more than Japan to the success of the President's move which meant the abrogation of the secret agreement concerning the German South Seas colonies, and for that matter all secret agreements between allied nations relating to the division of enemy territory.

Through her frank-spoken Premier, Hughes, Australia contended that if she did not get complete ownership and possession of the German islands south of the equator, with the German portion of New Guinea particularly in mind, there would be nothing to prevent these islands from being overrun by cheap Japanese labor, which has proved to be a red rag to the Australian bull.

In spite of this great obstacle the President won his point. He succeeded in getting the British Imperial War Cabinet which had been in session in Paris to assent to the principle that there should be no annexations and that the German colonies should be administered under a system of mandatories given by the League of Nations, that is, the league should designate certain States to administer these territories in behalf of the league until such time as other arrangements for their government could conveniently be made. France and Italy gave assent to the principle also, and the Japanese plenipotentiaries accepted it, conditional on the approval of Tokio.

Application of Plan Crucial.

Then came what is designated as a serious complication to the complete success of the President's principle. France and Italy made their acceptance provisional on the production by the President of a satisfactory plan for governing the German colonies under the mandatory system.

The South African Federation also was interested, for it hoped that German Southwest Africa, and perhaps much adjacent German territory which the Federation's troops had conquered, would be given outright to that Government. Italy had a peculiar interest in President Wilson's principle, as it was accepted as applying to Italian aspirations to Fiume and part of the Dalmatian coast.

Against the demand of France and Italy, which the Australian Premier supported, that the President furnish a workable plan for the administration of the German colonies, the President has had to battle more strenuously than at any time since the conference began.

His opponents wanted to know who was to assume the obligations of the conquered territory. Would the League of Nations stand any financial deficit, or would this be borne by the nation or self-governing federation which acted as administrator for the league? And how would revenues be obtained and applied?

Sharp Exchanges with Hughes.

In spite of opposition of this character, which sometimes developed into spirited exchanges between the President and Hughes, the President has gone ahead in the confident belief, judged by what comes from those who know his state of mind, that he will convince his critics that it is entirely feasible to provide arrangements for the economic administration of the conquered colonies satisfactory to all concerned.

In the very heat of the oratorical contest behind the closed doors of the Quai d'Orsay he succeeded in having the plenipotentiaries agree that if his economic plan were accepted the German colonies would be governed under a system permitting the people of those colonies which are regarded as civilized to determine what nation they desired to assume their administration under the League of Nations and the noncivilized colonies to have an administrator designated by the league. This principle further provided that at the earliest opportunity the civilized colonies should have the right of self-determination.

This agreement explains the statement in Thursday's official communiqué that the Supreme Council had provided for the provisional government of German colonial possessions in Africa and the Pacific.

That is the situation now. President Wilson is anxious to hasten its conclusion so that the conference can decide upon the general terms of organization and government of the League of Nations before he sails for America a fortnight hence. Whether he will succeed in this effort and be able to assure Congress that the great object of his visit to Europe has been accomplished is problematical. But it is worthy of note that the American representatives here seem to be filled with a spirit of optimism.

NO BARRING BERNSTORFF.

America Cannot Object to Him as a German Delegate.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—American delegates to the Peace Conference, it is understood, will raise no objection to the appointment of Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador in Washington, as one of the German delegates to the Peace Conference, although not attempting to influence or speak for the Entente delegation.

It is stated that it is beyond the power of one Government to say that it does not desire the presence of any person whom the other party to the treaty making process may select as a representative.

TAKING CONTROL IN TURKEY.

Allies Running the Railroads and Handling Capital Police.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—An official report to the State Department today announced that the French and British authorities had assumed control of all railroads in European and Asiatic Turkey in accordance with the terms of the armistice and that the Allies had also taken over control of the Constantinople police and the German and Austrian banks in the capital.

These measures, it was stated, were having a good effect upon the situation in Turkey, and disorders were decreasing.

A British delegate has been attached to the food control administration in Constantinople.

DALMATIAN COAST LIKELY TO BE SLAV

But Fiume May Go to Italy in Settlement of Adriatic Problem.

AMERICA AS THE UMPIRE

Proposed Compromise Is Said to be Satisfactory to Premier Orlando.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Although the Adriatic coast problem has not yet been taken up for settlement by the five big powers, it is now possible to state with absolute definiteness not only what's what but who's who in this controversy between Italy and Jugoslavia. Furthermore, a prediction of the outcome can be made with reasonable assurance that it will be correct.

In the first place, Italy and Jugoslavia both have given up as impossible their extreme territorial claims. In beginning their present movement for independent statehood long before the armistice the Jugoslavs had a dream of possessing not only the whole Dalmatian coast and Fiume, but also Trieste. Their maps show it that way, and their published appeals, full of geographic, historic, and ethnographic arguments, show that it should be that way.

If they did not expect all this, they at least hoped and dreamed it, and tried to read into every utterance by President Wilson and others in favor of the new nations an indorsement of their extreme plans. They are now convinced that those plans are hopeless. For example, nobody except the Jugoslavs themselves thinks for a moment that anybody but the Italians should have Trieste.

Italian Leaders at Odds.

Early developments of the Peace Conference will probably reveal that there is practical unanimity concerning the Fiume negotiation. It was supposed that Austria would still be in existence at the end of the war, and Fiume was left as her one port on the Adriatic. So the extreme demand of either Italy or Jugoslavia would leave nothing to the other country of the east coast of the Adriatic.

At the present moment the dispute has narrowed down to the question which is almost as much of a controversy between Orlando and Sonnino as between Italy and Jugoslavia. The two Italian statesmen are absolutely opposed to each other. Their conflicting policies, clearly stated, are these:

Orlando would take Fiume for Italy and give to Jugoslavia all the Dalmatian coast except Zara and some of the principal islands.

Sonnino, who is now convinced that he cannot get everything, would give Fiume to Jugoslavia but keep all the Dalmatian coast for Italy. That is, he stands strictly for the literal observance of the London treaty, yielding Fiume with regret, simply because it was not put in the treaty.

France and England, having signed the treaty, refuse to take sides, though it is well known that they think the treaty should be abrogated.

So America comes in as umpire. America sees great justice in the Italian claim to Fiume, because the Italian population predominates in that city, although the outlying country is Slavic.

The Probable Settlement.

On the other hand, America has no sympathy whatever with the Sonnino policy, which would deprive the new Jugoslav State of its whole coast line. So it is altogether likely that in the Peace Conference settlement the London treaty will melt out of existence under the fourteen points, and the Jugoslavs will get their coast.

Statesmen of the various powers concerned who approve this solution defend it not only on the ground of justice and fairness, but also of expediency, declaring that the adoption of the Sonnino policy would in all probability provoke the Jugoslavs into bitter warfare, waged from their hinterland against the Italians on their coast.

On the contrary, the Orlando policy, which America will probably approve as umpire, and which England and France unofficially are in sympathy with, will give the Jugoslavs not all they wanted, but a sufficient seacoast with good ports to enable them to develop as a new State. Furthermore, they may get, probably will get, certain rights to use Fiume for trade purposes.

Sonnino's only backing is in the extreme annexationists of Italy's Nationalist Party, but that is considerable, for in Italy the population have been fed on hopes of aggrandizement ever since they went into the war. Public support of Sonnino now is indicated by the bitter press campaign recently started in the Italian journals against France for its sympathy with Jugoslavia. For his part, Orlando thinks it is safer politics to have the good-will of America, France, and England and take a chance on the subsidence of the extreme annexationist views of his own people.

FREEDOM OF SEAS PROPOSAL DRAFTED

Peace Conference, at least the world will realize that standing as they do for the same ideals, speaking the same language, and bound together by ties that the comradeship in war has made stronger, Great Britain and America would regard hostilities between themselves as something unthinkable.

That is the thing that stands out so boldly as the result of what has taken place since April, 1917, and particularly during the few weeks that peace exchanges have been in progress, as to be mentioned without citing this or that man of prominence as the sponsor. Similar considerations apply to other nations than Great Britain in their relations with the United States, except as regards language, but no question has been raised that the effort of the American Commission to have a new formula adopted for sea government touches any nation but Great Britain and the necessity does not exist for enumerating the specialties of friendship with them.

Hold League Must Dominate.

In the friendship spirit, therefore, according to their own explanation, the American officials feel that recognition in the peace treaty that one nation (in this case Great Britain) has a superior right to maintain a fleet more powerful than any other nation or the combined fleets of all nations, would be to violate the cardinal principle of the League of Nations, namely, that every Government in the league must bow to the superior judgment of the league in all cases affecting the peace of the world.

The United States delegation does not object to the reduction of naval armaments and it would not cause surprise if America's influence was thrown in that direction. But the American position is that whatever the maximum naval strength of the greatest naval power may be, the United States shall have the right to build her fleet up to that strength. This does not mean that this right will be exercised. It means merely that the United States shall not be discriminated against by concessions made to any other government.

In some way the impression has become prevalent that the provisions, which are to be embodied in the peace treaty, will be determined by a majority vote of the great powers.. This is entirely erroneous.

No nation is to be bound to any treaty provision without its consent. Agreements to be binding must be unanimous. This principle applies to naval armaments as well as other matters that may be covered in the peace convention. Whatever the treaty may provide with reference to armaments there will be nothing contained in it which would require the United States to maintain a naval force, inferior to that of any other power.

Urgent on No Change of Rules.

The argument behind the suggested agreement that sea rules shall not be changed in time of war goes into the experiences of the recent struggle and, in fact, all great conflicts. The contention is advanced by our representatives that practices applying to contraband blockade and right of visit and search have caused trouble and irritation between neutrals and belligerents, whenever wars are in progress. It is in the hope that these annoyances, which are likely to lead to serious clashes between governments, may be relegated to the background, that the American delegation is ready with proposals designed to overcome these annoyances and dangers in the future.

The position of the American Commission is that the Peace Conference shall provide for establishing a code of sea rules to be observed by neutrals and belligerents when hostilities are in progress. Our commission would go a step further and make it an offense for any nation to violate any provision of the code. How to draft provisions of this character that will be acceptable to all nations is the problem, but the Americans, officially interested, believe they have solved it.

Action on Ireland Postponed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Action on a resolution requesting the American delegates to the Peace Conference to present and urge the right of Ireland to "freedom, independence, and self-determination," was today postponed until next Thursday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee because of the absence of Representative Flood of Virginia, Committee Chairman.

FRANCE FELL BACK FOR LOVE OF PEACE

Viviani Thrills Deputies with Recital of Reasons for Uncovering Frontier in 1914.

IN ANSWER TO CRITICISM

Engerand Had Charged Technical Mistake in Abandoning Artillery Control of Briey Iron Region.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The French Government on July 30, 1914, ordered its troops to retire eight or ten kilometers from the frontier, having heard that the German troops were moving toward it, René Viviani, the then Premier, declared in the Chamber of Deputies last night.

"On the same day," he said, "I requested Paul Cambon (French Ambassador at London) by wire to inform Sir Edward Grey of the measures taken.

"'England,' I said, 'will realize that, if France is firm, it is not she who is taking measures of aggression. Although Germany has moved her troops upon her battleline the Government of the French Republic intends to demonstrate that France, as well as Russia, bears no responsibility for the attack.'"

These reminiscences caused the Deputies to rise and cheer the ex-Premier.

"Could we risk a murderous war upon the chance meeting of patrols?" M. Viviani continued. "We desired to proclaim high before the world that, if France were forced to fight, she would do so for right and justice, and not take advantage of any equivocation.

"The withdrawal was carried out without meeting any obstacle, either technical or military. Had we met with an observation from General Joffre that the measure might endanger the fate of the country, we should not have hesitated, but would have kept the watch on the frontier. No objection came from the General."

M. Viviani's speech was made in reply to questions by Deputy Fernand Engerand, who sharply criticised the abandonment of the ten-kilometer zone. He asserted that it was a technical mistake, because the mineral valley of Briey was within range of the French guns, and, had it been bombarded intensively for three or four days, the German iron ore deposits and factories would have been destroyed and Germany placed in an inferior position regarding minerals. This the Deputy thought, would have brought about an end of the war in six months.

Deputy Engerand added that the abandonment of the French sources of minerals and iron without a fight created a situation which caused the first battle of the Marne to become a pyrrhic victory, instead of the absolute defeat of the enemy.

M. Viviani replied that the abandonment of the Briey Valley in the event of war had been decided upon by the General Staff in January, 1914. A withdrawal to a depth of twenty-five kilometres was first considered, said M. Viviani, who then read a telegram from General Joffre, dated July 30, reading as follows:

"For diplomatic reasons it is indispensable that no incident occur at the frontier. No unit and no patrol shall advance east of the line fixed."

M. Viviani then read a message from Adolphe Messimy, the Minister of War at that time, as follows:

"In order to assure English collaboration, it is indispensable that French troops do not cross the general line decided upon, unless a regular attack is made upon them."

General Joffre, learning that seventeen violations of the French frontier had been committed, telegraphed to Premier Viviani on Aug. 2 as follows:

"The interdiction against crossing the line indicated is lifted, but, for national reasons of a diplomatic and moral order, it is indispensable to leave to the Germans the entire responsibility for hostilities. Consequently our troops will merely hold the enemy back and throw him upon the frontier, without pursuing him beyond."

M. Viviani, amid tense silence, continued:

"Then war was declared. The President of the republic wrote a letter to King George, which was published in the press at that time; but the reply of the King is still unpublished. It reads:

"'I admire the limitation which France willingly imposed upon herself and which so vitally concerns her military defense.'"

The ex-Premier was laboring under great emotion, and his voice was at a high pitch, carrying to every corner of the spacious chamber, as he concluded:

"It is essential that the world know that, in order to assure the peace of the world, we were making such a sublime sacrifice in uncovering our frontier in order to affirm our right. Do you think that geat and noble America would have remained indifferent to such a striking demonstration of our good faith and that it had no influence upon her final decision?

"The responsibility for the war historians may discuss, but France, by her withdrawal ten kilometres away from her frontier, has given the world proof of her earnest desire for peace."

By WALTER DURANTY.

have cornered. The old gibe against the English breakfast has been transferred to the Americans, but the story becomes serious when small shopkeepers say, as I heard a woman say no later than last night: "The Americans have taken all the eggs. You know what robbers they are!"

There comes another link in the chain of calumny—the accusations of crime against American soldiers. It is a curious coincidence, to say the least, that a statement should appear in the Paris press to the effect that an American Chief of Police named Evans has been summoned to Paris with numerous subordinates to reinforce the existing American police system, the implication being that the latter is inadequate. That the story was inaccurate mattered little. Most people believed it, and deduced therefrom that the American crime wave was really serious.

But how and why did it get into the papers? It would be too tedious to enumerate all the rumors whose chief purpose seems to be the creation of bad feeling between French and Americans. They vary from accounts of disagreements between Wilson and Clemenceau to reports of how a French or American unit was sacrificed at the front because the neighboring American or French forces refused assistance or supplies.

Anti-Italian Propaganda.

In the case of Italy, d'Annunzio's wild letter made an excellent starting-point. Amazing versions of it were circulated to such an extent that one well-known English correspondent here remarked:

"If the accounts I have heard of d'Annunzio's statement had been true—which they were not—it would have been a regular casus belli between Italy and the other allies."

The trouble is that the majority of people, without fully believing such stories, pass them on as interesting gossip or scandal, often with their own exaggerations, although they themselves would be horrified at the accusation of disloyalty.

That is what makes this sort of thing so dangerous. And, whatever one may say against the theory of deliberate propaganda, the fact remains that pro-German elements were able to operate in Paris during the war, and therefore would not find their task more difficult now that certain war restrictions have been removed.

Moreover, there are now in circulation in Paris vast numbers of rumors whose individual and combined effect is prejudicial to good relations among the Allies. Finally, it is immensely to the advantage of Germany and other hostile elements to produce disunion and mutual dissatisfaction by any means whatever.

Rumors About Turkey, Too.

Jan. 31.—One feature of the censorship régime in France during the war was the amazing crop of rumors to which it gave rise at periods of crisis or anxiety. Its maintenance over the French press is producing a similar effect at present. Attempts are made to interpret or read between the lines of the communiqués, with the result that the wildest stories become current directly the stimulus of an unexpected announcement arouses public attention.

A typical instance is provided by yesterday's statement that the Supreme War Council would be asked to arrange a redistribution of the allied forces in Turkish territory. One now hears "on good authority" of rioting in Constantinople, serious difficulties between Greeks and Italians about the coast of Asia Minor, similar troubles among Arabs and Syrians over Damascus, pitched battles between Mussulman tribesmen and Armenian Christians on the Georgian frontier and, to crown all, mysterious whispers of a projected allied expedition "to somewhere in the Black Sea," which is about to start from Constantinople under command of a noted French General.

Those who transmit such stories are mostly ignorant of the mutual suspicion among the Allies which they imply and foster. They prefer a sensational and far-fetched explanation to the simple and often humdrum truth. At the same time it is significant that their repetition during the war has always coincided with moments of doubt and depression, just as it cannot be denied at present that the work of the conference is not being facilitated by the atmosphere of criticism, confusion and cross purposes registered by the Paris diplomatic barometer.

Explanation Is Plain.

The Near Eastern question contains exceptional possibilities of mischief-making on account of the multiplicity and delicacy of the interests involved. Nevertheless, the reason for the redistribution of the allied troops in Turkey is so obvious and so naturally a consequence of the Supreme Council's decision to apply the mandatory principle under the League of Nations control to the former Ottoman Empire that no misunderstanding should be possible.

As matters stand at present the British armies in Palestine and Mesopotamia form the very great majority of the allied forces in Turkish territory. The French military contingent consists largely of the Armenian Legion which fought in Henin under the French flag. At the same time General Franchet d'Esperey is understood to have been appointed to an important post at Constantinople, where there are no doubt some French troops to aid in policing the city, which service has hitherto been performed by the British. There are naval forces—French, British, and Italian—at various ports, and Greek troops have been landed at Smyrna and other points on the coast of Asia Minor to insure the safety of their nationals.

There has been little unity of control or action among the various contingents, and it was only to be expected that a reorganization of the whole system and a regrouping of forces for a common purpose under single direction would be a necessary preliminary to the proposed international action. The central authority thus constituted will regulate such causes of friction as may have arisen from the conflicting claims of different parties and avoid their recurrence by a redistribution of the allied contingents under its control.

LOSS OF COLONIES DEPRESSES BERLIN

Reports of Paris Decision Spread Despair Among German People.

SOLF ALONE IS HOPEFUL

Ex-Secretary Thinks Germany May Profit by a Division of Allies at the Conference.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 31, (via Copenhagen.)—Reports about the Allies' intentions concerning the German colonies have caused the greatest general depression here, most people having hoped that at least a part of them would be restored. With a thousand and one miseries at home, it needed only the Paris reports to deepen despair.

"We no longer have any say concerning our fate and future, but are already treated like slaves," is the way the Lokal-Anzeiger characterizes the situation.

In Government circles, too, there is a feeling again of despair, the only hope being that the National Constitution may restore to some degree a national self-confidence.

The People's Commissioners are half dead with constant worry from within and without and, as THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent is reliably informed, were more than once during the last month at the point of throwing up the game.

THE TIMES correspondent found the ex-Secretary of State and Foreign Affairs, Dr. Solf, not quite so hopeless. Indeed, he hopes that he will have a chance as delegate to the Peace Conference to convince the Allies of the necessity of restoring some colonies to Germany. THE TIMES correspondent asked Solf's opinion about the Paris reports.

Thinks Allies Are Divided.

"Those reports," said the ex-Secretary, "contradict each other, and only this must be certain, that the Allies are not united as to the fate of our colonies.

"President Wilson has more than once expressed an honest intention to give due consideration to the German colonial requirements, but it seems he has met strong opposition from English and French circles.

"The present press campaign against German colonial interests is considered also as an attack on that part of Wilson's peace program dealing with this question."

"Do you consider it possible that the present German People's Government might renounce its rights to these colonies if a majority of the Entente States should insist upon it?" he was asked.

"That is absolutely not the question. The German Government must insist on loyal adherence to the colonial part of Wilson's peace program or it will antagonize an overwhelming majority of the German people. In Paris it was stated that Australia and New Zealand would be embittered many years unless permitted to annex New Guinea and Samoa, but what will be the bitterness created among the German people if at the conclusion of peace they find themselves deprived of all colonies?"

"You noticed that the Entente States justified their intentions by the allegation that the natives of the German colonies were badly treated and that there is danger that they might be used as U-boat bases?" it was suggested.

"Such allegations are merely invented with a desire for annexation," he said. "I must solemnly protest against such misrepresentation. The truth is that Germany has never treated the natives of the colonies worse than the Entente powers treated theirs, which will be proved by the new German White Book. That shows the utter fallacy of all the allegations contained in the English Blue Book. I myself have always as Governor of Samoa, and later as Chief of the Colonial Office, insisted that the natives must not only be educated in the spirit of Christianity, but also treated in that spirit. I have always strictly confided to my subordinates this principle. Years ago I said, 'Colonization means mission work.' I may also point to the fact that I was the first to demand the demilitarization of Africa for the interest of all nations concerned.

"Besides, I have repeatedly pointed out that the African colonies should not merely serve as objects of exploitation to the so-called mother countries, but their products should serve the common benefit of all Europe.

Scouts Fear of U-Boat Zones.

"At the present moment the allegation that Germany might use these colonies as U-boat and naval bases is simply ridiculous. There was no ground for any suspicion from the moment that the German Government unreservedly accepted Wilson's League of Nations and disarmament proposals. I am sincerely hoping these ideals will be realized, but because I hope this I should state that its realization will be frustrated by an unjust peace.

"To deprive Germany of all her colonies would certainly make the realization of Wilson's ideals impossible. I am convinced that Wilson's high ethical spirit and honest intentions will endow him with the power necessary to secure the triumph of justice over principles of power."

WILL DEFY WEIMAR DECREES

German Radicals Continue Plans for Separate Parliament.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 1.—It is becoming more apparent, as the meeting of the German National Assembly approaches that the Left radical elements are planning the establishment of a counter-parliament, according to dispatches from Berlin.

While the Berlin Executive Council desires to convene all the Soldiers' Councils to protest against the Government's regulations relative to command of the army, the Berlin Workmen's Council has evidenced its intention to bring about an election of a new Central Council composed solely of radicals. Independent Socialists and adherents of the elements of the Left realize that the system of Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils will be abolished as soon as the National Assembly meets, and are resorting to measures for meeting that contingency.

The setting up of governmental authority by the National Assembly is expected that the radicals, being convinced that the Russian example of dispersing their Constituent Assembly cannot be successfully imitated, are planning to meet force with force.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—Since Thursday no one has been allowed to enter the city of Weimar without permission, says a Zurich dispatch to the Petit Parisien, which adds that after Monday no one will be allowed to enter without a special pass. The opening of the session of the German Constituent Assembly is fixed for 1 o'clock next Thursday. On Friday the President of the assembly will be elected, after which the assembly will adjourn to give the committees time to discuss the proposed Constitution of the German Republic.

DUTCH FEAR ANNEXATION.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 29.—Fear of the annexation of Dutch territory is becoming a bugbear in Government circles at The Hague, and there are growing evidences of a fear of arbitrary decisions at Paris.

A committee composed of many well-known members of the Government, politicians and Deputies, is to hold a demonstration against annexation and for the unity of Holland in the largest orchestral hall at The Hague on Feb. 6. The committee will be presided over by the President of the Second Chamber and a Committee of Honor will also be formed of high governmental and other authorities who will invite the Queen to attend the meeting.

GERMAN STATES UNITED.

Agree That They Must Control Their Own Finances.

BASLE, Jan. 31.—At the conference between the Finance Ministers of the various independent States of Germany, which was concluded yesterday at Weimar, there was, it is reported, a unanimous conviction that the urgent needs of Germany must be met to a certain extent by the independent States. For this purpose it was held that they must have all the financial liberty necessary to carry out their task, according to a dispatch from Berlin.

GOMPERS SPURNS BERNE CONFERENCES

American Labor Delegates Support the Attitude of the Belgians.

WILL NOT MEET GERMANS

American Socialists in Paris Try to Have American Participation.

PARIS, Feb. 1, (Associated Press.)—The American Federation of Labor delegation, headed by Samuel Gompers, decided tonight to support the Belgian Socialists and trade unionists who refuse to meet the Germans at the Socialist Congress or Trade Union Congress which will convene simultaneously at Berne next week.

Delegates to the Interallied Trades Union Conference deliberated all day yesterday on the question of participating in the labor and Socialist conference at Berne. The debate was very lively, American and Belgian delegates refusing to recognize the international conference as at present planned. In the evening, Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and other American delegates withdrew.

"Belgian Socialists will not go to Berne under any consideration," said Baron Capelle, one of the Secretaries of the Belgian peace delegation, this afternoon, "or if delegates make the journey they will not be representing the Belgian Socialist Party. The delegates here have an imperative mandate from their brothers in Belgium instructing them to refuse to meet the Germans. These latter Belgians are Socialists who remained more than four years under the brutal tyranny of German domination, and they will never forget. They will never shake the hand of those who shed or caused their brothers' blood to flow."

American Socialists, some of whom are in Paris, are making efforts to obtain American participation in the conference.

Application has been made to Colonel House of the American Peace Delegation, to have passports issued to two prominent American Socialists who are believed to be in New York at the present time. Thus far the application has elicited no response. It is understood, however, that Washington will be permitted to deal with the applications in accordance with its general policy concerning passports.

BERNE, Friday, Jan. 31.—The peace societies of Switzerinad, Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden are organizing an international conference to be held here the middle of February to deal with the question of a League of Nations. The Dutch pacifist, Dr. De Jong, Dr. Broda of Vienna, and Dr. Troesch of Berne, are the leading officials of the organization in arranging details for the meeting.

GOMPERS LABOR CHAIRMAN.

Elected President of Commission on International Legislation.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The Commission on International Legislation on Labor of the Peace Conference unanimously elected Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, as President at a meeting this morning. Arthur Fontaine of the French Ministry of Labor was elected General Secretary, with Mr. Butler, a British delegate, as Joint General Secretary. The commission decided to name two Secretaries, one Italian, Palma Castigliore, and one Belgian, who will also represent the nations with special interests.

Those present at the meeting were M. Colliard, French Minister of Labor; M. Loucheur, French Minister of Reconstruction; M. Fontaine, and Leon Jouhaux of the French Labor Federation, for France; George Nicoll Barnes, Sir Malcolm Delevingne, and Mr. Butler, for Great Britain; Emile Vandervelde and M. Mehain, for Belgium; Samuel Gompers and Edward N. Hurley, for the United States; Mayor des Planches, for Italy; M. Benes, for Czechoslovakia; M. Zoltowski, for Poland, and a representative of A. S. Bustamente, the Cuban member.

M. Colliard, in proposing Mr. Gompers as President of the commission, said:

"No one appears to me to be better qualified than the President of the greatest and most powerful workers' organization in the world. Such a choice would, furthermore, be legitimate homage to his life's devotion to the workers, entirely consecrated to the struggle for social justice."

Concerning the commission, M. Colliard said:

"Our work will be the consecration of the democratic idea on an economic ground. It will give peace its complete signification by guaranteeing the dignity and liberty of human labor by an international convention."

Other committees of the Peace Conference are about to begin their work in earnest. Monday the Committee on Ports, Waterways, and Railroads will assemble at the Ministry of Public Works and the Committee on Reparations at the Ministry of Finance.

The committee charged with the investigation of responsibility for the war also will meet Monday to begin its work.

Sir Gordon Hewart, Attorney-General of Great Britain, who is due here today, has been intrusted with the task of supporting the demand for bringing former Emperor William to public trial and also with upholding the British views before the Reparations Committee.

DENIES STAFF SOUGHT PEACE

Hertling's Son Insists German High Command Did Not Weaken.

BASLE, Jan. 31.—A son of the late Count George F. von Hertling, former Imperial Chancellor of Germany, has published a denial of the allegation that the German Imperial Government was twice requested by the Supreme Command of the army to conclude peace while his father was holding office. He avers that he is conversant with all that took place at that time between the Supreme Military Command and the Government, and says that it is untrue that, either in May or August, 1918, did the General Staff ask, or even hint, that peace was desired, or intimate that it was willing to renounce any of Germany's war aims in any way.

The General Anzeiger of Frankfort, which prints the denial, adds that young Hertling is preparing a book in which full records of his father's activities will be set forth.

Reach Oil Land Agreement at Last.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The deadlock over oil land leasing legislation was broken tonight, when Senate and House conferees reached a tentative agreement on the bill, which has been in dispute since May. Chairman Pittman of the Senate conferees announced that the changes in the bill would be made public Monday after a final meeting of the conferees.

considered likely to dampen the ardor of the elements inclined to resort to rioting.

The ship repairers on the Thames side, who have been out during the week without strike pay, have now been promised 15 shillings per man weekly by their union. Therefore the possibility of a shortness of funds ending the strike has disappeared.

The Belfast Strike Committee, having virtually tied up the city, is turning its attention to attempts to extend the strike to the rest of Ireland, while the example of Glasgow is being followed by the shipyard workers on the northeast coast and along the Bristol Channel. They are demanding a forty-hour week.

The meeting of the representatives of twenty-four trades unions, which was originally called to meet at London to discuss the working of a forty-seven-hour week, will now be occupied in debating whether a demand for a forty-hour week shall be made.

The administration of Belfast from Artisans' Hall by self-constituted rulers continues, the organization of a police force of 300 special constables by the Strike Committee having been effected. This force is co-operating in harmony with the city police, and window-smashing and other disorders have virtually ceased. The entire city has accepted the rule of the committee, which prohibits extreme agitators and Sinn Feiners from speaking. Anybody with a grievance must obtain permission from the committee before airing it publicly.

The strikers' newspaper did not appear on Friday, but it has been announced that an eight-page paper will be issued on Saturday and be continued each day to take the place of the usual afternoon papers, which have been entirely stopped. Many advertisements have already been received and the editoral staff has been appointed.

Football matches, dances, and concerts at which strike leaders will be star performers have been arranged for the week-end. There is one trouble however, which comes from the wives of some of the workers. They grumble because they are obliged to continue working in the textile factories while their husbands are idling.

TROOPS TO BREMEN TO RESTORE ORDER

restore order by force of arms in Bremen, where the Spartacide terror now reigns. A sufficiently large body of troops already has arrived there, and is now in possession of the railway station and other important places.

At the same time the authorities on the eastern frontier are begging the People's Commissioners most urgently to send troops to prevent further invasions by the Poles in West Prussia and Bolshevists in East Prussia. The latter have accumulated many divisions on the line Libau-Dubissa-Kovno, which are only opposed by small parts of the former German Eighteenth Army and Iron Division, the latter, having dwindled to a few hundred men. The Poles in West Prussia are only opposed by armed citizens who are unorganized. According to a military expert, at least 10,000 experienced troops are needed to stop the Polish invasion.

The Government is badly handicapped in creating sufficiently large military bodies by the constant interference of the Soldiers' Councils, who warn the war veterans not to enlist and incite them to mutiny. Officers, who recently had restored some of their old privileges, also express discontent and threaten to strike. In a few regiments, however, officers found their way into the new order of things and seem quite contented.

In a suburb of Lichterfelde one company, led by Lieutenant Torau, mutinied yesterday, left their barracks and established headquarters in a tavern. Torau appointed himself Captain and one of his friends Lieutenant. When another company of the same regiment was about to take the train for Bremen yesterday Torau's company tried to prevent them by force of arms and several men were wounded.

Late last night Torau received an ultimatum, threatening bombardment of his quarters by heavy artillery unless he surrendered before midnight to the commander of his regiment, whereupon Torau fled to Berlin, where he was arrested. This morning his company surrendered.

Today the Naval Central Council demands the immediate arrest of Admiral Schroeder, Judge Advocate Koeser, and Captain Wegner, whom the Council accuses of having unlawfully caused the death of two sailors. These men, named Scheika and Macherea, deserted and were caught at the Dutch frontier, and sentenced to death by a court composed of the above-named officers. The Admiral gave the order of execution. This, the Council claims, was wrong, because the Admiral knew the sailors were included in the general pardon for all political and military offenders. If the People's Commissioners should order the arrest of these officers, a strike would be quite likely, because then all discipline will vanish.

BERLIN, Jan. 30, (Associated Press.)—Germany's eastern frontiers are most gravely threatened by the Bolsheviki and Poles, according to the Tageblatt, which gives the following report of the situation:

"Strong Bolshevist armies stand before the borders of East Prussia, an irruption of Poles threatens West Prussia and that portion of West Posen which is still in German hands is subject to a renewed Polish menace, which means that the Province of Brandenburg, (of which Berlin is the capital,) is also in danger. Russian Soviet troops occupy a line from Libau to Kovno. The fortress of Kovno is not yet in their hands, but the Bolsheviki stand directly in front of it and have at their disposal numerous divisions which are held together and led forward by iron discipline. The Soldiers' Councils no longer play the rôle in the Bolshevist army that they did at the beginning of the revolution. Military authority, on the other hand, is vested with the troops and their leaders.

"The German Eighth and Tenth Armies are retreating before the Soviet troops. The 'Iron Division,' which now, as a result of losses, has melted into the 'Iron Brigade,' numbering some hundreds of men, is also there. It would unquestionably be possible to offer resistance to the Bolsheviki beyond the East Prussian border if the Germans were well led by a single determined will. Military authority, however, despite recent decrees of the War Minister, is actually in the hands of the Soldiers' Councils, who have not been able to decide on a united and purposeful action against the Russians, but, on the contrary, still believe they can stop the enemy's advance toward our borders by negotiations.

"Speedy help from dependable volunteer corps ready to oppose the Russians with arms, if required, is absolutely necessary. The same can be said of the situation in West Prussia. Numerous citizens' guards which have been organized there are not in position to check the threatening advance of the Poles. Some thousands of volunteers are urgently needed there.

"It must be emphasized that the engagement at Klussee, in which the Poles were beaten recently, was no accidental, local conflict, but formed the beginning of a carefully planned advance of the Poles into West Prussia. The situation in West Posen is still critical. Bentschen and Meseritz, southwest and west of Posen, are threatened, and, with them, Brandenburg's frontier is menaced."

MUTINY SPREADS IN ARMY.

Soldiers' Councils Defy Orders Issued by the Minister of War.

BERLIN, Friday, Jan. 31, (Associated Press.)—An order issued by Colonel Reinhardt, Prussian Minister of War, has aroused open revolts on the part of Soldiers' Councils in the German armies. The Council of the Ninth Army has declared that it will not obey the order, and has been informed that the Government will find means to enforce it.

The order of Colonel Reinhardt concerns a lessening of the authority of the Soldiers' Councils.

Up to this time the Councils of many or most of the armies have been exercising virtually complete control, even in matters of command, and the order was received generally with dissatisfaction, it being declared by some that the Government was playing squarely into the hands of the Bolsheviki.

The first open revolt came from the Soldiers' Council of the Ninth Army Corps, which sent delegates to Gustav Noske, the military Commander of Berlin, with the demand that the order be rescinded. Herr Noske refused, whereupon the delegation informed him that the order would not be obeyed in their army. Noske replied that the Government would find means to enforce it.

The Government, it is believed, however, will have a very busy time if it attempts to enforce the order. The councils in many army corps, as well as a great number of local councils, already have given notice that the order will not be obeyed.

The council at Luebeck, to whom a Colonel was sent by the Government to discuss the matter, ordered the Colonel to leave the city within twenty-four hours. The officers of a pioneer battalion at Harburg resigned owing to the attitude of the council. On the day after the publication of the order 200 soldiers from the garrison at Allenstein paraded the streets with a placard inscribed: "Down with Officers." Officers were stopped in the streets at revolver points and their shoulder straps torn off. One officer who resisted was stabbed fatally.

Numerous instances of illegal actions on the part of the councils, apart from disobedience to the order of the War Minister, are reported. The Soldiers' Council at Coburg issued a warning against enlistment in the forces designed to protect the eastern frontier. The Workmen's Council at Steele, Rhenish Prussia, "forbids the recruiting of volunteers for any troops." The council of the 19th Army Corps, at Dresden, has issued a similar order.

The Council at Arnswalde, Brandenburg, forcibly deposed the President of the civil district. The activities of the opponents of the Government find expression also in many other ways. In Northern Berlin, which is a Spartacan stronghold, forged military orders to report to the colors are being sent to hundreds of men of military age. The Government has formally declared these orders to be forgeries, and that there is no intention of conscripting anybody.

The Radical Independent organ, Die Freiheit, has accelerated its campaign against the Government. Today, for instance, it prints an order issued by Herr Noske on Jan. 18, reminding the soldiers that they must use their weapons to protect citizens. Die Freiheit took no notice of the order when it was issued, but prints it today under the heading, "The Mask Falls." It accompanies the order with comment on a meeting of the safety police, a military force created by former Police Chief Eichhorn, which was held for the purpose of attacking the Government.

Dodgers are being distributed in Berlin by the "Red Soldiers' Union," which is a Spartacan military organization, calling on the proletariat to arm and consolidate.

The press is just beginning to wake up to the seriousness of the situation. The Vorwärts declares that democracy has no place for these Councils as the possessors of political power. The Tageblatt says:

"It will be harder to dethrone the Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils than it was to dethrone the Princes and Kings."

FEAR RHINE SEPARATION.

Mass Meeting in Cologne Protests Against Division of Province.

COBLENZ, Feb. 1, (Associated Press.)—Mass meetings protesting against any proposed separation of the Rhineland from Germany were held recently in Cologne under the auspices of the League of Freedom for the German Rhine Districts. A resolution passed by the meetings, a copy of which has reached the American officials here, says:

"The thousands of Rhinelanders in Cologne are firmly determined to remain attached to the German nation. The inhabitants of the Rhine Province are bound to the rest of Germany by ties of race, education and business. Any attack made upon the union which exists between us and other Germans is a violation of our fundamental rights. To separate any part of this province from Germany would ruin the business and social organization of the part affected.

"We inhabitants of the Rhineland are firmly determined to oppose separation of the parts of the province on the left bank of the Rhine from the rest of Germany. We shall never be satisfied with any form of Government which is based on such separation, and will resort to any means to prevent such violation of our right to self-determination and our privilege of remaining German. We call upon all political parties to adopt the same position in their platforms."

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 1.—The young American woman who Abram I. Elkus, former American Ambassador to Turkey, says is the only living eyewitness to the atrocities of the Turks against the Armenians, excepting the Turks themselves, was found in this city today by newspaper men. She is Mrs. George Dar Arsanian of 27 Washington Avenue, and through the assistance of Mr. Elkus and ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard she escaped from Turkey and eventually returned to America.

Her first husband, Robert Agasarian, an Armenian by birth, but a naturalized American citizen and resident of this country for twenty years, was murdered, she says, by the Turks along with hundreds of others, and her little son was drowned in a river near the town of Chmeshgasak, Turkey.

Before her first marriage Mrs. Dar Arsanian was Miss Ethel Marston, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jackson Marston, and before going to Turkey was employed as a waitress in local hotels. She was married to her present husband, George Dar Arsanian, in May of last year.

"My husband," she said, "was born in Armenia, came to this country when a child, and had lived here eighteen years when we were married in 1909. He was a naturalized American citizen, and was a barber. In November, 1913, we went to Turkey to look after some property interests. Within one week after our arrival he was conscripted into the Turkish army. He protested that he was an American citizen. We were a long way from an American Consulate, and the Turks refused to release him until we paid them £50 in English money. He was not molested again until the fall of 1914, when he was taken for the second time, and forced to buy his freedom.

"Things went well with us until early in June of 1915. The war had involved all the nations, and Turkey had cast her lot with the Germans. Then the Turks started devastating the smaller States, plundering and murdering. Turkish police came into our village of Chmeshgazak and rounded up all but seven men. These seven escaped into Russia.

"The men captured were marched off to the Turkish detachment in the village. My husband was taken along with the rest and later marched to another village. Finally my husband sent a note by a boy for me to come and see him. 'You and the children will not be harmed, but I am doomed,' he said. He realized that he would be murdered, and that money could not save him, as the Turks were determined to be rid of all able-bodied Armenians who refused to serve in the Turkish Army.

"I never saw him again. He was taken with other prisoners to Harpoot a few days later. His aunt afterward told me that she saw him bound, as was the custom, but she was not allowed to speak to him. He and the others were on their way to an execution of the grossest cruelty. We had seen these so many times there was no mistaking the inevitable result.

"I saw men taken from our village and marched in pairs to the banks of the river. They were bound up securely and ranged up in a long line along the bank of the river. They were then driven into the water at the points of bayonets and sabres, and as they rose again to the surface of the water they were beaten senseless and then left to drown. My godfather and his brother were among them, their request that they might die together being granted even by the cruel Turks. Old men were killed in their beds in the village. They brought even the priest, and a soldier slashed his head off, and it was kicked around the streets by these brutes in Turkish uniforms. I cannot begin to describe all the revolting scenes like this that I have witnessed.

"Kurds waylaid and robbed us on our way to a neighboring village, where we women and our children were ordered rounded up. Mobs came and looted the village, taking everything of value they wanted. Soldiers mingled in this robber band.

"I was taken to the house of a Turk and placed under his protection. Some one asked who the American woman was and I came forward and was assured that no harm would befall me. There I was kept a prisoner, but it was better for me, as Armenian women were massacred. My husband's cousin escaped by putting on a Turkish costume.

"An entire village population of women was marched around for a week, lined up and driven into a river bed, but the water was not deep enough to drown them and the poor wretches, those not murdered, were allowed to return home, and I know they later met the same death as their companions.

"Mothers were torn from their families and little children were seized and their brains dashed out by these soldier guards. But for the fact that I was recognized as an American, both my children and I would have met the same fate. We met a Turkish officer while on the way from Armenia to Constantinople in 1913. When my troubles had become most acute I chanced to meet him again, and he confirmed my story, so that I received the protection of the Turkish Mayor of the village. Eventually I was permitted to go to Harpoot, and there I remained with the American Consul until I was taken ill and became a patient in a Red Cross hospital. There I remained for three months, having suffered complete exhaustion from the harrowing experiences of nearly three years in a country where a Christian's life was of no value in the eyes of a Turk.

"While I was in the hospital the Turks on one night forced all the Armenian patients in the institution to leave the building, and would have slaughtered them by wholesale but for the interference of the American Consul.

"When I had regained my strength I was permitted to go to Constantinople, and there met with another great misfortune when my little boy was drowned, July 10, 1916. I was in Constainople until Dec. 23 of the same year. Here Ambassador Elkus heard my story in all its details, names, and dates. He has it all written out for whatever use it may serve. Mr. Elkus gave me every courtesy, and as a Christmas present he gave me my passports and I arrived in Berlin Christmas Eve. I made my way to Ambassador James W. Gerard's quarters, and he later provided safe passage for me to Copenhagen, where I boarded the steamer for New York, arriving home the early part of February, 1917."

CHINESE MURDER UNSOLVED

New Yorkers Taken to Washington for Examination.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Z. S. Wan, the young Chinese student of New York, who was arrested in the latter city in the investigation into the murder of Dr. Theodore T. Wong, Director of the Chinese Educational Mission, and his two assistants, C. H. Hsie and Ben Sen Wu, was expected at Police Headquarters late tonight. He was being escorted here by two Washington detectives who went to New York to run down clues.

The Chief of Detectives here has been informed that Wan, who is well known in Chinese educational work in Washington, was not at all averse to making the trip with the detectives, stoutly asserting his innocence. At Police Headquarters tonight it was not divulged what the police expect to ascertain from him.

Wan had been a visitor at the mission, which is located on Kalorama Road, having spent several weeks there. He is believed to have left Washington last Wednesday. The triple murder occurred, the police say, some time after 10:30 on Wednesday night. Dr. Wong and Mr. Hsie dined at a chop suey restaurant on Ninth Street, up to that hour with Dr. Kuo, a delegate to the Paris Peace Conference, who was on his way to New York to sail.

It was late on Wednesday afternoon that Kong Li, a Chinese student, went to the mission on Kalorama Road, seeking information as to a course of studies. The house, from the outside, appeared to be without life. Li rang the bell, and when no one answered, he called out. In answer, some one inside the house exclaimed "Every one is out."

Although Li was suspicious, he did not mention the incident to the police. He called again at the mission on Friday night, and, getting no response, went inside through a parlor window and made his discovery of the three dead bodies.

Postman Griffin, who has been delivering mail at the mission for more than a year, said today that he had left several letters addressed to Mr. Wan there within the last few days. The last time he saw any members of the mission, he said, was on Wednesday afternoon, about 3 o'clock, when he handed some mail to Mr. Hsie.

Acting on information in a telegram received yesterday afternoon from Major Pullman, in charge of the Washington police, Inspector John Cray, in charge of the New York Detective Bureau, ordered a special detail of detectives to investigate all movements of Chinese in New York that have taken place during the last two weeks.

In his telegram, Major Pullman asked that a close watch be kept in order to ascertain if any Chinese now here or who have been here recently are connected with the murder of the three members of the Chinese Educational Mission. The special detail investigating the section of New York most frequented by Chinese were instructed to gain all information possible as to new arrivals among the Chinese and to investigate carefully any movement that may throw light on the Washington mystery.

SHUBERT SECRETARY ACCUSED OF THEFTS

He Admits Raising Checks of Leasing Company—Losses May Reach $15,000.

AUTO AND JEWELS SEIZED

Effort to Keep Up with Wealthier Neighbors, He Says, Led Him to Rob Firm.

Fred J. Wolfram, Secretary of the Central Theatrical Leasing and Construction Company, an agency controlled by the Shubert theatrical interests, was arrested last night on a charge of grand larceny upon complaint of Lee and J. J. Shubert, officers of the company.

The Shuberts told the police that the embezzlements of Wolfram, extending over several years, would be between $10,000 and $15,000. According to the police Wolfram admitted to them in the West Forty-seventh Street Station that he had made a regular habit of raising the checks after they had been signed by his superior officers, which enabled him to manipulate his accounts "to the extent of several thousands."

For a long time the Shubert leasing agency officials had suspected that their checks were being raised, the Shuberts told the police, but suspicion was not directed against Wolfram at first because he had been a trusted employe for several years. A few days ago an official of the company discovered that someone had raised a check drawn on the Columbia Trust Company from $5 to $500, and accountants were called to go over the books.

As a result of this investigation Wolfram was arrested by detectives in the Hotel Claridge on a charge of grand larceny last night. When he was confronted by the report of the accountants and the charges of the officials of the company in the police station he admitted that all the allegations were true. He said he did not know the exact amount taken but he was sure it would amount to several thousands.

He told the police that while he was working in the office of the company at 233 West Forty-fourth Street he raised his first check from $5 to $50 and this seemed so easy that he raised them in greater proportion until frequently he raised $5 checks to $500. His practice was to make out the checks for the small amount, he said, and then take them to Lee or J. J. Shubert to sign. After they had been signed he would write in additional figures on the blank space he had left on the check.

One of his reasons for desiring to add to his salary of $50 a week, he said, was his desire to keep up with his neighbors in Sunnyside Avenue, Brooklyn, who had more money. He said he had used much of the money in furnishing his home and buying "luxuries and jewels" for his wife.

When he was arrested Wolfram said he was ready to give up all the money and goods in his possession. Accompanied by representatives of the Shuberts and of bonding companies, detectives went to the Wolfram home at 115 Sunnyside Avenue last night and seized an automobile and jewels said to be worth several thousand dollars. It was said that about $4,000 in cash also would be returned to the leasing company. Wolfram was locked up in the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station.

BAN ON NEGRO CONGRESS.

Passports Refused to Delegates on Plea of French Government.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Passports for negroes desiring to attend the Pan African Congress at Paris have been refused by the State Department, which announced today that the French Government did not consider the present a favorable time to hold such a conference. The department issued the following statement:

"The State Department has been approached by various colored delegations with a view to sending representatives to Paris to participate in a Pan African Congress composed of colored people from different parts of the world. The department has been in touch with the French Government on the subject and is now in a position to state that the French Government has not been approached, but does not consider this a favorable time to hold such a conference. In the circumstances the department will be unable to grant passports to persons desiring to proceed to Paris for the purpose of attending such a congress."

SHIPPING BOARD MAKES ANOTHER CUT IN RATES

Determined to Meet Reductions of Other Nations and Aid Our Industries in Competition.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Reduced shipping rates from North Atlantic ports to ports in Holland, Belgium, Italy, France, and Spain were announced today by the United States Shipping Board in order to meet foreign competition. They will apply to all bookings of shipping on vessels sailing on and after today, on all cargoes, with a few exceptions, which are noted in the order.

The announcement makes it more evident that the Shipping Board is determined to meet all rate cuts by Great Britain and other foreign nations and, as far as possible, lend aid to the American interests in the contest for trade with practically all nations of the world. Here are the new rates quoted in today's announcement:

Rates of freight from North Atlantic ports to Rotterdam, Antwerp, Havre and Bordeaux, $1.25 a 100 pounds, or 65 cents a cubic foot ship's option; Marseilles, Cette, Genoa, and Naples, $1.60 a 100 pounds, or 85 cents a cubic foot ship's option; Barcelona, $1.85 a 100 pounds, or 95 cents a cubic foot ship's option.

Exceptions include cotton on which reductions had been announced, steel shipments to Havre and Bordeaux, the new rate for which is fixed at $28 a ton of 2,240 pounds; Antwerp and Rotterdam, the rate for which is fixed at $30 a ton of 2,240 pounds; Marseilles, Barcelona, Cette, Genoa, and Naples, the rate for which is fixed at $40 a ton of 2,240 pounds.

It is announced by the Shipping Board that the following steamers have been released from requisition:

War Trade Investigator Tells Senate Committee They Were $1,500,000,000 During War.

KEPT FROM CITIZENSHIP

Foreign-Subsidized Press, Clergy, and Teachers Called Vigorous Propagandists.

EVILS OF PSEUDO-BANKS

Steiner Asks for Protective Legislation—Ridicules Creel's League to Americanize Hungarians.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—An investigation made by the War Trade Board and concluded within the last few weeks has disclosed the fact that the amount of money which has been hoarded in the United States since the outbreak of the European war by unnaturalized immigrants from Austria, Hungary, Russia, and other European nations, probably exceeds $1,500,000,000. This statement was made before the Senate Propaganda Committee today by Lajos Steiner of Chicago, of the War Trade Board, who also estimated that at the present time there were probably 5,000,000 aliens in this country who would like to return to their European fatherland if they could obtain the necessary ocean transportation.

Mr. Steiner also said that there were about 25,000 newspapers printed in foreign languages in this country, and that with few exceptions they were un-American, while in scores of cases they were out-and-out anti-American. He said that before the outbreak of the war unnaturalized immigrants in this country sent an average of $400,000,000 annually to Europe, and that this average had been maintained for perhaps fifteen years before the beginning of hostilities.

Since the war began the flow of this money to the Central Powers and Russia—and most of it went to these countries—has stopped. Yet, Mr. Steiner added, Federal investigations showed that the accumulated savings of the war years had not been deposited in American institutions, but had been hoarded in the homes of the thrifty working people from the countries named.

The name of George Creel of the Bureau of Public Information also got into the record today. It was the first time that questions relating to Mr. Creel's activities had been asked. His name was brought in in connection with a so-called Americanization scheme which Alexander Konta of New York is said to have originated. Mr. Steiner said that the immigrants who were approached in the name of Messrs. Konta and Creel looked upon the scheme as a "monumental humbug."

All that an immigrant had to do, said the witness, was to pay over the sum of $1 and receive a "loyalty card," which, he added, was awarded without investigation as to his past record and activities.

The most successful and vicious propaganda in the United States, according to Mr. Steiner, is that which seeks to discourage the Americanization of the men and women who come to the United States from Central Europe. He said it included clergymen—great numbers of them official agents of their Government—teachers who by every means in their power exclude from their schools every reference to American history and institutions that would tend to make the newcomer love America and want to stay here, and scores upon scores of foreign-language newspapers.

When Mr. Steiner left the witness stand Senator Overman, the Chairman of the Propaganda Committee, congratulated him on the work that he was doing for the country and said that the story he had told was one of the most illuminating that had entered the records of the committee, a statement that was concurred in by Senator Nelson of Minnesota.

Exploited By Land Sharks.

"These poor immigrants that I have in mind, the Hungarian, the Italian and the Slav, are by nature agriculturists," said Mr. Steiner, "and their dream is and always has been to own land. Get them on farms and they will develop into the best and most reliable of American citizens. And the reason that they are not on farms in great numbers is due to the American land sharks who have frightened the bulk of them from agricultural ventures in the United States."

"Who scared them away?" asked Senator Overman.

"They were made to believe that it was impossible to engage in agriculture in America and survive. They were unmercifully exploited."

Senator Overman—By whom?

Mr. Steiner—Steamship companies, exploiters, land sharks, men interested in getting the money of these people; and they in the same form have been so treated for many years.

Senator Nelson, having inquired what interest Hungarian banks paid on the savings sent from this country, Mr. Steiner said:

"A nominal interest, but very much better interest than our American postal banks pay, however. The immigrants have no choice. Banks are not liberal for immigrants. Most of these immigrants work in our coal mines and at lumber camps, labor in various places or work in out of town factories, and they cannot go during business hours to the big cities to deposit their savings in our banks. The private banks, as well as the steamship ticket agents masquerading as bankers, systematically work to have these men export their savings, and to have them buy a steerage ticket and re-emigrate."

Foreign Embassies Accused.

Describing conditions existing before the war, Mr. Steiner said:

"The Transatlantic Trust Company, as well as innumerable other institutions all over the United States wherever immigrants earn wages, were in the deal with certain forces to conduct a systematic campaign for immigrants to habitually export their savings. These agencies are the respective embassies and Consulates. They are instructed by their Governments. They are shrewd. They have lawyers to advise them; they have an unholy amount of money to spend, and they do spend it, for propaganda—they all do—to assist in successfully conducting the work. For instance, this tremendous amount of money, amounting to about $400,000,000 in each normal year, is sent to 'needy relatives.' These moneys are really sent to the respective postal banks and other banks of the respective countries until a competency is secured, when the immigrant is induced to re-emigrate and is robbed by all sorts of colonizing schemes.

"The second of these schemes is that of the transatlantic steamship companies, with their thousands of passengers. The steamship companies do not want their boats to return empty to Europe, and they realize that if these 17,500,000 immigrants at present in the United States become American citizens they will stay here for good, and their return boats will return to Europe empty or half empty.

"The third potent factor in this matter is the foreign language newspapers. There are thousands of them in the United States, and I am sorry to say most of them are un-American and many of them are anti-American. They have conducted a pro-Kaiser propaganda."

Mr. Steiner said that some of these papers were subsided by the steamship companies, and that President Pirnitzer of the Transatlantic Trust Company had requested the Hungarian Government to buy some of them

"There is another thing," he said. "These foreign language papers believe that if the immigrant would be Americanized, would learn English sooner or later, he would read the American papers, they would lose their subscribers and probably also their advertising.

Alien Clergy Subsidized.

"The fifth and one of the most important factors is the clergy. The clergymen speculate upon re-migration. They are afraid that the members of their congregations will join American churches, and they do all in their power to preach old country traditions and keep alive the love for the fatherland. They draw salaries from their respective Governments, and we have found in many instances that where it was impossible to buy a church outright, because loyal American immigrants have established themselves and are well-to-do and prosperous, and do not want to come under the jurisdiction of the Government from which they departed to come to the United States, then a competing church was erected in the very same locality, and a subsidized salaried clergyman was put in charge, so as to combat Americanism, and a school has been established and maintained with a salaried teacher who will preach only traditions of the old country and will teach only the history and the geography of the respective countries from which they originally came, and only the national anthems of the respective European countries are sung, and Americanism is combatted in these schools.

Pseudo Bankers Worst of All.

"The next factor is the worst of all. This consists of those local men who come in daily contact with the immigrants, who pose as bankers.

"More than a dozen years ago I originated legislation and a bill was in amended form enacted in New York State, and other States followed. We have at the present time legislation in five of our States—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, and Ohio. The aim of this law was to prevent the embezzlement of immigrants' money. The other forty-three States have no legislation along these lines, and in Chicago, for instance, where bad conditions exist, about two years ago we had a regular epidemic of private bank failures. Any bank crook or ex-convict may engage in banking, and he rents an office and gets some second-hand furniture and represents himself as a most reliable banker, and exploits the immigrant. And this is the worst feature of it, that so many factors work for the alienation of the immigrant to prevent him from becoming Americanized to make him export his savings, but nothing practically is done for his Americanization."

Senator Nelson—What was the attitude of the Hungarian population here during the war?

Mr. Steiner—I am glad to say that, almost without exception, they were loyal to this country.

Senator Overman—Did not Mr. Creel organize some sort of league for the Hungarians to see that they were for the Allies?

Mr. Steiner—I am awfully sorry to say that that bureau did more for the Europeanization of the immigrant than his Americanization. The old country was glorified. Finally I requested that somebody say a word for our Liberty bonds, and afterward, in a half-hearted way, somebody talked about the Liberty bonds.

Senator Overman—Did you know Konta?

Mr. Steiner—I am sorry to say I do. Still, he is not half as bad as Hammerling." [Louis Hammerling is President of the Association of Foreign Language Newspapers.]

Senator Nelson—Did the Creel bureau subsidize any of the Hungarian papers?

Mr. Steiner—No. They turned loose Mr. Konta, who asked everybody to contribute a dollar for a sort of certificate or card—loyalty card—without investigating whether he was loyal or not, whether he was an ex-convict or not, whether he was a Hungarian or not. The money collected that way was used for stuffing the respective Hungarian newspapers, and they received big advertisements, well paid for, and a number of well-known people were paid to travel around the country, and the better element of Hungarian immigrants considered it a monumental humbug, I am sorry to say.

How to Stop Outflow of Savings.

Senator Overman—What is your remedy for stopping the flowage of these savings abroad?

Mr. Steiner—I would propose, Senator, that the bill introduced by Senator King day before yesterday should be enacted, to the effect that restrictions on those persons, firms, incorporated associations, or corporations which are engaged in the exportation to Europe of sums for $100 or less should be tightened. It provides that any office or branch of a concern engaged in this sort of business should pay a license of $1,000 a year for each and every one of its branches, and that they should be compelled to deposit at least $10,000 in securities or cash in our Treasury so as to guarantee honest dealings with the immigrants, which minimum amount should be increased in proportion to the month's export. And I would recommend that they shall be prohibited from carrying on propaganda and soliciting the savings of immigrants for export, by oral, written, printed in any shape, manner, or form. If any immigrant wants to send his savings, let him do so, but get rid of this propaganda.

Senator Nelson—Has the Creel Bureau done anything to stop this exportation of funds to Hungary?

Mr. Steiner—Not that I have ever heard.

Mr. Steiner, in answer to questions, said that Bolshevist, anarchist, and I. W. W. agitation had made headway among immigrants in New York and other industrial centres, but added that he did not think it had been so successful as some people thought.

Stevenson's Statement Read.

Senator Overman also put in the record today a letter from Archibald E. Stevenson of New York, formerly of the Military Intelligence Service. The letter was written as a reply to the statement issued last week by Secretary Baker in which the Secretary said that Mr. Stevenson was not in the service. The letter follows:

New York, Jan. 31.

Hon. Lee S. Overman,
Chairman of the Sub-Committee of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Senator:

I noted with some embarrassment a statement published in the New York newspapers attributed to Secretary of War Baker relating to my relations to the Military Intelligence Division, United States Army. In order that the Record may contain a statement of my relations I wish to state the following facts:

At the request of Lieut. Col. Nicholas Biddle, in command of the New York Office of Military Intelligence, and after conferences with Major Hughes in Washington, a propaganda section was established in New York on the 28th day of October, 1918, which was known as a sub-division of M. I. 10. A commission of Captain in the Military Intelligence was offered me, but with the signing of the armistice I never filed my application for a commission. However, I was duly appointed an agent of Military Intelligence and received a certificate to that effect signed by Brig. Gen. Marlborough Churchill, Director of Military Intelligence. The number of this card was 650, to which was attached my photograph and the seal of the War Department. A brief history of the origin and activities of this section may be found in the files of the Military Intelligence, Washington, D. C.

Yours very truly,
ARCHIBALD E. STEVENSON.

The 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, and 1918 files of The New York American were brought to the committee room in the Senate Office Building today. They are to be used in the cross examination of Bradford Merrill, manager of the Hearst publications, when Mr. Merrill takes the stand next week.

American Killed in French Wreck.

BRUSSELS, Friday, Jan. 31.—Sixty German prisoners, three French officers, and one American were killed and many injured when a munition train exploded on the railroad between Aubange and Longwy today. The accident was due to a soldier dropping a shell.

Floating Mine Costs 11 Lives.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 1.—Eleven persons were killed when a fishing steamer struck a floating mine off Stavanger, it is reported. Many mines are afloat in the North Sea, giving fishermen great anxiety.

FOOD BUREAU TO END ITS WORK IN 3 WEEKS

Senators Assured That Department Will Have Nothing to Do with Wheat Crop.

HOOVER'S TRIP EXPLAINED

Glasgow Testifies That Administrator Merely Seeks to Arrange for Relief of Europe.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Discussing the relations of the Food Administration with the large packing interests, W. A. Glasgow, Jr., counsel for the Administration, told the Senate Agriculture Committee today that the visit of Herbert C. Hoover to Europe was not in any way in the interest of the packers and that the sole purpose of the trip was to arrange food relief for European peoples. Mr. Glasgow appeared before the committee in connection with hearings on the pending bill to regulate the meat industry.

Asked by Senator Gore if one of Mr. Hoover's objects in going to Europe was to "make a bigger market for the packers," Mr. Glasgow replied that "Mr. Hoover went over there to sell meat to nobody."

The witness told of an agreement between the packers and the Food Administration whereby in return for aid given to the packers by the Food Administration in finding markets in Europe, the former promised to co-operate in price arrangements. Mr. Glasgow denied the charge of Senator France of Maryland that this agreement was a "promise to throw the packers as much business as possible."

In answer to the question whether the wheat price guarantee would be carried out through the Food Administration, thereby keeping that agency in existence after the declaration of peace as had been charged by some Senators, Mr. Glasgow said the administration planned to close its activities within three weeks, and would pass out of existence before this year's wheat crop was harvested.

Pointing out that only food products classed in the food act as necessaries were subject to rules of the administration, which set the profit at 9 per cent., Mr. Glasgow said:

"It has been said on other products of the packers the limit of profit was the sky, but that was the fault of the act."

The fixing of a minimum price for hogs was necessary to increase production and prevent an even higher price, he told the committee.

"Why couldn't the Food Administration fix the prices of all packers' products as the prices of steel and iron were determined?" asked Chairman Gore.

"Steel and iron prices were set by the War Industries Board in agreement with the producers," Mr. Glasgow replied.

"Didn't the packers refuse to arrange prices by agreement?" asked Senator Gore.

The witness said the Food Administration had no power to make voluntary agreements about other than food products.

Mr. Glasgow said the meetings at which prices of hogs were fixed were open, not secret. Senators France and Gronna questioned this statement, asserting that newspaper men were not admitted. The witness said representatives of the press were told of the result after the meeting.

The Food Administration made an agreement with the packers to try to obtain orders for them overseas on condition that they pay the prices fixed for hogs.

Four employes of the Food Administration who held places with packing companies either resigned their private places or else left the Food Administration, Mr. Glasgow said. He said Mr. Hoover had protested to Francis J. Heney for making public the private connections of persons in the Food Administration, and as a result Mr. Heney agreed to advise Mr. Hoover and give him time for action before publishing any other letters.

The witness resented questions in this connection of Senator France, who responded that the "men and the administration must necessarily be on the defensive and subject to suspicion."

OPEN 'HUT' IN TIMES SQUARE

Knights of Columbus Will Maintain Service Station Night and Day.

Many leading actors and actresses were the patrons and patronesses at the formal opening last night of the Knights of Columbus Hut at Broadway and Forty-sixth Street. This is the second "Hut" which the Knights of Columbus have opened in this city, the other one being in City Hall Park, but, unlike the City Hall "Hut" and the ten service stations operated by the K. of C., it will be opened all day and night. Nothing in the "Hut" will be sold; cigarettes, candy, sandwiches, and coffee will be given free to all uniformed men all the time.

Through the efforts of Michael S. Hogan and the courtesy of Selwyn & Co. the following actresses and actors did their "turn" and then served the uniformed men with refreshments: Jane Cowl, Fay Bainter, Nora Bayes, Marjorie Rambeau, Florence Reed, Patricia Collinge, Frances Starr, William Collier, De Wolf Hopper, Ed Wynn, George M. Cohan, and Joseph Cawthorne. John J. McGraw of the Giants and Ed. Rickenbacker, the American ace, also served the men.

The Hut will be in charge of James F. Kelly and Michael J. O'Hara, and was built through the efforts of Frank W. Smith, Chairman of the War Activities of the Knights of Columbus.

British Air Forces Lost 16,623 Men.

LONDON, Friday, Jan. 31.—The total of British casualties in the air service for the entire period of the war was 16,623. Of this number 6,166 were killed and 7,345 were wounded. The remainder are missing, or known to have been taken prisoner.

Ex-Grand Duchess Leaves Luxemburg.

LUXEMBURG, Wednesday, Jan. 29.—The former Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide left Luxemburg today for Switzerland. She was accompanied as far as Thionville by her mother and the Grand Duchess Charlotte and the Princesses Hilda and Antoinette, her sisters.

The Modes for Spring
Translated in Terms of Simplicity and Elegance—

Women's Tailored Suits
The fine precision of the tailoring which characterizes Bonwit Teller & Co. suits for women, carries it to a level which is not exceeded by the costliest of custom tailored to order garments. The little graces and elegancies of detail, in the contour of the collars and shoulders, the niceties and finesse of sleeve and cuff detail, the pliancy of line—express a craftsmanship of the highest order.

Women's Frocks & Gowns
From the little trotteur frock of serge to the formal evening gown of sumptuous stateliness, one may make a selection of the entire wardrobe and include within it those engagingly chic and lovely French hand-made frocks of Paris origin. Emphasized are motifs and treatments that are distinctly unusual, revealing an artistry in form, in color and in the high lights of decorative touches.

Sports Apparel
A more perfect understanding of the requirements of sports apparel has been brought to the models sponsored by this shop. That note of pliant leisure desired by the country gentlewoman is evident in topcoats and sport capes of natural "Worumbo" camel's hair, in the country suits of tweed hand-loomed in England and Scotland, in the suits of hand-loomed Canadian homespuns and in the many novelties offered for specific sports occasions.

Women's Coats & Wraps
The enveloping, swathing lines of the wrap-like coat is the dominant silhouette. For those who desire not the mode ultra there are coats of more conservative lines. Coats, Capes and Wrap-Coats of tricotine, tricolette, satin, paulette, evora, duvetyn. Evening mantles of shot taffeta, exquisite metal tissues in silver and gold antique and metallic fabrics with combinings of fur.

The "Jeune Fille"
The refreshing verve and esprit of these fashions for the Miss of 14 to 20 come as a relief to the hackneyed conceptions popularly accepted. Here are modes that are individualized — themes studiously conceived to type, that appreciate the personality, the contour, the mood and the manner of the one who is to wear them. From her tailleur to her "coming-out" gown, each suggestion carries the thought of an original and pleasing idea.

Blouses & Shirts
A most comprehensive assemblage of "Bontell" tailored shirts in white and high colors is presented in the heavy wearable silks affected by men—diversified types with many odd and original forms of tuckings, flutings and plaitings.
Costume blouses of Georgette crepe and net—many entirely hand-made after exclusive Bonwit Teller & Co. designs reveal novel innovations that are not to be found elsewhere.

REVENUE BILL IS COMPLETED

Long-Discussed Measure Is Accepted by Conferees and May Be Passed Saturday.

WILL BE HELD FOR WILSON

Senate Rates of "Luxury Taxes" Reported Adopted—No Cut in Second-Class Postage.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The Senate and House conferees reached a final agreement late this afternoon on the Revenue bill designed to raise about $6,000,000,000 this year and $4,000,000,000 next year.

It is probable that the bill will go to the House on Wednesday, and that Representative Kitchin will move its adoption on Friday.

Senator Simmons said tonight that little opposition to the bill was looked for in either house, and that it might be possible to obtain final action in the Senate by Saturday or early the following week.

In the meantime the Treasury Department will prepare its blanks and distribute them as soon as the bill is adopted, without awaiting the signature of President Wilson.

The bill, after passage by the House and Senate, will not be sent to France for review by the President, as it is expected that he will be back in this country by Feb. 22. It is generally accepted that the President will sign the bill.

While agreement was reached by the conferees to-night, it is reported that some features of the bill, including the "luxury taxes" and the rumored rejection of the Senate amendment reducing rates on second-class postal matter, would be the subject of further action after the bill is approved in its present form.

It is reported that the conferees agreed to eliminate the Senate proposal for a tax of 100 per cent on campaign contributions over $500. The original Senate proposal would have made the bill retroactive, but the House yesterday directed its conference representatives to demand the abandonment of the retroactive feature. The proposal as thus amended, it is stated, was not satisfactory to the Senate conferees.

In the matter of the "luxury taxes" the recent protests have had weight with the conferees, and it is understood that the bill will contain the Senate changes to lower rates, which were agreed on early in the conference. It is said that it was found impossible to attempt any other basis of agreement, even in face of the protests, because of the danger of further delaying the bill.

Representative Kitchin, it is understood, is not satisfied with the provisions, however, and wants a more equitable taxation on luxuries. Most of the provisions of the bill do not go into effect until May 1, and it is the intention of Mr. Kitchin, it is said, to seek to have some substitutes provided for by the passage of a joint resolution in the House and Senate.

Senate members of the conference, it is said, abandoned their demand that the second-class postal rates be lowered, but will bring the matter to the floor by offering amendments as a rider to the Post Office Appropriation bill.

UPHOLD BUILDING ZONE LAW

Pamphlet Explains Need in Construction Following War.

The Zoning Committee, organized in 1916 after the adoption of the zoning law to control building here, yesterday gave out a pamphlet urging the importance of observance of the law in the building to follow the war conditions. It is suggested by the committee that all small grievances in the effect of the law or its enforcement be reported at once, so that necessary amendments may be made to save the law from possible discredit.

"During the next few years hundreds of millions will be spent upon new buildings in New York City," says the pamphlet. "This money will be spent for the permanent upbuilding of the city. Gas tanks will not be erected next to parks, garages next to schools, boiler shops next to hospitals, stables next to churches, and chemical works next to dwellings. This has been accomplished by the zoning law, the adoption of which constitutes an economic, scientific, efficient community program of city building for wasteful, inefficient, haphazard growth.

"The present high cost of labor and materials emphasizes as never before the necessity of orderly building. With two houses worth as much as three several years ago, there is much more to be lost now than formerly through uncontrolled building. The high prices prevailing to-day make it absolutely imperative to conserve the value of all buildings, old no less than new, from premature and unavoidable depreciation."

Speaking of the work to be done on the waterfronts and in the business districts, it says:

"In holding out special inducements to factories locating along the railroads and waterfront, the zoning law, moreover, will in time effect important economies in business and industry and thus promote the prosperity of the city. New York's competitive strength in the domestic and foreign markets of the world depends as much upon the arrangement of manufacturing establishments within the city as upon the availability of raw materials and the proximity of a consuming public."

$173,856 FOR MRS. LEBAUDY

Court Orders Chamberlain to Pay Carnegie Trust Deposit.

Mrs. Marguerite A. Lebaudy, widow of Jacques Lebaudy, obtained an order from Supreme Court Justice Finch yesterday directing the City Chamberlain to pay over to her as administratrix of the estate of her husband $173,856 deposited as the money recovered by her husband in a suit against the Carnegie Trust Company. Lebaudy had refused to accept the money, and the Superintendent of Banks, as liquidating officer of the trust company, got permission to deposit the sum.

Lebaudy sued the trust company for more than $1,000,000, alleging breach of an agreement by which the trust company was his agent in the sale of property in France, a large part of which was real estate in the City of Paris. The trust company won the case and was directed to pay $337,974, the sum it admitted to be due. Shortly afterward the institution failed, and the amount deposited represents a dividend of 40 per cent., with interest. William M. K. Olcott, who was counsel for Lebaudy in the suit, has a lien for $6,730 on the deposit for counsel fees, but he did not oppose the payment to Mrs. Lebaudy.

July 4 Strike for Mooney.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—Representatives of 600,000 workers in the New York Central Federation of Unions and the Brooklyn Central Labor Unions have voted to accept the program of the Thomas J. Mooney Labor Congress for a general assessment and a general strike on July 4 in behalf of Mooney if he is not granted a new trial before that date, the International Workers' Defense League announced here today.

15,000 WILL STOP WORK IN SILK MILLS

Strike at Paterson, N. J., for a 47-Hour Week Begins Tomorrow.

NUMBER TO BE DOUBLED

Manufacturers Willing to Grant 48-Hour Week and Submit the Question to the War Labor Board.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, Feb. 1.—Fifteen thousand silk workers will go on strike Monday and 30,000 will be on strike within several days, according to Louis Magnat, Chairman of the eight-hour day committee of the workers, who said today that shop committees had instructed the employers to this effect. The workers demand a 47-hour week.

Edward Wyman, Secretary of the Paterson Silk Manufacturers' Association, said that 90 per cent. of the employers are solidly opposed to granting the demands. Five mills today granted the demand of the workers, according to Magnat.

Two months ago the mill workers made a demand for a 44-hour week. This was refused by the manufacturers on the ground that in other States the workers labored 50 and 56 hours a week, and that to reduce the day in Paterson would mean increased cost of manufacture. They said they were willing to grant the 48-hour week if it were made universal, offering to submit the question to the War Labor Board on the condition that the employes continue working as usual 50 hours a week. This the employes refused to do and stuck to their demand for a 44-hour week. Last Friday night they met and decided to demand the 47-hour week.

C. F. U. TO APPEAL TO HYLAN.

Will Complain to Mayor of Treatment of Strikers by Police.

Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, who is directing a strike of 35,000 union members against the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, said yesterday that the 10,000 girl picketers who had been ordered to group themselves in front of shops in the dress and waist district tomorrow morning to prevent the employment of strikebreakers had been instructed to perform their task in an orderly manner. The police, Mr. Schlesinger said, would "get no opportunity to assault or arrest." He repeated again yesterday that no strikers have returned to work, despite statements of the manufacturers to the contrary, and none will go back as long as the strike lasts.

Two young women strikers who were arrested on Wednesday night by detectives for an alleged disturbance in front of a waist factory at 68 East 131st Street were arraigned before Magistrate George Simpson in Harlem Court yesterday on charges of disorderly conduct. The complainant was Mabel Morrell of 143 West 140th Street, who alleged that the strikers attacked her during a disturbance which occurred when the strikers interfered with workers leaving the plant. Magistrate Simpson suspended sentence on the women, who were Anna Vliet of 4 East 110th Street, and Fannie Allenstein of 1,850 Madison Avenue, and they were released with a warning.

TEXTILE TIEUP IS AVERTED.

The tieup in the textile industry situated in the central part of New York State, which had been scheduled to take place tomorrow, has been averted temporarily through the activities of the Governor's Commission on Reconstruction. Carlton A. Chase, President of the Association of Manufacturers and Merchants of the State of New York, in co-operation with the Commission's Committee on Industrial Relations, yesterday obtained the consent of the manufacturers in Cohoes and Utica to run their mills on the eight-hour basis during the next two weeks.

ALLIES AGAIN FALL BACK BEFORE REDS

inforcements, but it was said here that, inasmuch as this was a matter for determination by the Supreme War Council in Paris, a more detailed report had been sent to that body, possibly with a request for additional support.

Reports that the Bolshevist forces were using gas shells was taken here by some officers to mean that this equipment had been supplied through German sources, notwithstanding the terms of the armistice, and if this was established as a fact it was intimated that drastic action against the Germans would be taken by Marshal Foch.

Available figures obtained by War Department officials show that the British force in the region of the north is approximately 6,000, the American 4,500, the French 1,500, loyal Russians under British officers 1,200, with 1,000 other soldiers of one of the smaller allied countries. The exact disposition of these forces is not known officially in Washington, no report on this subject having been made in some weeks.

Army officials said that the body of troops now retreating before the well-armed and reinforced Bolsheviki was small, being little more than an advance post. Reports of a forty-mile retirement, however, led experts to believe that a larger body was engaged than had been supposed heretofore. General March, Chief of Staff, expressed the opinion a week ago that the number of troops in the advance south from Archangel was sufficiently large to keep the situation in hand.

The use of gas and high explosives by the Bolsheviki was looked upon by army men as the most disquieting feature of the military reports as they affected Americans.

Taresevo, from which it was reported that the Americans had been forced to retire, is a small town about 130 miles directly south of Archangel. It does not appear on War Department maps.

PUSH INVASION OF UKRAINE.

Bolsheviki Respond to Trotzky's Appeal and March on Kiev.

ODESSA, Jan. 24.—It is reported that Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist Minister of War and Marine, has arrived at Kharkov and is exhorting Bolshevist regiments to push the invasion of the Ukraine.

Despairing appeals for help against the Bolsheviki addressed to the Allies are reaching Odessa from Kharkov. The Reds are said to have occupied Tchernivov, and to be advancing southward toward Kiev, where a panic is reported.

WANT NO TRUCE WITH REDS.

Radicals at Archangel Urge Instead That Allies Send More Troops.

ARCHANGEL, Jan. 30, (Associated Press.)—Nicholas Tschaikovsky, President of the Provisional Government of North Russia, who stated upon his arrival at Murmansk that his Government would find it impossible to deal with the Bolsheviki, has unanimous support from the press here. Even the most radical members of the Archangel government, who at one time opposed Allied intervention, now express themselves as against any dealings with the Bolsheviki and urge, instead, that more Allied troops be sent here at once.

VLADIVOSTOK, Jan. 27, (Associated Press.)—Lieut. Gen. Horvath, co-director of the Trans-Siberian railway, and a supporter of the Omsk Government, in discussing the allied proposal for a conference between Russian factions on the Princes Islands, said that he did not believe an agreement was possible between the Bolsheviki and other factions in Russia. He held that no truce could be arranged between the factions which could guarantee that the Bolsheviki would not violate it.

ASK FOR REOPENING OF BLACK TOM SUIT

Lehigh Valley Railroad Attorneys Request Supreme Court to Review Damage Case.

3.500 OTHER SUITS INVOLVED

Claims Total Over $12,000,000—Appeal Taken from Decision of New Jersey Court.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Application was made to the United States Supreme Court today for a reopening of a suit against the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., in connection with the Black Tom explosion of July 30, 1916. Papers were filed asking a writ of certiorari in the case of the New Jersey Fidelity and Plate Glass Insurance Co., which recovered from the Lehigh, in the New Jersey courts, the sum of $23,687 for damage in buildings insured by the Fidelity Company.

If the Supreme Court consents to reopen the case, some 3,500 additional suits, aggregating about $12,500,000, will be involved. Attorneys for the Lehigh, headed by ex-Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison, will move in the court on Monday to have the case reviewed. The request is made chiefly on the ground that the Lehigh, in whose cars the high powered explosives were stored, had lived up to the rules prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the protection of such explosives.

A table presented by the Lehigh attorneys shows that 3,494 plaintiffs have brought suits which amount in all to $12,462,232. The French, British, and Russian Governments are among those who have filed suit. The table follows:

CASES PENDING IN NEW JERSEY.

The brief of the Lehigh states that the writ of certiorari is asked because the decision of the New Jersey courts "is at variance with other decisions of this court, holding that when Congress has legislated upon the subject matter of Interstate Commerce such legislation limits and defines the duties of common carriers with respect to interstate transportation."

Another part of the brief recites that: "The case presents for the first time in this court the question whether the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, promulgated pursuant to the provisions of the transportation of explosives, Act of March 4, 1909, are exclusively controlling in respect to matters covered thereby as to the liability of a common carrier for damages caused by the explosion of articles which are in the course of interstate transportation by land."

The respondent in the case, the insurance company, filed a brief through its attorneys, Maximilian M. Stallman and Jeremiah F. Hoover, at the same time that the railway attorneys presented their papers. The insurance company attorneys set forth that the action was tried in the New Jersey courts "on the theory that this accumulation and holding of an unprecedented volume of high explosives imposed upon the defendant the duty of exercising a degree of care commensurate with the risk involved," but that the Lehigh "claims an immunity from this duty by reason of the act of Congress," which states that the Interstate Commerce Commission "shall formulate regulations for the safe transportation of all explosives, which shall be binding upon all common carriers engaged in interstate or foreign commerce which transport explosives by land."

After reciting certain rules prescribed by the Commission for transporting explosives, the brief proceeds:

"But the facts in the case at bar present a totally different situation. The yard in question is located in the city of Jersey City, on the westerly side of Upper Bay. It contains about eighteen tracks, and projects out into the waters of New York Bay, and is accessible by water from three sides. On four of these tracks were placed and held for several days and nights the thirty-eight carloads of high explosives above mentioned. The cities of Bayonne, Jersey City, New York, Brooklyn, and the various towns along the North Shore of Staten Island, are within easy and direct range of this yard.

"The war was raging in Europe, and all German sympathizers knew that this country was forwarding immense volumes of ammunition to the Allies. While one or two cars of explosives in this yard probably would not cause a prudent man to fear a widespread disaster, eleven carloads, or 400,000 pounds of trinitrotoluol (one of the highest explosives) together with twenty-seven carloads of other ammunition, containing approximately 1,500,000 pounds, in immediate proximity to these cities, do we insist, present a problem that is not completely hedged about with rules respecting the packing, marking, and loading of the boxes or kind of box cars to be used, or how far a car should be placed from the locomotive while in transportation; and an examination of the regulations will show that a situation, such as is disclosed by this record was never contemplated by the framers thereof; and necessarily no rules governing such a condition is found therein.

"The contention of the petitioner, as we understand it, is that the regulations formulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission pursuant to this act, constitute a complete Federal regulation of the subject of handling explosives by carriers, and unless a fire occurs among such explosives, and an explosion ensues, solely as a result of violating one or more of the regulations, no liability can be imposed on the carrier.

"The State courts refused to adopt such a theory. The trial Judge charged the jury that the adoption of the Federal Statute and regulations indicated an intention on the part of Congress that care should be used in handling explosives, i. e., a degree of care commensurate with the risk of danger involved under the circumstances."

Wants Alien Slackers Deported.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 1.—Local Draft Board No. 1 passed resolutions today urging merchants and manufacturers to dismiss alien slackers who registered for the draft but claimed exemption as aliens, and replace them with returned soldiers or sailors. It also urges that alien slackers be deported and barred from again entering the country.

CLIPS OFF WOMAN'S HAIR.

But Intruder Leaves Tresses Behind—Also Steals $20.

PASSAIC, N. J., Feb. 1.—Mrs. William Hawthorne, 40 years old, of 422 Harrison Street, reported to the police today that during the night a thief had entered her bedroom and clipped off her long, golden hair. So quietly did the thief go about his work that he not only did not arouse Mrs. Hawthorne, but was not heard by her husband, in an adjoining room, nor her two children in another room near by.

The police found marks which indicated that the thief had used a jimmy on the kitchen window. They also found a pair of scissors. Mrs. Hawthorne said she believed she had been chloroformed, as when she awoke she felt sick. The thief also took $20 which was in a tin box, but evidently he had no use for the hair after clipping it, as it was found alongside the empty money box by Mrs. Hawthorne.

Sues for Share Under Payne Will.

Claus Laffrinz, who says he has been an employe in the household of the late Oliver H. Payne, the Standard Oil man, who died on June 27, 1917, since 1899, filed suit in the Supreme Court yesterday against Payne Whitney, Lewis Cass Ledyard, and Lewis Cass Ledyard, Jr., to recover $6,400 under Mr. Payne's will. The plaintiff says the will gave $3,000 to each person employed in his homes in New York City and in Ulster County for more than two years, and $200 additional for each year. The plaintiff says that the defendant executors have had ample time in which to make payment but have failed to do so.

SILENCE IS KEPT IN CROWDER CASE

Baker and March Decline to Discuss Reported Reprimand to General.

COURT-MARTIAL COMMENT

Leniency in Case of Capt. Hodgson Contrasted with Findings Approved in Other Trials.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Secretary of War Baker declined to comment today on the purported reprimanding of General Crowder, the Provost Marshal General, the story of which appears in today's issue of Colonel George Harvey's Weekly. General March, the Chief of Staff, who is said to have issued the reprimand and to have filed it with General Crowder's record, also declined to comment. No confirmation was to be had as to the suggestion that General Crowder contemplates resigning from the service as a result of the incident.

The story reached Washington today and was the subject of a great deal of comment in official and private circles. General Crowder has many warm friends in Congress and it was predicted that the matter may be referred to in the Senate and House in the next few days. There are many persons, who are said to be more or less familiar with the facts in the case, who think that General Crowder has taken the incident too seriously, and that in the end it will be found that his record will not in any way be damaged as a result of the reprimand that General March is alleged to have administered to him.

The Hodgson court-martial case, in which Captain Samuel Hodgson of the Medical Corps, after being sentenced to dismissal from service and to a term in prison, was permitted to remain in the army with a reprimand, also occasioned much talk in Washington. There was no official comment forthcoming regarding that case from the War Deparment.

The finding in several naval court-martial cases are made public in The Army and Navy Register today. These cases indicate how rigid is the discipline in the navy at the present time. Among the cases are the following:

"Order No. 139 relates to Lieutenant (J. G.) Henry J. Porter, U. S. N. R. F., tried at the Navy Yard, Boston, and found guilty of the charges of absence from command without leave, drunkenness, and conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline, and sentenced to be dismissed and imprisoned ten years at hard labor.

"The Bureau of Navigation recommended that the sentence be approved, the period of confinement to be reduced to five years.

"The sentence was approved as recommended by the Bureau of Navigation, the naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H., being designated as the place of imprisonment. The President confirmed the sentence as reduced.

"Order No. 144 relates to Ensign Edward J. Carr, U. S. N. R. F., tried at the Navy Yard, Philadelphia, and found guilty of the following charges: Drunkenness, disobeying the lawful order of his superior officer, disrespectful in language and deportment to his superior officer while in the execution of his office. He was sentenced to be dismissed, but unanimous recommendation to clemency was made on the ground that the prior sea experience of the accused has been in the merchant service and that he had only been about one month in the navy. The offenses of which he was convicted, while serving in the navy are not so regarded in the service in which he had been trained. The testimony also shows him to be a capable engineer. The convening authority approved the sentence of the court, which was concurred in by the Bureau of Navigation; and the sentence was confirmed by the President.

"Order No. 146 relates to Machinist William M. Coyne, U. S. N. R. F., tried at the navy yard, Boston, and found guilty of drunkenness, and sentenced to be dismissed. The President confirmed the sentence of the court.

"Order No. 145 relates to Ensign George S. Barker, U. S. N. R. F., tried on board the U. S. S. Oklahoma, in European waters, and found guilty of drunkenness, and sentenced to be dismissed. Unanimous recommendation to clemency, in consideration of his youth and previous good record, but the sentence was approved, at the department, and was confirmed by the Presiuent.

"Order No. 147 is that of Ensign James Mc[illegible] Sillars, U. S. N. R. F., tried at the navy yard, New York, and found guilty of the charges of conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline, drunkenness, and scandalous conduct, tending to the destruction of good morals. He was sentenced to be dismissed, which sentence was confirmed by the President.

"Order No. 152 is that of Lieutenant (J. G.) Arthur Thompson Bricher, U. S. N. R. F., tried at the Naval Air Station, and Submarine Base, Coco Solo, C. Z., by order of the Commandant, 15th Naval District, on the charges of violation of a lawful order issued by the Commandant, and conduct to tue prejudice of good order and discipline, and found guilty. The court found the specification of the first charge proved. He was sentenced to be dismissed, which sentence was confirmed.

"Order No. 153 relates to Assistant Surgeon Guy B. Taylor, U. S. Navy, tried on board the U. S. S. Dixie, in European waters, on the charges of gambling and conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, and found guilty. He was sentenced to be dismissed, which sentence was confirmed."

CLOTHING IN PERU.

Sale of American Ready-Made Dependent on Enterprise.

The sale of ready-made clothing in Peru, says William F. Montavon, formerly commercial attaché at Lima, has been handicapped by the existing preference for tailor-made suits, but American ready-made clothing is generally superior to the product of Peruvian tailors, and, if this superiority is demonstrated by an intelligent advertising campaign, there should be a market for imported suits.

During the year of 1916 the imports of wearing apparel of all kinds amounted to $1,400,000, of which hosiery and men's shirts represented almost half. In both of these important items and in other specialties the United States is very strong in the market. Many American products are purchased on their merits because they are well and favorably known. In certain lines, however, says Mr. Montavon, the present strength of the United States is based largely on Germany's weakness under war conditions, and it will have to find a more solid foundation in American enterprise if it is to endure.

Women's Wraps, Capes & Coats—the New Lines

THE new spring wraps have three secrets of smartness:

FIRST there are their materials,—the duvetyn, tricolette, paulette, silk faille and similar exquisitely draping materials.

SECOND comes their silhouette, narrow at the bottom, wide and loose toward the top.

THIRD and very important, every wrap with claims of smartness has much, or very much collar.

The "Best" of It
Spring Style Questions SOLVED:

Present indications are that the new silhouette which is coming will be that to which the mode had just turned when war was declared,—the so-called "Tanagra silhouette," inspired by the famous Tanagra figurines of ancient Greece.

For the evening frocks of victory events, Paris has created a new bodice, very demure in front and correspondingly low—even to the waistline in the back.

"Fingertip length" in suit coats, is the acknowledged winner for spring, though many other lengths are smart.

Be not deceived by the prodigious shortness of the newest French skirts. Not even Paris believes that this mode will last.

Among the most charming of the early summer frocks are those of challis, which promise to outdistance last year's calicoes in popularity.

It is clear that organdie will be, even as it was last year, a component part of the smartest summer frocks.

The new wraps are distinguished by closeness below the waist, looseness above it, and a great abundance of collar.

The box coat is an assured mode for the spring tailleurs and with it goes frequently the gilet, usually of some gay-colored silk jersey.

THINK RAIL CONTROL WILL RUN 21 MONTHS

Vanderlip Does Not Look for Settlement by the Present Session of Congress.

FOR FEDERAL RESERVE PLAN

But Would Arrange Districts Along Traffic Flow, Rather Than Geographically.

Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, in a discussion of the railroad problem, says that it is inconceivable that an attempt will be made to turn the roads back without a thorough-going settlement. It is hardly possible, he considers, for the present Congress to provide this settlement, because of the many problems on its hands and because of the short time before it ceases to exist, which almost precludes the possibility of a plan being advanced which would be acceptable to both houses of Congress and to the President as well. The fact that the new Congress may not be called together until next December is taken by him to mean that the Government may continue operation for the full twenty-one months after the declaration of peace as provided under the law.

A proper plan for the return of the roads, he says, should eliminate the difficulties caused by the fact that roads in the past were subject to the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission and to as many State Commissions as there were State into which the roads ran. Rates he considers should continue to be under Feneral control, "but we must still have the business profitable enough to attract capital." In discussing the situation further, Mr. Vanderlip's views, as given before a recent meeting of the City Bank Club and published in Number Eight, the official organ of the club, are in part as follows:

"It has been suggested that roads should be permitted to come together in regional districts, and the analogy of the Federal Reserve Bank has been put forward as illustrating what might be done in the case of railroads. I believe the best thought is in that direction now, but not quite parallel to the suggestion of the analogy of the Federal Reserve Districts. The districts should hardly be geographical so much as they are along the lines of traffic—along the flow of traffic. It might be permitted that the New York Central form one region, the Pennsylvania (a competing road, running through parallel territory at some distance) might form another region and each of these roads be permitted to take in any roads within their territory.

"It seems absolutely necessary that roads be permitted to consolidate in this way because a rate must be made that is a fair average for the roads rather than one that is high enough for the poorest road to live under. If you make a rate that is high enough for the poorest road to live under it is too high for the best located road. If it is low enough to be applicable to the best located road it will be so low that the other road will go into bankruptcy. So it seems to me necessary to put these roads together in districts so that a rate may be made which is a fair average rate for the several roads in the district. I believe that some plan along that line is likely to be the form that a generally accepted railroad act will take.

"We must continue the Federal control of rates and still we must have the business profitable enough further to attract capital. Remember that the roads attracted no capital, literally no capital, for several years. They were able to borrow money, although with increasing difficulty, but there were no new roads floating their new stock to investors. Investors declined partnership in the railroad business in respect to any new venture. Of course, companies with existing stocks found investors who traded in those stocks; but the augmenting of railroad capital came through bond issues and not from people who wanted to be partners in the enterprise. We must have a situation which will attract capital so that the great development that should go on—a development that has been estimated as equal to $1,000,000,000 a year—can be permitted to go on by the raising of fresh funds."

RAILROAD EARNINGS SHOW BIG DECREASE

In Spite of Rate Increases, Wages and Cost of Operations Were Greater.

The earnings of the railroads in the twelve months ended Dec. 31, 1918, as indicated in their reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission, show substantial increases in gross incomes over the preceding year, although there were big decreases in the majority of the net incomes reported. The figures for December, 1918, as compared with the preceding December show a majority of decreases in net operating income, which is of particular significance in view of the fact that in 1917 the roads experienced traffic congestion, severe weather, and a coal shortage, which cannot be held accountable for the falling off shown in the current reports.

The reports for the twelve months show that, while the increases in gross were large, as the result of the rate increases authorized in 1918, they failed by a big margin to offset increases in wages and costs of operation, and are running below a balance now. In specific cases this disparity between the additional earnings resulting from the rates and the increased cost of operation and maintenance stands out sharply. For example, the gross earnings of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé increased $21,890,194 in the course of the year, while net income decreased $4,684,340 and the December decrease in net was $1,878,574. New York Central's gross increased $55,861,514, while the road's net income decreased $6,353,023.

In other cases the difference was even more marked. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul reported an increase in gross amounting to $19,155,253, but net income was shown to have decreased more than $18,000,000. Great Northern reported an increase of $12,129,904 in gross and at the same time a decrease in net of $12,348,318.

The following table gives gross and net income, with increases or decreases, of twenty-one railroads, as well as the decreases in December, 1918, net income:

NAME ROOSEVELT EULOGIST

Ex-Senator Beveridge of Indiana to Speak at Brooklyn Service.

Announcement was made yesterday by Justice Frederick E. Crane of the Court of Appeals that ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana will eulogize the life and deeds of the late ex-President Theodore Roosevelt at memorial services to be held Feb. 9 in the Brooklyn Academy of Music. The Justice was appointed recently by Borough President Riegelmann as Chairman of the Roosevelt Memorial Committee.

Former Senator Beveridge was a close friend of the ex-Colonel of the "Rough Riders."

Lawrence Abbott, son of Dr. Lyman Abbott of The Outlook, will be another speaker. Mr. Abbott accompanied Mrs. Roosevelt to greet her husband upon his return from the African jungle trip. He subsequently visited Europe with Mr. Roosevelt.

WANTS COLONEL HONORED.

Dock Commissioner Suggests a Watergate on Riverside Drive.

Since the name of Colonel Roosevelt will be always linked with two of the greatest waterway improvements in the world—the New York State Barge Canal and the Panama Canal—Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert said last night that a suitable memorial to the former President would be the erection of a watergate on Riverside Drive, where New York might welcome foreign fleets when visiting this country, and the American fleet, when in New York waters. The occasion was the forty-seventh annual dinner of the Silk Association of America, held last night at the Hotel Astor.

"On Riverside Drive," said the Dock Commissioner, "we have a vast expanse of undeveloped waterfront, and it is there that I propose that a national memorial should be constructed to the memory of that sterling, patriotic, and characteristically American man, Theodore Roosevelt.

"We have had frequent occasion in the past and will have in the future to welcome the fleet of the United States in these waters. We shall also have occasion to welcome the navies of our allies as well as those of other countries throughout the world. In this, the port of New York, it is a shame that we have not more adequate facilities for their reception. As a memorial to Theodore Roosevelt, once Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the father of the reconstructed Erie Canal and the progenitor of the present Pamana Canal, my suggestion is that we should construct a watergate that will stand as a monument for all time."

Mr. Hulbert said he looked for the establishment of a commercial airplane service between New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, and that a movement already under way to inaugurate this service had his approval. The service he thought would be by hydroaeroplane, and would be of benefit to shipping men.

Charles Cheney, President of the Silk Association, who acted as toastmaster, said in his address that the manufacturers were opposed to the demand of workers for a forty-eight-hour week. "Asking for an attitude of sympathy and justice," he said, "does not mean that we have to meet every successive demand that may be made for constantly increasing compensations and still more burdensome requirements as to conditions and hours of work."

Other speakers at the dinner were Major Ian Hay Beith and the Rev. Dr. Warren Giles, pastor of the First Reformed Church of East Orange, N. J., who appealed to Americans to lend a helping hand to the countries of their allies in the after-war readjustment.

Pershing Cables Heroism Stories.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—"One hundred best stories of the war" have been cabled to Secretary Baker by General Pershing and turned over to the Liberty Loan Bureau for publication during the next loan campaign. Some of these stories of heroism of young soldiers will be used as newspaper advertisements, some as moving picture scenarios, and others in pamphlets for public speakers and school children.

REPORT INCREASE IN UNEMPLOYMENT

Total Throughout Country Has Jumped to 265,000, with No Sign of Improvement.

BIG LABOR SURPLUS HERE

Nearly Every City in the State Shows an Increase—Conditions in the West Almost as Bad.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—A steady increase in unemployment was shown during the week in almost all parts of the United States, according to an official announcement made tonight by the Department of Labor. Reports received by telegraph show that the total of unemployment has jumped to nearly 265,000, as compared with a surplus of labor of but 12,000 on Dec. 3 last, and a total of approximately 210,000 for the week ending Jan. 25.

The number of cities reporting surpluses of labor has increased during the week from 44 per cent. to 50 per cent., and the number of cities reporting shortages has decreased from 13 to 12 per cent. The cities reporting the supply about equal to the demand has decreased from 43 to 38 per cent.

In describing the situation in New York State, the Department of Labor states that Albany reports a surplus of 5,000 in the district including Albany, Amsterdam, Gloversville, Schenectady, and Troy. This surplus, which consists principally of semi-skilled machinists, factory hands, and textile workers, is an increase of 1,000 over last week.

Buffalo reports a surplus of 17,000, which represents an increase of 4,000 over last week. Syracuse and Utica, early last week, reported a possible slight reduction in surpluses, while during the current week these surpluses have jumped to 5,000 and 2,500 respectively. Rochester reports a surplus of 4,000. Practically every community in New York State, the Department of Labor's announcement asserts, reports an increase in unemployment.

The situation in other sections of the nation is described as follows:

In Connecticut conditions of employment are steadily growing worse. In New Haven and Bridgeport the surplus has been increasing at the rate of from 500 to 1,000 a week. Bridgeport now reports a surplus of 7,000 and New Haven a surplus of 6,000. Norwich and Middletown both report surpluses of 2,000. Derby, New London, and Stamford all report surpluses.

In Boston the surplus has increased from 2,200 to 2,800. Lynn reports an increase in surplus of 100. The tendency in Massachusetts seems to be toward increased unemployment.

Portland, Me., reports a surplus of 1,000, as against a surplus of 600 last week. Conditions in New Hampshire and Vermont are approximately the same as last week.

The supply and demand in New Jersey remain about equal. There is still a considerable number of unemployed in Jersey City.

Pittsburgh reports a shortage of miners, but a surplus of 5,000 of common labor. There is also surplus of 2,500 of semi-skilled labor and 500 clerks. Harrisburg and Philadelphia both report surpluses. Erie has a surplus of 2,800. There is considerable demand for miners in the Scranton district.

Cleveland reports a surplus of 65,000 which is an increase of 10,000 over last week. Other cities in Ohio report the following surpluses: Akron, 1,500; Cincinnati, 5,000; Dayton, 8,000; Toledo, 9,000, and Youngstown, 4,500. Last week Akron reported that the supply about equaled the demand. Cincinnati, a surplus of 2,000; Dayton a surplus of 7,000. The condition of unemployment throughout the State is steadily becoming worse.

Detroit, which last week reported a surplus of 30,000, now reports a surplus of 33,000. Grand Rapids reports a surplus of 2,000. Jackson, Flint, and Port Huron all report surpluses. For some time it seemed that Michigan, in spite of heavy cancellation of war contracts, was going to be able to take care of any surplus that might occur. Now it is apparent that unemployment throughout the State is increasing at a rapid rate.

KILLS MOTHER BY ACCIDENT

12-Year-Old Son of Maj. Thompson, Now in France, Shoots Parent.

Mrs. Maud Webb Thompson, wife of Major Leslie Eugene Thompson of the 3d United States Army of Occupation now in France, was accidentally shot and killed shortly before last midnight by her 12-year-old son, William Powers Thompson, at their home, 610 West 116th Street. Mrs. Thompson, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Maurice Sessions, of Worcester, Mass., and her son and daughter, had just returned home from the theatre.

William Thompson had remained at home to read a book, entitled "Heroes of Aviation," and while the other members of the household were away he got out his father's revolver to play with. He found the cartridges and loaded the revolver. When his mother entered the room he took the revolver from his pocket and began brandishing it in the air. Just as his mother told him to put away the weapon it went off, the bullet passing through Mrs. Thompson's heart, killing her almost instantly.

TRANSPORT ASHORE; ALL ON BOARD SAVED

60 Americans Among the 2,000 Soldiers Who Were on Board the Narragansett.

SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 1. (Associated Press.)—In the early hours of the morning, in a calm sea but a blinding snowstorm, the American steamer Narragansett ran on the submerged rocks off the east end of the Isle of Wight which have claimed many victims in the past. The crew was American, and the ship carried 2,000 soldiers, of whom sixty were Americans.

Most of the men were in their bunks when the crash came. Bugles called them to the decks. All were ordered to put on lifebelts. Tugs attempted to draw the ship off the rocks, but failed. Then destroyers took the troops off without loss. They were brought to Southampton.

The Narragansett was so badly damaged that salvage officers think she will be a total wreck. All speak in the highest terms of the conduct of the Captain and the crew.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The American transport Narragansett, ashore at Bembridge Point, was bound from Havre for Southampton with about 2,000 troops, among whom were sixty Americans who were coming to England on leave. The transport was loaned to the British to bring across the Channel soldiers on leave.

The Narragansett is undamaged, according to latest reports received by American Army Headquarters, and it is expected that she will be floated at the next high tide.

PLEAD FOR DRASTIC AUTO LEGISLATION

Officials Would Examine All Applicants and Revoke Licenses of Reckless Drivers.

COMMITTEE TO DRAW BILL

Proposed to Give New York City Magistrates Full Power—London Cited as an Example.

Secretary of State Francis Hugo met City Magistrates, representatives of automobile clubs, and others interested in the regulation of automobile traffic in the Traffic Court yesterday and discussed legislation needed to eliminate reckless driving. Two things were apparently agreed upon. These were that there should be a thorough examination of applicants for licenses—owners as well as chauffeurs—and that more specific power should be given to the authorities to revoke licenses. Magistrate McAdoo favors giving Magistrates power to revoke.

The meeting resulted in the appointment of a committee with Magistrate W. Bruce Cobb, of the Traffic Court, as Chairman, to draw up a bill. Those who spoke favored a law under which all drivers be examined as to moral and physical fitness. Melvin T. Bender, representing the New York State Automobile Association, thought the present law broad enough in its provisions to revoke licenses.

The greatest diversity of opinion was over the question of who should revoke or suspend licenses. Secretary Hugo said that, so far as New York City was concerned, he was willing to have the law amended to read that he "shall" instead of "may" revoke or suspend licenses upon the recommendation of a Magistrate.

The Chief Magistrate commented upon the system in London, where power is vested in the Police Department and where from 5,000 to 6,000 drivers are continually on the suspended list, with the result that a traffic court is unnecessary.

"When I stand at Bleecker and Lafayette Streets," he said, "with its enormous traffic and the large number of persons crossing, they give me the impression of chased animals who have become expert in dodging. They have acquired a sort of 'vehicular elusiveness.' The selfish, light hearted, reckless or careless driver who was at first fined and later jailed has not been cured. I am frank to say that with a less zealous Magistrate than Judge House the casualties in this city would have been 100 per cent. higher. With 6,000,000 people we have got to do something."

He declared that Magistrates should have power to revoke or suspend licenses, and argued that with the case before a Magistrate and the testimony of the witnesses fresh in mind, it was better to act then than later after hearings by the Secretary of State. He said it was similar to a case held for a higher court, where often some of the facts are forgotten "in the labyrinth of the Grand Jury and a trial."

Mr. Hugo pointed out that, although New York State had one-ninth of all the automobiles in the country, he had only six inspectors for 500,000 and 80,000 miles of highways. He objected to branding chauffeurs as a class as criminals, when, as a matter of fact, he said, there were not many criminals among them. As to the examination of those seeking licenses, Mr. Hugo said that 23,000 men had been turned away because they did not pass the examination. Sometimes he was powerless to act, because many courts do not inform him of the disposition of cases.

Deputy Police Commissioner John A. Harriss said he would be only too glad to create a special division supplimental to the Traffic Division, to look up the character of persons proposed as drivers. The cost would not be much, for he thought five policemen would be enough to look up records. His department, the Traffic Division, was ready to co-operate in any action taken and he approved the system of universal license and a freer application of the revocation of licenses.

The several representatives of the New York State Automobile Association approved the revocation of licenses by New York Magistrates, but opposed such a law for the remainder of the State. They thought that many of the 1,100 Justices of the Peace should not be intrusted with such sweeping powers and cited instances to support their contention. Any drastic examination law, they [illegible], would never pass the Legislature.

Among those who attended were Magistrate Frederick B. House, who received a rising vote of thanks for his services to the citizens: Robert Grier Cooke of the Fifth Avenue Association, Jefferson De Mont Thompson of the Broadway Association, Charles M. Geiger of the Motor Truck Owners' Association of America, John C. Fox of the City Club, Fred W. Sessions of the New York State Motor Federation, and Melvin T. Bender of the New York State Automobile Association.

UPHOLD DOHENY MISSION.

Intimate State Department Knew Purpose in Going to Paris.

The statement of Acting Secretary of State Polk yesterday in Washington that he had not understood that Edward L. Doheny, President of the Mexican Petroleum Company, when he asked for passports to France, was going there as the head of a delegation to press the cause of American owners of property in Mexico at Paris caused astonishment yesterday among members of the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, which Mr. Doheny will represent. One of the members said he could not understand the announcement from Washington in view of the fact that the State Department was conversant with the aims of the association. He further said that the State Department had recently invited representatives of the association to come to Washington to co-operate with the State Department as to American claims in Mexico.

F. N. Watriss, formerly a law partner with Mr. Polk, will probably be one of the association's representatives at the Washington conference. He may also be named as the representative of the agricultural interests in the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico to go to Paris. Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, and Cornelius F. Kelley, President of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, are now in Europe, and will represent the banking and mining interests respectively. Mr. Doheny has already sailed for Europe.

Villa General Is Executed.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 1.—José Sigala, a General in Villa's command, was executed near La Mula Pass, thirty-five miles south of Presidio, Texas, last Tuesday for failure to fulfill his mission to the border to exchange stolen silver bullion for ammunition. The execution was carried out by Ildefonso Sanchez, another Villa General, under orders from Villa.

FOR SOLDIERS' DISCHARGE.

Gen. Pershing to Pass on All Applications of Americans Abroad.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 1.—General Pershing himself will pass upon all applications for the discharge of American soldiers abroad and such applications, based upon sickness or distress at home, must be made by letter to General Pershing from relatives in this country. The War Department has so notified Adjutant General Gilkyson of New Jersey and has asked his co-operation in order that only exceptional cases may be presented for discharge and that General Pershing shall not be flooded with thousands of applications.

The War Department notification states that General Pershing has been authorized to take action in the case of soldiers abroad whose presence is needed at home and who comply with certain regulations. Soldiers who may be sent to the United States for immediate discharge are those who entered the service after April 1, 1917, and submit proofs that there is sickness or other distress in their families that would warrant their discharge, or for whom such proof is submitted by relatives or other interested persons.

Officers or soldiers submitting sufficient reasons may be discharged in Europe if they waive any claim for sea-travel allowance. They may, however, receive allowances for travel to the port of embarkation and from Hoboken to the place of their entry into the service.

Any enlisted man who entered the service before April 1, 1917, may be sent home on furlough when sickness or other distress necessitates his presence with his family.

Relatives of men in the service who wish to take advantage of these regulations must write General Pershing direct, but the illness on which the request for a discharge is based must be of a serious nature and the case exceptional.

VASSAR'S DEFICIT $300,000.

Alumnae Meeting Here Reports Subscriptions of $200,000.

The New York Branch of the Association of Vassar College held its annual meeting at the Biltmore Hotel yesterday. The meeting was followed by a luncheon, at which the following speakers delivered addresses: Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Dr. Henry Evartson Cobb, President MacCracken of Vassar, Mrs. Nina Duryea, Miss Nancy McClelland, and Miss Ruth Crippen, who has just returned from France, where she has been serving with a Vassar unit.

Among the subjects which the alumnae discussed at the meeting was the service of Vassar in the war. Miss McClelland said that the college has recently been faced with a deficit of $300,000, partially due to the fire which last year destroyed a wing of the main building, but chiefly caused by the war. It was announced that friends of the college had already pledged themselves to subscribe more than $200,000 to meet the deficit.

Arrested for Pennsylvania Murder.

Pennsylvania police officials, led by a member of the Constabulary of that State, arrested yesterday in a rooming house at 8 West 109th Street, Emanuel Lopez, who is wanted to answer a charge of having killed a policeman in Chester, Penn. The killing was incident to an attempt to hold up a boarding house by three men, one of whom is said to have been the prisoner. The crime was committed on Friday night and George Ditaz, who was arrested, confessed and implicated Lopez. He gave the address where he was to meet Lopez in this city.

$520 FOR A TICKET TO CHICAGO BY AIR

Association Is Planning a Dirigible Service for Passengers from This City.

$50,000 TO INFLATE SHIP

Trip Can Be Made Comfortably in Less Than 12 Hours, Officials Estimate.

The Manufacturers' Aircraft Association announced yesterday that one of its members was investigating the feasibility of establishing passenger service by dirigible between this city and Chicago. J. M. McElroy, chief engineer of the Sturtevant Airplane Company of Boston, and Noble Foss, son of ex-Governor Foss of Massachusetts, estimate that a service with four airships can be established at an initial cost of about $5,000,000.

Preliminary plans for the aircraft to be used include carrying capacity for twenty-five passengers and ten members of a crew, and it is pointed out in the announcement that development of this type of airship is entirely feasible, inasmuch as dirigibles, as well as airplanes, have carried more persons than is proposed. Their first estimate is that it would cost about 65 cents a mile, to carry each passenger, and that the fare probably would be more than $520 to Chicago. This estimate follows closely the figures of the report of the Civil Aerial Transport Committee of Great Britain and other organizations that have made investigations.

"The ships would be of the Zeppelin type, rigid housing, and multiple compartment structure," says the announcement. "Helium gas would be used, thus removing the danger of inflammability that now exists with the use of hydrogen. Recent figures give a cost of 10 cents per cubic foot, which would amount to $50,000 for the initial inflation of a 500,000 cubic foot capacity ship. The loss due to leakage is said to be less than that of hydrogen, and there are at least two plants in this country built especially for the production of this gas, which would insure an adequate supply.

"Cabin accommodations, under the plans, would be in the interior of the housing structure and in the centre of the ship, connected to the top of the structure, which would be a housed-in observation deck, by a spiral tubular staircasing. The cars would be swung out from the hull to give clearance for the propellers."

"This ship would be approximately 425 feet long and 45 feet in diameter. Its engines would total 1,200 horse power. The bag would have 650,000 cubic foot capacity, providing a gross lift of 20 tons at sea level, which would mean approximately 10 tons useful lift. It would be capable of flying 70 miles an hour, and a trip to Chicago could be made comfortably in less than twelve hours.

"The power plant would consist of twin engines, side by side, driving through gears a central stub shaft mounting a variable pitch air screw. This arrangement would centralize the power and allow operation of one or both motors in the car to meet conditions of adverse or favorable winds, or fast or slow speeds. The engines would be heavier constructed than the typical airplane motor, with the reliability and endurance of the automobile type. Gasoline and oil tanks would be located along the keel and fuel fed to the engines through an automatic pressure system that would insure even loss in tanks, so as not to affect the balance of the ship."

Mr. McElroy believes that the greatest difficulty to be overcome in handling these air liners will be in landing them, but he asserts that problem can be solved. Passengers could be lowered in a cage, he thinks, or heavy windlasses could ease the craft into a dock. Another suggestion is that a dock floating in the air be devised so that the changes of the wind would not hamper a landing. This dock would be anchored only at one end.

As proof of their ideas that the use of the type of airships is feasible the promoters point to the successful flight of a German ship to East Africa, a journey of more than 7,000 miles, without reprovisioning. The last successful flight cited is that of the United States Navy dirigible C-1 from Long Island to Key West. From this preliminary type larger ships for oceanic flights probably could be developed, the announcement says, in pointing out that it is more desirable to carry out the preliminary experiments over land.

DEFEND ACCUSED PASTOR.

Witnesses Assert the Rev. H. A. Hall Was an Ideal Husband.

SACO, Me., Feb. 1.—A succession of pictures of Henry H. Hall of Wells Depot as a loving husband living a life of ideal harmony with his wife, Minnie, was unwound by the defense today in the trial of the preacher in the Supreme Court on the charge that he murdered her last June. Thirty witnesses testified that in their opinion the defendant was a law-abiding, peaceable citizen, of good repute, and that he was a kind and loving husband.

Witnesses told of the preacher doing the family washing and ironing, cleaning floors, getting breakfasts, and performing other homely chores, and asserted that in many other ways, by constant attentions to his wife and almost daily outings with her in pleasant weather, he showed his devotion continually up to the time of her death.

The opening for the defense given this morning by Frederick C. Hinckley of Portland dwelt upon the life of Hall from boyhood to the days when he went to sea as a cook, and later to his career as a preacher.

Regarding the discolorations on the throat of the dead woman, testified to by medical experts for the State as made by the clutch of human hands, Hinckley said it would be shown by witnesses that there were no marks visible on the throat immediately before or after her death and that her skin was not even bruised. The lawyer said that the defendant would take the stand in his own defense.

SAY CHILDREN GET DRUGS.

Chinese Laundry Raided After Complaints to Police.

Detectives from the narcotic squad at Police Headquarters have been making investigations in Long Island City for the last week, following complaints of parents and school officials. These were that youths and even school children were receiving narcotics from some unknown source. A raid was made yesterday by Detectives Boylan upon a Chinese laundry at 433 Steinway Avenue, and three Chinese were arrested, one of whom had a drug and an opium smoking layout.

The prisoners were arraigned before Magistrate Kochendorfer in the Long Island City Court and held in $500 bail each for examination until a chemical examination can be made of the drug. Bonds were furnished for the prisoners by a surety company. The laundry where the raid was made is in a newly developed business section just south of North Beach, and is close to a public school.

5-CENT PHONE RATE RESTORED BY HOTELS

Facing the Certainty of Discontinued Services, Managers Obey Burleson.

WILL APPEAL TO COURTS

Action Will Be Taken Early This Week, Although Its Nature Has Not Been Determined.

Yielding because of certain knowledge that their telephone service would be discontinued entirely by the telephone company, under instructions from Postmaster General Burleson, if they persisted in charging 5 cents extra "for service" on local and suburban telephone calls, which policy was put into effect earlier in the week, the hotels yesterday abandoned the effort to obtain what they assert is cost for telephone service through their hotels, and fell back to 5 cents for local calls and no extra charge for suburban service. Charles J. Campbell, of Campbell & Boland, 51 Chambers Street, counsel for the Hotel Association of New York City, said his clients would not accept the situation without a fight, and the courts will be appealed to. Just what form the proceedings will take, Mr. Campbell said, has not been decided, but he was certain that some action would be taken early this week.

The hotel men assert that an examination of the books of the leading hotels of the city disclosed the fact that 10 cents for a local call barely covers the cost to them for such service. They point out that, in addition to the 2½ cents a call which they have to pay to the telephone company, they have to pay rental on switchboard equipment, trunk lines and room telephones, pay salaries of operators, furnish room for the switchboard, &c. Figured on the number of calls made last year, the Telephone Committee of the Hotel Association, of which Fred A. Muschenheim, of the Astor Hotel, is Chairman, estimated the losses, if no service charge is made, to the following hotels would be: Astor Hotel, $18,870; Belleclaire, $5,518; the Biltmore, $30,939.95; McAlpin, $59,667.04; Park Avenue, $8,209; Vanderbilt, $13,057; Waldorf-Astoria, $34,678; Woodward, $3,768.

The Postmaster General issued an order last Fall that, effective Dec. 1, 1918, all telephone calls from hotels should be charged at public pay station rates, which meant 5 cents for local calls, and the hotels accepted under protest, meanwhile having the accountants get busy on the cost of the service to the hotels and their attorneys to look into the legal phase of the question. Under the new toll schedule, effective Jan. 2[illegible], 1919, the hotels are not permitted to charge more than the regular pay station rates for suburban calls, whereas prior to that time they paid 5 cents less than the pay station rate, this amount being a margin to pay for the service in the hotels, it was explained by the Telephone Committee.

The plan of charging 5 cents extra on both local and suburban calls was evolved by the Telephone Committee and was put in effect early in the week in practically all the hotels in the city; some on Tuesday and others on Wednesday or Thursday. As soon as he got word of the action, Postmaster General Burleson on Friday notified Union N. Bethell, Chairman of the United States Telegraph and Telephone Operating Board, 195 Broadway, to direct the officials operating the New York Telephone Company's lines to "discontinue service to any hotel, apartment house, club, or similar institution which shall charge any guest, tenant, or member for telephone messages an amount in excess of that charged for such service at the public pay stations in the same exchange."

Mr. Bethell notified the hotel men yesterday and stated emphatically that the service would be discontinued in all hotels, clubs, &c., where a charge greater than that of the regular pay stations was made. The result was that Mr. Campbell, who conferred with Mr. Bethell, advised the Telephone Committee to discontinue the extra charge pending application to the courts for relief. Mr. Muschenheim in the afternoon sent notices to all hotels advising them of the recommendation of Mr. Campbell and all the hotels went back to the five-cent charge. A number of hotel managers said that the action of the Postmaster General was unjust and unfair and expressed the opinion that they would eventually win the fight.

Lieutenant Schermerhorn in Asylum

Lieutenant Amos Cotting Schermerhorn, U. S. A., of 25 East Seventy-ninth Street, was adjudged insane by an army medical board in September and is now in Bloomingdale Asylum, it became known yesterday when Supreme Court Justice Platzek appointed Eugene L. Busche, Dr. B. Sachs, and John M. Riehle a commission in lunacy to sit with a sheriff's jury in order that a committee of his person may be appointed. This action is necessary to obtain Lieutenant Schermerhorn's discharge from the army. The army medical board found him suffering from delusions as the result of dementia praecox. He has property worth $375,159 and is 3[illegible] years old.

WHITMAN MEN OPEN FIGHT UPON KOENIG

Ex-Governor Displeased Over the Way Smith Beat Him in New York County.

CHAIRMAN WILL FIGHT BACK

Republican Club Members Say Opportunity to Criticise Hylan Has Been Neglected.

Prominent Republicans of this city, as well as up-State, have started plans for the reorganization of the New York Republican County Committee. The movement is headed by several members of the Republican Club, friends of former Governor Whitman, who assert that the county organization made such a poor showing in the election last Fall that a complete reorganization, including the elimination of the County Chairman, Samuel S. Koenig, is necessary.

Chairman Koenig's friends insist that the organization was not to blame for the large vote given to Governor Smith, as Mr. Whitman's unpopularity had as much to do with it as did Mr. Smith's popularity, and that it is unfair to place the blame on Chairman Koenig or any other member of the organization. They also assert that the movement was started by William Barnes of Albany, who seeks to put the responsibility for the defeat of the Republican Gubernatorial candidate upon New York City, when an analysis of the vote shows that the up-State organization did not give the Governor anything like the support he should have received.

No open attempt to bring about the reorganization is expected until Herbert Parsons, now in the aviation service abroad, returns to New York. He is expected back in a few weeks. Mr. Koenig has been Chairman of the Republican County Committee for eight years, and it is expected that he will not relinquish the office without a vigorous fight.

One complaint of the Republican Club members who are opposed to the present organization of the county committee is that it is not conducting a strenuous enough campaign against the Democratic administration in the city. They say the Chairman is neglecting a fruitful opportunity to criticise the Hylan administration, especially when, they say, so much of the criticism is justified. That the county committee, however, is preparing a campaign against the administration is shown by the fact that at its last meeting it appointed a committee at the suggestion of James Cowden Meyers to study city affairs with a view to preparing the groundwork for the next municipal campaign.

Much complaint has also been made by Republican leaders over the activities of the Socialist members of the Board of Aldermen. They complain that the Republican members are allowing the Socialists to do all the fighting against the Democratic majority in the board, and that consequently the credit for opposing the Democratic program is being given entirely to the Socialists. The Republican county organization has already become active in the fight to elect a President of the Board of Aldermen this Fall. The term of the present incumbent, Robert L. Moran of the Bronx, who succeeded Alfred E. Smith when he was elected Governor, will expire on Dec. 31, and the election will take place in November. Mr. Moran will be the choice of the Democrats for the place and several Republican candidates are already in the field. One of these is Alderman Arnon L. Squiers of Brooklyn. The county organization may choose former Alderman Henry H. Curran, now a Major, who was recently appointed a City Magistrate.

Will Later Make Known Mission to United States.

Sir Horace Plunkett, who presided over the recent Irish Convention which failed to reach an agreement on a scheme of self-government for Ireland, declined yesterday to discuss the Irish situation or the mission which brought him to this country several days ago. He said he will go west to rest for several weeks, and that on his return he will probably be ready to talk of his mission.

Before sailing for this country Sir Horace, in an article published in The Manchester Guardian, gave it as his opinion that there are only two ways in which the British can deal with the Sinn Fein situation in Ireland. One is to employ force which would be doomed to failure, he said, and the other should be a "firm offer of a reasonable measure of self-government."

Although himself allied with no faction in Ireland, it is said that Sir Horace has the trust and respect of all factions. He was the founder of the Irish Agricultural Association and the pioneer of the co-operative movement in Ireland. He is an uncle of Lord Dunsany, the Irish dramatist. Sir Horace, while in the city, is the guest of Lawrence Godkin at 36 West Tenth Street.

NEAR EAST REFUGEES IN PITIABLE PLIGHT

Dr. Harry P. Judson Describes Condition of 25,000 Who Marched 700 Miles.

ALL SOCIETY BROKEN DOWN

Soldiers of Dispersed Turkish Armies Have Become Bandits—Anarchy Rules, He Says.

The establishment of a totally new civilization and govenmental structure for the Near East to supplant the harsh features of Turkish rule should not be overlooked among the many problems to be considered by the proposed League of Nations, said Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, President of Chicago University, speaking yesterday at the luncheon for the workers in the $30,000,000 drive of the Committee for Relief in the Near East, held at the Bankers' Club. Dr. Judson went to Persia for the committee last Fall, and returned from abroad on Friday.

Dr. Judson said he had made a carefully planned trip through all of Persia and European Turkey, and had found some 25,000 refugees, Syrians and Armenians, along the banks of the river Tigris. The able-bodied men among them were aiding the British in building roads, he said, and those who were left to struggle for themselves were mostly women and children. When they reached the Tigris they had wearily marched 700 miles through storms, wind, and rain.

"They had nothing but scraps on their backs," said Dr. Judson, "and so, worn out, hungry, and exhausted, they reached the camp. The little children had been carried on their mothers' backs, some had died on the way and some could still be seen toddling along the road. There were a thousand pictures one could see of conditions in Turkey, or what, God will, will never be Turkey again.

"We found, for instance, all society broken down, all its foundations worn away. people wandered in the mountains, sleeping under Wintry skies and dying by the thousand. This is the result of centuries of tyranny. We must reconstruct society from the foundations. The problem is not simply shifting a society or Government where there is one already established. It is a case of establishing order where none exists.

"The Turkish armies are broken up and the former Turkish soldiers have become robbers and bandits and anarchy rules with them. There is no peace, no safety, no assurance of life from day to day. That must be taken hold of and made over. And here is one of the great tasks of the allied nations. All the old injustices must be wiped out for all time. We must establish justice and order, and then, of course, we must give them life. None of the conditions in the shaken and disturbed parts of the world draws so upon our heartstrings as does the Near East.

"I believe there can be built up in that land a country worth while, a new civilization on the ruins of the old. They need guidance, help, but first of all, they need life—they must eat, they must be clothed. In this work of generosity and wisdom America must not be left out. We must find out that our duty lies beyond the boundaries of the United States—we found that out when we entered the war. This problem America cannot shake, and she must lend a helping hand."

Charles W. Vickery, Secretary of the committee, announced that Secretary Baker had promised to cable President Wilson for authority to use an army transport to take supplies and relief workers to the Holy Land. Mr. Vickery said Mr. Baker made the promise yesterday in a telephone conversation with Alexander J. Hemphill, Chairman of the Near East Committee.

In the national drive, Mr. Vickery said, Ohio had oversubscribed its quota of $500,000 by nearly $1,500,000. H. W. Jessup, Captain of Team 8, reported that he had received a weekly contribution of $5 a week from a clerk, or half the weekly salary of the donor. A total of $250 was reported from the Greek American Institute pupils, who held a campaign last week. About $14,000 was received in small donations at the headquarters of the committee, 1 Madison Avenue, yesterday.

LOSE CERTIFICATE SUIT.

Interim Instrument to be Exchanged for Bonds Is Not Negotiable.

Whether an interim certificate is a negotiable instrument like the bond for which it is to be exchanged when the bond is issued was decided yesterday for the first time by Supreme Court Justice Vernon M. Davis in a suit of Babcock, Rushton & Co., brokers, against the National Surety Company to recover the value of five certificates for $1,000 bonds issued by Wilson & Co. The court ruled that such a certificate is not a negotiable instrument because the essential elements of such an instrument are lacking, since it contains no unconditional promise to pay a sum of money and no interest is collectible. The complaint is accordingly dismissed.

The question arose through the theft of certificates belonging to W. W. Davis, deposited by him for safekeeping with the Harriman National Bank and stolen in June, 1916, by Washington M. Logan, an auditor employed by the bank to check up the securities owned by the bank. Logan, who was subsequently convicted of the theft and sentenced to a term in prison, sold the certificates through a brokerage firm, and they came into the possession of Babcock, Rushton & Co. The bonds called for by the certificate were bought in the open market by the Harriman National Bank and delivered to Mr. Davis, its depositor, and the National Surety Company, which bonded the auditor, made good the loss by the bank. Babcock, Rushton & Co., being unable to get delivery of the bonds represented by the certificates, then sued the surety company, as the present owner of the certificates, to recover the bonds.

TO EXTEND HEALTH WORK.

Industrial Hygiene to Take In New Fields of Labor.

On the invitation of Health Commissioner Copeland several members of the Labor Sanitation Conference met him yesterday and conferred regarding the extension of the work of industrial hygiene.

"I wanted to find out what the view of the labor men was with respect to the extension of the work in particular industries," said Dr. Copeland after the meeting. "We had a considerable discussion, and it was suggested that the work be extended to other fields of industry, including the stonecutters and marble cutters, the sheet metal workers, the lithographers, the shipbuilding industry, the printers, and the painters.

"The Board of Estimate has consented to make the money for this work available at once, and on Monday I shall appoint ten temporary Medical Inspectors and fifteen or twenty temporary Sanitary Inspectors to begin the work. The men will be taken from the list of those who have applied for the examinations. As Civil Service lists will not be available for four or five months, and as it is my desire to start on the work immediately, I have decided on the temporary appointments for Monday.

"Mr. Rybicki, delegate of the Central Federated Union, was insistent that I appoint Dr. Louis I. Harris director of the work and said he felt that he was not free to make any recommendation until his union had indorsed my plan."

AUTOS KILL 1,189 IN YEAR.

Highways Society Reports 30 Per Cent. Increase in State.

There were approximately 30 per cent. more automobile fatalities in New York State in 1918 than in 1917, according to figures given out yesterday by Colonel Edward S. Cornell of the National Highways Protective Society, 1 West Thirty-fourth Street. The number of deaths were 837 in 1917. Revised figures show that in 1918 1,189 persons were killed by automobiles in this State.

"It would be well to consider the economic loss sustained every time a life is lost," said Colonel Cornell. "The Federal authorities, in fixing the value of a soldier's life, insured him at $10,000. Taking this figure as a standard, we arrive at the enormous total of $11,890,000 lost in human lives on the highways and streets of this State.

"As against this loss of 1,189 lives approximately, surely not much less, 1,100 operators of motor vehicles were involved in these fatalities, and up to the middle of last December we had less than thirty licenses revoked by the Secretary of State. This is a proportion of less than 3 per cent. in comparison with the number of persons killed."

According to the report, 49 persons were killed by automobiles, 8 by trolleys, and 1 by a wagon in the City of New York during the month of January. And in New York State, outside of the city, in the same period, automobiles caused the death of 19, trolleys, 3. This record of 68 killed by automobiles is the greatest ever recorded for the month of January. In the past month automobiles caused the death of 17 persons, trolleys killed 4, and 2 met their death by wagons in the State of New Jersey.

OPEN DRIVE HERE TO AID JUGOSLAVS

Food and Clothing in Europe, but Money Must Be Raised to Get It to Sufferers.

TELL OF TERRIBLE HARDSHIP

Thousands of Children Have Died and Thousands More Face Death Unless Aid Comes.

It was announced yesterday that the American Jugoslav Relief Committee for Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, of which Mrs. E. H. Harriman is the head, would launch an extensive campaign this week for the relief of the Jugoslav provinces and Serbia. The committee will make its headquarters in this city at 661 Fifth Avenue, where a workroom for the making of garments for refugees has already been established. Another workroom has been opened in the home of John D. Rockefeller, 4 West Fifty-fourth Street.

James Keeley, formerly editor of The Chicago Herald, will have charge of the campaign organization, it was announced, and the various Jugoslav societies in this country have promised their co-operation. At a meeting held in Chicago several weeks ago delegates from these societies pledged whatever contributions the generous impulses of their 300,000 members could make, but it was pointed out that they did not constitute a wealthy element in the population. In an appeal to the public yesterday the committee said:

"The need for aid is pressing. Food, clothing, and medicines must be sent at once or the death toll will be appalling. The co-operation of the American Red Cross and the Hoover organization there have been assured, and it is through these channels that immediate distribution will be made. Food and supplies are available from the other side, but from this side must come the money that will place the goods in the hands of those who cannot live unless speedy aid is extended.

"In Bosnia and Herzegovina, where there are 2,000,000 inhabitants, 160,000 children have died during the war. Dalmatia, with 600,000 inhabitants, like Bosnia and Herzegovina, is without food or clothing. In Croatia and Slavonia the conditions are slightly better. In Istria, Gorzia, and Garniola there is indescribable suffering and a great lack of food and clothing.

"The most horrible suffering occurred in Istria, especially among children. Teachers report that teaching in the schools was impossible, the children simply staring at them lifelessly. The mothers in desperation, when their children cried for bread, gave them wine. The mothers of young children walked from 100 to 200 kilometres to get flour and other food, and many times the Austrian military authorities took away everything they had. In Jugo-Slavia there is practically no milk for children, and they have had none for two years. Cows have been killed and mothers cannot feed their children because of malnutrition."

Among the patrons of the committee are Felix M. Warburg, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. John Purroy Mitchel, and Dean Robbins of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The members of the New York committee are Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Ripley Hitchcock, Miss Malvina Hoffman, Mrs. Irving T. Bush, Mrs. Charles S. Guthrie, Mrs. George Ellis, George Gordon Battle, Dr. Russell Hibbs, Colonel George Brewer, and Albert Gregg.

Care for Americans Blinded in War.

Sir Arthur Pearson, who established St. Dunstan's School in England to teach blind soldiers and sailors to read and write, will be the speaker at a mass meeting to be held in the Century Theatre on Tuesday evening to consider measures for caring for the Americans blinded in the war. Moving pictures of the work in the British school will be shown and Lieut. Col. James E. Bordley, director of the Red Cross Institute for the Blind in Baltimore, will tell of the American plans for rehabilitation. The meeting will be open to the public, but reserved seat tickets may be obtained upon request at the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men, at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-third Street.

250,000 NAMES IN LUXURY TAX DRIVE

Petitions Obtained in Stores Here Go to Washington in Two Large Trunks.

OTHER PROTESTS ARE SENT

Shoppers Crowd Tables, Anxious to Sign on Last Day of the Local Campaign.

When the three days' drive for signatures opposing the luxury tax provision in the War Revenue bill closed last night in the department and retail dry goods and haberdashery stores of New York, the promoters of the plan to enlist shoppers against this form of consumption tax, estimated that 250,000 names had been appended to the lists to be laid before the Conference Committee in Congress.

The bright, crisp weather prevailing yesterday brought shoppers in thousands to the stores in Manhattan and Brooklyn. The tables where the signatures were taken were surrounded all day by persons eager to register their disapproval of the tax, and as a consequence there was little need on the part of store managers to urge customers to sign.

W. de [illegible] Trenholm, Secretary of the Retail Dry Goods Association, reported that eight of the sixteen stores making up the membership of the organization had turned in 65,000 signatures by actual count. He said that if the average held good as to the other eight stores, the toll of signatures obtained by the association would total 125,000.

B. Altman & Co. sent in 35,000 names recorded in their store. Other firms reporting yesterday were Abraham & Straus, 6,[illegible]00; Lord & Taylor, 3,000, and Bloomingdale's, 1,000. In addition heavy lists of signatures were reported by many firms which collected the names of opponents of the tax independently of the Retail Dry Goods Association.

Secretary Trenholm took the midnight train for Washington last night and accompanying him were two large trunks filled to the lids with petitions. Stores not turning over their lists to Mr. Trenholm sent them direct to the conference committee.

The Retail Dry Goods Association's representative will present the committee with the lists of objectors tomorrow. A protest against the tax by the Nation Garment Retailers' Association was forwarded to Washington yesterday.

To Name Ship for Pembroke Jones.

The Emergency Fleet Corporation has directed the Carolina Shipbuilding Corporation, at Wilmington, N. C., to name one of the four large steel ships now being built there for the Government, the Pembroke, in honor of Pembroke Jones, vice president of the shipbuilding corporation in recognition of his services as a member of the National War Trades Board. Mr. Jones, who lived at 5 East Sixty-first Street, this city, died Friday of last week at the Post Graduate Hospital, following an operation. The first boat to be completed at the Wilmington shipyard will be named the Pembroke.

OPERA

By James Gibbons Huneker

Mary Garden in "Thaïs."

During the last week the temperament of Mary Garden has been carefully chained in its cage; nevertheless, we overheard its growls in "Gismonda," but the mock-Fafner at the bottom of the cistern outroared Miss Garden's tame panther. In "Monna Vanna" there were whimperings and menacing claws. The feline had no chance to spring, not even in the tent scene. At the matinée yesterday in the Lexington Theatre "Thaïs" was sung by the Chicago Opera Association, and now or never! we said, the temperament so artistically expressed, rather canalized and exquisitely distributed, in the two other operas, will leap. It did. In the palace of Thaïs the panther appeared for a few moments—and it assumed the form of hysteria. The famous courtesan of Alexandria experienced a true "conversion," the physical manifestations of which were well-nigh pathological. "You have created a new shudder," wrote Victor Hugo to Charles Baudelaire after the production of his "Flowers of Evil." The "nouveau frisson" of Miss Garden was thrilling, and must have appalled the well-meaning, stupid Athanael. It certainly started the house into frantic applause.

The singing actress did not widely depart from her usual interpretation, except that "slight perpetual novelty" which we expect from her. Her last scene was beautiful in conception and execution; the "spiritual" flirtation on the mossy bank as piously piquant as ever. The kiss suggested and evaded set us to wondering again at the morose monk. In the early acts Thaïs was too restless. The firm yet plastic lines of the character were thereby disturbed. She looked lovelier than ever, and she did not sing with the best of voice. A trying week was behind her; besides, the domesticated panther must have tugged hard and frequently at his leash.

Baklanoff, the Athanael suffering from a strained ligament caused by his too realistic fall the night before in "Le Chemineau," was of necessity restrained in his movements; his left arm was practically useless. But he sang with vigor throughout and shared honors with the star. Mr. O'Sullivan was an acceptable Nicias. Maestro Campanini was compelled to repeat the "Meditation," that adored of a hundred thousand table-d'hôtes, the concertmaster, Gregor Skolnik, playing the solo part with taste. The general performance was excellent, with the orchestra in fine form, thanks to the masterly conducting. There was an overflowing house.

Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann" was revived before a popular audience at the Lexington last evening, when Florence Macbeth and Marguerite Namara made their appearance with the Chicago stars as the first two of the poet's heroines. Miss Sharlow sang the third, Mr. Fontaine the hero, and Mr. Maguenat the three villains formerly done by Renaud. Mr. Charlier conducted, and the representation, like its matinee predecessor, recalled to many the gala days of French opera at Hammerstein's Manhattan a decade ago.

"L'Oracolo" and "Le Coq d'Or."

Dear old Nat Goodwin always alluded to his theatrical Saturdays as the time when he had to "put in two tons of coal"; meaning the matinée and evening performances. This was before the era of the crowded hour on Wednesdays. We thought of the versatile actor when we heard Adamo Didur sing Win-Shee in "L'Oracolo" and later the King in "Le Coq d'Or." Only a bad attack of critic's sore throat prevents us from singing the praises of this many-sided Russian artist.

"L'Oracolo" was presented for the first time this season with Antonio Scotti in his wonderful impersonation of Chim Fang, one of the most sinister because cruelly cold-blooded characterizations on the lyric or dramatic stage. At least Scarpia was prompted by his hot pulse. Tosca the prize in sight! But Chim Fang? A Chinese Iago who loves evil for evil's sake. And no one but Scotti could have exposed the psychology of the character with such diabolic finesse. Marie Sundelius was Ah Yoe. Beautiful singing. Paul Althouse, the Win San Luy; artistic singing and a vital tenor voice. Sophie Braslau as Hua Quee was in her richest contralto mood. Altogether an ideal performance. Roberto Moranzoni conducted.

"Le Coq d'Or" was the afterpiece. An excellent idea, indeed, to marry these two exotic works. Again Rosina Galli trilled with her arms as the apparition enters in Act I.; and again in the following act she was a vision of grace, coquetry, beauty, and seductiveness. The cast was the same except that Leonora Sparkes was the voice of the gilded rooster. Pierre Monteux conducted. The Opera House was packed.

Puccini's "Tabarro," "Angelica" and "Schicchi" were new to the Metropolitan's matinée audience yesterday, when the "three little operas" had their fifth performance here. Mmes. Farrar, Muzio and Ellis, Messrs. De Luca, Didur, Crimi and Montesanto sang, and Mr. Moranzoni conducted. Cuts have been made in "Il Tabarro" and "Suor Angelica" greatly to their improvement.

PLAY MUSIC FOR YOUNG.

Raoul Vidas the Violin Soloist of Symphony Concert.

Virtuoso wind players of the Symphony Society's fine orchestra entertained a great house at the fourth of the Symphony Concerts for Young People yesterday in Carnegie Hall. French art had first place, the Symphony in A, by Saint Saëns, and then French artists, De Busscher, Langenus and Apchain, in Beethoven's trio for oboe, clarinet and English horn, after Mr. Damrosch explained the instruments.

Raoul Vidas, who had to follow Beethoven's polonaise by half a hundred viols, has never seemed so boyish as he did facing a houseful of youngsters in Mozart's E-flat concerto. The young violinist's style is that of a finished artist, that denies his years, but this music of immortal youth itself somehow capped the spirit of the matinee. Vidas played an encore.

Mr. Damrosch's men made a full day of it in Carnegie Hall, reappearing last night in their regular series with a program from Victor de Sabata to Wagner. The star was again a violinist, Toscha Seidel, and the concerto was Mendelssohn's, which he had played on Thursday.

David and Clara Mannes were guests of the People's Symphony Society last evening at Washington Irving High School, where they gave another of the chamber music recitals that have attracted popular audiences during two war seasons.

Musicale at Hostess House Today.

The Y. W. C. A. Debarkation Hostess House will have a musicale in its hall at Forty-first Street and Lexington Avenue at 4:30 this afternoon for the soldiers and their friends as guests. There will be songs by Miss Greta Torpadie, and violin solos by Miss Kneisel.

"The Betrothal" for the Century.

Arrangements were made yesterday to reopen the Century Theatre next Wednesday afternoon with Maeterlinck's play, "The Betrothal," which concluded its run at the Shubert Theatre last night. The three days intervening will be required for rehearsals on the larger stage.

Kettledrum for Samaritan Home.

Plans have been completed for the annual Kettledrum, in aid of the Samaritan Home for the Aged, which is to be held on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 15, at Sherry's. There will be continuous dancing, cards, and booths for the sale of articles made by the inmates of the home.

Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff is in charge of the sale of tickets, and among those who are to assist in the entertainment are Mrs. Howland Davis, Mrs. William D. Guthrie, Mrs. Frances Huntington, Mrs. G. H. Kinnicutt, Miss Amy Townsend, Mrs. W. Kintzing Post, Mrs. Clarence Dinsmore, Mrs. Effingham Lawrence, Mrs. Rudolph Kissel, Mrs. H. S. Rokenbaugh, and Mrs. James Benkard.

In Aid of Lenox Hill Settlement.

Many prominent women are interested in the rummage sale and Lenox Hill Arts and Crafts exhibit, which is to be held from Feb. 11 to 15, at 723 Fifth Avenue, in aid of the Lenox Hill Settlement.

Mrs. R. Penn Smith, Jr., formerly Miss Carol Harriman, is Chairman of the Executive Committee, which includes Mrs. Paul Dougherty, Mrs. Jesse C. Bernheim, Mrs. James F. Curtis, Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, Mrs. George F. Baker, Jr.; Mrs. Cornelius M. Bliss, Jr.; Mrs. James J. Derby, Mrs. Harold I. Pratt, Mrs. Monroe Douglas Robinson, and Miss Virginia Furman.

Bridge Parties for War Relief.

For the support of their endowment bed at Neuilly, France, the New York Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will give an auction bridge on Wednesday afternoon at the Hotel Astor. Mrs. James Henry Parker is President of the organization.

On Feb. 17, at the Astor, the Daughters of Indiana, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, President, are to hold a bridge party for war relief.

MISS DARLINGTON WEDS.

Bishop's Daughter Marries Lieut. J. Ellis Fisher.

The wedding of Lieutenant J. Ellis Fisher, U. S. N. R. F., the son of Mrs. J. Ellis Fisher of Carlton House, this city, and Miss Eleanor Townsend Darlington, a daughter of the Rt. Rev. James Henry Darlington and Mrs. Darlington, of Harrisburg, Penn., was celebrated at noon yesterday in St. Stephen's Church, Harrisburg, and the bride's father, Bishop Darlington, assisted by the Rev. Rollin Alger Sawyer, the rector, officiated. The bride was in white satin and rose point with a tulle veil held with a point lace coronet, and she wore the bridegroom's gift, a pearl necklace. Her brother, Lieutenant Gilbert S. B. Darlington, a Chaplain in the navy, gave her in marriage.

Miss Richards Weds Robert Crane.

Miss Nancy Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Richards, and Robert Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Munroe Crane of Dover Plains, N. Y., were married yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, 399 Park Avenue, the Rev. Dr. William Merrill officiating.

Miss Harriet Richards, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids included the Misses Isabel Jamison, Mildred McNeill, Charlotte Boote and Olive Burns.

John N. Stone of Springfield, Mass., acted as best man. The ushers were Brenton Pomeroy, Philip B. Brewster, Clifford Merrifield, Beach Barrett and Donald Crane. The bride wore a gown of white satin and old lace.

Hutchinson-McNair Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. William McNair of 5 East Seventy-ninth Street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Vera McNair, to Reginald Hutchinson, son of Daniel L. Hutchinson, Jr., of Philadelphia. The announcement was made yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. McNair at her home. Miss McNair was a débutante of last year. Her fiancé entered the navy when this country entered the war, and was an ensign in the Naval Aviation Service. He was graduated from Yale, the Sheffield Scientific School, Class of '19, and is a member of the Racquet Club of Philadelphia.

MRS. WILLIAMS TO WED.

Widow and W. Eugene Kimball, Broker, to Marry in St. Thomas's.

Mrs. Josephine Hotchkiss Williams, the widow of Waldron Williams, of this city, and W. Eugene Kimball, a broker of 5 Nassau Street, and whose home is at the St. Regis, are to be married quietly next Saturday in St. Thomas's Church. Mr. Kimball's first wife, Miss Edith M. Gibb, died in New Canaan, Conn., in 1914, and Mr. Williams died more recently. They took out a marriage license yesterday at the license bureau from Clerk Scully.

Mrs. Williams is the mother of Mrs. William Ross Proctor, Jr., Mrs. John T. Terry, Jr., Miss Hope Williams, and Barent W. Williams. Mr. Kimball is a member of the University, Nassau Country and other clubs and was graduated from Amherst in 1896.

PICKETS GET NO PASSPORTS

Militant Women Barred from Going to France to Annoy Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—In connection with the State Department's cancellation of the passports of Miss Mildred Morris of Denver, Col., and Miss Clara Wold of Portland, Ore., just before they were to sail for France this week, it was announced today that the women had represented that they were going abroad for war work and that the cancellation order was issued when the department learned they had been engaged in the activities of the Woman's Party before the White House.

A statement issued by the Woman's Party headquarters declared that some of its members already were in France and that it was their intention to "petition the President by banners and demonstrations wherever he goes for enfranchisement of American women." The statement quoted a number of inscriptions for banners which it was said Miss Morris and Miss Wold would have displayed outside the Peace Conference and before the President's residence in Paris if they had been permitted to sail.

Gate of Hope Congregation Benefit.

The members of the Gate of Hope congregation of Reform Jews announce a theatrical entertainment at the 22d Regiment Armory, Broadway and 168th Street, on Saturday night, March 15, for the purpose of raising funds for the erection of a synagogue. The congregation was organized two years ago.

ART NOTES.

Two Exhibitions of War Paintings —Etchings by Rembrandt.

During the war ardent patriots and unthinking art lovers were surprised to see so little notice taken in the art exhibitions of the mighty events of the day. Now that the war has ceased on the fields of France it is moving into the exhibition rooms. This week two very important exhibitions of war paintings and drawings are to be opened in New York.

One is the collection of war paintings by soldiers of France to be shown at the Gimpel & Wildenstein Galleries and to be sold for the benefit of the soldier painters. These are sketches made in the trenches, behind the lines, in the hospitals, in prison camps, full of truth, often satirical in expression as the French genius has a habit of being, always vivid. Some of the names in the catalogue are well known as those of brilliant cartoonists and illustrators, decorators, and engravers. Here is the exceedingly gifted Jean Veber, a member of the "Salon des Dessinateurs Humoristes." There is little of the humorous in his superbly simple drawing of men in dire fright, covering their ears and crouching as the "Big Bertha" fires. Here is Lortac, also one of the Humorists, showing us soldiers digging graves for their dead comrades; here is Ricardo Flores of Le Rire, Cri de Paris, and other journals celebrated for their gayety, portraying the French poilu as burdened and proud with an unconquerable pride, the type of soldier who cannot yield to an enemy, who, in the ranks or among the officers, can turn from palette and easel to acts of the highest bravery. The exhibition lasts until Feb. 18.

The public will find it interesting to compare these versions of the theatre of the war with those at the Anderson Galleries made by a group of English artists commissioned by the British Government to depict modern warfare comprehensively and systematically. The horrors of war do not appear in the English pictures, which are about 250 in number, nearly half of them by William Orpen, who ranges from portraits of distinguished officers through village and camp scenes to "story pictures" done with the dash and individual outlook of the new English school.

Besides Orpen, the artists represented in the exhibitions are George Clausen, Augustus John, James McBey, Muirhead Bone, Richard Wynne Nevison, Frank Brangwyn, Spencer Pryse, William Rothenstein, and many others. Those familiar with the current of modern painting will recognize the catholicity of the selection, which includes cubist and post impressionist as well as the most conservative artists of the present day.

Rembrandt Versus Rembrandt.

In a remarkably fine exhibition of etchings by Rembrandt, open at the Keppel Galleries until Feb. 15, are two impressions of "The Little Coppenol," which might be used to illustrate a lecture on prints for the young collector. One is a superb impression of the third state, as fresh as a daisy, with every modulation of line and tone precisely indicated. The beautiful treatment of the hands, always a matter of importance with Rembrandt in whatever medium he used; the plastic modeling of the face of the boy in the background, and the delicacy and sensitiveness of the features, and especially the tone about the eyes, upon which chiefly depends their expression, are so fine that the print would be judged a masterpiece on the strength of these qualities alone. In the other impression the plate is evidently worn, and the poetry and strength and the noble precision of a great workman have vanished. We get an eye that pops out of its setting, a young face that is coarsened, hands that lack character, an end to all greatness. Yet both prints are "The Little Coppenol," by Rembrandt. It is a wide and just idea on the part of the authorities of the gallery to present this object lesson to the public, and thus drive home the importance of quality.

Aseez Khayat Art Brings $11,277.

At the Aseez Khayat sale at the Anderson Galleries yesterday a Roman mosaic millefiori bowl of iridescent glass went to the Park Avenue Antique Studios for $262. A. A. Healy, President of the Brooklyn Museum, paid $185 for a Phoenician bottle of heavy amethyst glass, one of the gems of the Whiting collection. A large Babylonian stone sculpture of a winged, eagle-headed Babylonian god, 800 B. C., went to Mr. Healy for $150. A Rakka pottery jar, large and fine, with four handles, turquois blue glaze and silver iridescence, from the Thomas B. Clarke collection, went to Kalekian for $260. A Gothic carved wood figure, Madonna and Child, was bought by the Park Avenue Antique Studios for $315, and Gazbini paid $200 for a large Roman urn with brilliant fiery iridescence.

Returns for the sale were $11,277.

LIKES LUDLOW ST. JAIL.

Soldier Would Rather Stay Than Go Out Hunting a Job.

In spite of the offer of Sheriff David H. Knott to induce the army authorities to release him, James Elio, member of the First Field Artillery until he was court-martialed recently, decided yesterday that he would remain in Ludlow Street jail and continue to serve a sentence of twenty-five days' imprisonment.

Elio was under age at the time of the first draft and enlisted in the army. He was one of the soldiers arrested by the provost guard for attempting to break up a Bolshevist meeting in Madison Square Garden, and was court-martialed by his commanding officer and fined $25. He didn't have the money and was sent to Ludlow Street Jail to serve 25 days. Warden Johnson heard Elio's story of what he believed was undeserved punishment for a patriotic act and interested Sheriff Knott, who offered to get Elio released.

Elio told the Sheriff yesterday that he was enjoying life in the prison, with regular hours, good meals and checker games and would rather finish his sentence than be turned out to hunt a job.

Miss Barbara Kerley Makes Debut.

Miss Barbara Kerley, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Gilmore Kerley, made her début yesterday afternoon at a reception which Mrs. Kerley gave at her home, 10 East Eighty-first Street. A dinner for the receiving party and a theatre party followed the reception.

KIRCHWEY DEFENDS U. S. LABOR BUREAU

Assails Statements of M. A. Daly of the Manufacturers' Organization.

SEEKS MOTIVE FOR ATTACK

That of Private Employment Agencies Against Federal Service Obvious, He Says.

The United States Employment Service was attacked from two sources last week. Early in the week it became known that the members of Congress were being circularized by private fee-charging employment agencies, and it was stated by Nathan A. Smythe, assistant director of the service in Washington, that many manufacturers had been approached in an effort to induce them to bring pressure to bear on their local representatives in Congress to cut off the funds under which the Employment Service operates.

One source of this pressure was made known last night by Dr. George W. Kirchwey, Federal Director for New York State, when he called attention to a bulletin signed by Mark A. Daly, General Secretary of the Associated Manufacturers and Merchants of the State of New York. It made the specific plea that the manufacturers petition their Congressmen to stop the proposed appropriations for carrying on the work.

The bulletin, dated Jan. 21, and issued from Buffalo, the headquarters of the association, follows:

> AGAINST CONTINUING U. S. EMPLOYMENT SERVICE!
> While the Executive Committee or the Board of Directors has not yet passed on the question, there is a very general impression that the United States Employment Service should not be continued after the war necessity ceases, and that whatever governmental supervision there may be should be vested in the State. Most people believe that the United States Employment Service has been a failure, and it is contended that its perpetuation merely would be for the purpose of furnishing jobs for organized labor's business agents or social welfare folks who have been in the Government service during the war and haven't had an opportunity to tie up to a new propaganda yet.
> WHAT TO DO.—The thing to do is to write your Congressman at Washington, and also the two United States Senators, William M. Calder and James W. Wadsworth, and ask them to use their influence against the continuation of the United States Employment Service by trying to stop the proposed appropriations (which run into the millions) for "carrying on the work." To be effective, these letters should go to Washington AT ONCE.
> ASSOCIATED MANUFACTURERS AND MERCHANTS.
> MARK A. DALY, General Secretary.

Says Daly's Statements Are False.

Dr. Kirchwey said yesterday that he had been informed of three instances where manufacturers into whose hands this bulletin had come turned it in to the local representatives of the United States Employment Service, with strong expressions of disapproval. The Director felt that these occurrences led to the expectation that the manufacturers of the Sate of New York had a better understanding of the value of the Employment Service in the present emergency than their Secretary, and that it was inconceivable that the intelligent manufacturers of the State would take the position of hostility to the service assumed by Mr. Daly in the bulletin issued by him without the authority of the Executive Committee or the Board of Directors of the organization.

"Mr. Daly apparently holds a brief for the State Employment Service, which was taken over by the United States Government as a war measure," continued Dr. Kirchwey. "Accordingly, he appeals to the members of the association to use their influence to stop the proposed appropriations for carrying on the work of the Federal Service. When he states that 'most people believe that the United States Employment Service has been a failure,' and it is contended that its perpetuation merely would be for the purpose of 'furnishing jobs for organized labor's business agents or social welfare folks, who have been in the Government's service during the war and have not had an opportunity to tie up to a new propaganda yet,' he makes a statement which he must know to be false.

Placed 100,000 in Week.

"The assertion that the United States Employment Service has been made a place of refuge for the business agents of organized labor or for 'social welfare folks' is equally false. The service has, during the last week, directly placed nearly 100,000 persons, a large proportion of them being returned soldiers and sailors, back in industry, and it has through a vast machinery of cooperation with welfare and other governmental agencies and through its widespread propaganda aided in finding positions for many more. The amount of this service can never be accurately estimated, but it is safe to say that the Federal Employment Service is the one agency that stands between the country and a condition of unemployment which would, without its aid, result in a dangerous condition of unrest and demoralization.

"There is no reason to suppose that the need for the service will grow less until the work of reconstruction has been fully accomplished, and no one can tell how long this will take. It would be wiser to leave the academic question as to whether in the long run a Federal or a State employment service will best answer the needs of the community. That the question should be raised in this time of impending distress, with millions of soldiers and war workers still to be replaced in industrial life, indicates a recklessness and insensibility to existing conditions which it will be hard to forgive.

"The motives which govern the opposition of the private employment agencies to the United States Employment Service are perfectly obvious, but those which govern the opposition of the General Secretary of the Associated Manufacturers and Merchants still remain to be disclosed."

Dr. Kirchwey said that he had sent a letter to Carlton A. Chase, President of the Associated Manufacturers and Merchants protesting strongly against the action of Mr. Daly.

MANY MOURN NAT GOODWIN.

De Wolf Hopper Eulogizes His Friend at Services Held by Lambs.

Attended by many prominent theatrical men and women and other friends, funeral services for Nat C. Goodwin, the noted actor who died Friday morning in his apartment at Hotel Claridge, were held at noon yesterday at the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, under the auspices of the Lambs Club. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Nathan Seagle, pastor of St. Stephen's P. E. Church, and the eulogy was delivered by De Wolf Hopper, for many years a warm friend of Mr. Goodwin. He said:

"Nat, I came here to voice my love and sorrow. What a wealth of significance is conjured up by that name. What talents you possessed. Nat, you would go so far out of your way to do something for me or any friend.

"Oft you were swayed by evil influence, but so many times more by the good and the pure. You occupied a pinnacle of success. For a time you weakened from the series of blows rained upon you, but you rallied and came back. Your whole life was such a wealth of nobility.

"Nat, your flesh is gone to the lambs, but the remembrance of your comedy, your pathos, your altruism will live with us forever. We are grateful to you for the lesson you have taught us."

The musical program was rendered by the Lambs Club Quartet, which sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "Just as I Am Without One Plea." Scott Welsh sang "Lead, Kindly Light." The coffin was covered with flowers.

Among those who attended the services were Miss Georgia Gardner, who, it is said, was to have become Mr. Goodwin's sixth wife; Theodore Babcock, who played many years with Mr. Goodwin; George J. Appleton, who for twenty-four years was his manager; Joe Weber, John Shine, Mr. and Mrs. William Collier, Malcolm Bradley, William Elliott, Colonel Shober, Reed Albee, Daniel Frohman, Charles Dillingham, John Golden, W. H. Thompson, Pauline Hall, Rosalind Coughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Goodwin, Edward E. Rice, Mrs. J. V. Melville, Laura Burt, Fred Ward, R. H. Burnside, Major W. McCutcheon, Frank Hatch, George M. Cohan, King Baggot, Thomas Gorman, representing the New York Press Club; W. J. Kelly, Ben Hendricks, Mrs. J. W. Williams, Edgar Selwyn, William Grover.

The body was taken to Roxbury, Mass., the home of Mr. Goodwin's aged parents, and the interment will take place in the Roxbury Cemetery this morning.

FRANCIS LA BAU DEAD.

Traffic Assistant in Eastern Lines Management Victim of Overwork.

Francis LaBau, Traffic Assistant to Regional Director A. H. Smith, and one of the most active executive officers in the management of the railroads of the Eastern region during the last year, died yesterday morning at his home in Tarrytown, N. Y.

Mr. LaBau was born at Rahway, N. J., Dec. 13, 1859, and was educated at the Moravian Institute at Nazareth, Penn. He entered the railway service in 1879 as local way-bill clerk of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Philadelphia Station. He became freight traffic manager of the New York Central lines east of Buffalo May 10, 1907, and on Aug. 1, 1917, he was elevated to traffic manager. Last June he was made the chief traffic officer on the staff of Eastern Regional Director A. H. Smith of the United States Railroad Administration.

Mr. LaBau was a rate genius in railroad traffic matters, and was one of the best informed officials on Eastern conditions.

The funeral will he held at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning at the First Reformed Dutch Church, North Broadway, Tarrytown, N. Y.

COMES FOR SUICIDE'S BODY.

Miss Packwood's Brother Arrives Today—Sister Already Here.

George H. Packwood of St. Louis, brother of Miss Azeele Packwood, who committed suicide on the Palisades, opposite Riverdale, will arrive today to take charge of the body. Mrs. Laveshia Udaele of Buffalo, a sister of the dead girl, arrived yesterday and confirmed the identification of the body at Greenleaf's undertaking establishment at Englewood, N. J.

Mrs. Udaele said that she knew nothing of the reported marriage of her sister. Arleigh Pelham, who acted as the young woman's lawyer and knew her only by the name of Miss Packwood, refused yesterday to discuss the young woman's affairs.

Fritz Walsh, proprietor of a hotel and café at the northern end of Edgewater, said yesterday that he recognized the photographs of Miss Packwood as that of a young woman who used to visit the café occasionally with a tall middle-aged man while on automobile trips. He said that he remembered seeing her only once in the last year or so, and that was about two months ago when she came alone. Other members of the Walsh family corroborated this story.

WON BEAUTY PRIZE; FLED.

Miss Edith Hyde Escaped with Golden Apple and Hid Identity.

Miss Edith Hyde won the golden apple in the beauty contest arranged by a group of prominent artists in connection with the Chu Chin Chow ball, which ended yesterday morning at the Hotel des Artistes, 1 West Sixty-seventh Street. With the coveted prize in her possession, Miss Hyde then fled like a fairy princess from the ballroom, and no one was able to identify the prize winner for beauty.

Miss Hyde left no clue, not even a golden slipper behind her, and the artists who declared her to be the most beautiful girl present were apparently as much mystified as to her identity as the guests at the ball.

Later, it was learned that Miss Hyde lives at 226 West Seventieth Street, and in private life is Mrs. Edith Hyde Robbins, daughter of Raymond Hyde, the landscape painter. In 1914 she divorced her husband, Clarence A. Robbins.

The elimination contest for beauty lasted until the rosy dawn. The winner wore a striking Oriental costume with silver silk pantaloons covered with pearls. When she received the golden apple trophy it is said she protested that there were lots of girls present who were much better looking than she.

J. Montgomery Flagg, Charles Dana Gibson, Harrison Fisher, Penrhyn Stanlaws, and Howard Chandler Christy were the arbiters in the contest.

The Dressmaking and Tailoring Department is prepared to fill orders for gowns of chiffon imprime; rich dinner dresses; one-piece frocks of silk duvetyn; house robes; opera capes; and for the more elaborate wedding gowns and bridesmaids dresses.

Tailor-made and Sports Suits will also be made to order at comparatively reasonable prices.

(Third Floor)

The Ready-to-wear Dress Department

has a selected array of street dresses and afternoon and evening gowns.

The former are variously developed in serge, wool jersey, tricotine and tricolette; the gowns for afternoon or for dinner occasions are of satin, taffeta, Georgette crepe and figured chiffon; while those essentially appropriate for evening are charmingly fashioned of the newer fabrics. The prices range from $25.00 to $125.00.

(Third Floor)

in sports models, as well as in other styles, developed in the wanted materials, including fan-ta-si, kumsi-kumsa, moonglo and pussy-willow are of special interest at the present time, and have been marked at exceedingly reasonable prices.

Seven New Models

in all-wool serge,

will constitute a special offering for to-morrow (Monday)

These models (two of which are suitable for extra sizes) are in navy blue, black, brown, green or tan, and are marked at the exceptionally low price of $6.75

(Third Floor)

A section of the Fourth Floor is reserved exclusively for

The Sale of Vogue Patterns

The Department for Cotton and Linen Frocks

has assembled, in anticipation of the Spring days that are now not so far away, a really charming collection of dainty sunny-weather frocks—an earnest of what the feminine world may look for when the warmer days are actually here.

Wonderfully pretty are these fascinating creations—in which cotton assumes a luxuriousness that may well excite the envy of silk.

Here are simple little morning frocks of organdie, dimity and voile (and some of linen that are distinctly chic); luncheon and apres-midi frocks of supple Georgettes and fine nets, exquisitely hand-embroidered; and, in fact, frocks for every hour of the Spring or Summer day, whether it be spent within doors or without.

A number of these are copies of imported models and may, therefore, be accepted as a reflection of the gay spirit that is beginning to dominate the world of fashion across seas; but many others — no less appealing — are American originations, and vibrant with American verve, piquancy and charm.

(Madison Avenue section of the Third Floor)

features the latest productions from the foremost ateliers.

The materials, chiefly novelty straws, are interwoven in such a way as to give entirely new and charming effects, which are further enhanced by various dainty trimmings.

(Second Floor)

Special Salespeople will, if desired, be detailed to accompany patrons to the Store's various departments; or goods will be assembled for inspection in a private showroom.

The Absorbing Question of Dress

THE pervading spirit of Fashion has vividly impressed itself upon the countlessly lovely articles of dress for women and the younger set.

Inspired by the indications of an unusually prolonged social season, the collection of frocks, suits, wraps and hats continues to be dominated by all the capriciousness and fascination of this supreme arbiter. For street wear, forenoon shopping, or morning musicale; for matinee-luncheon, tea-hour or promenade; for the leisure moments that mark the dividing line between afternoon activities and evening formalities; for mid-season dinners and dances; for the theatre and exclusive supper-parties there are modes eminently appropriate and pre-eminently charming.

BRODIE L. DUKE DIES IN DURHAM

Son of Founder of Tobacco Interests Was Noted for His Matrimonial Ventures.

ONCE IN INSANE ASYLUM

Relatives Tried to Prevent His Last Marriage in 1910, but He Eluded Them.

Brodie L. Duke, son of Washington Duke, founder of the Duke tobacco interests, and brother of James Buchanan Duke and Benjamin N. Duke of New York City, died yesterday at his home in Durham, N. C.

Mr. Duke was born in Durham County, North Carolina, seventy years ago. He gained wide notoriety because of his four matrimonial ventures. In March, 1904, he obtained a divorce from his first wife, Minnie, on the ground of desertion after she had taken up her residence in California for three years. On the night of Dec. 19 of the same years Mr. Duke was married at the Madison Square Presbyterian Church to Miss Alice Webb, the junior partner of the firm of Taylor, Webb & Co., investment brokers, at 208 La Salle Street, Chicago, and they lived for a brief period at the Park Avenue Hotel.

In January, 1905, Mr. Duke was taken from his 50-year-old bride and sent to the psychopathic ward of Bellevue Hospital on the ground that he was irresponsible. A few days later he was removed to Sanford Hall, an asylum for the insane at Flushing. Stocks and bonds amounting to $40,000 had been found on Mr. Duke when he was taken to Bellevue Hospital, and it was also discovered that a few days before his marriage Mr. Duke had made out three promissory notes to Alice Webb, each for $5,000. Sensational developments followed, which resulted in a divorce for Mr. Duke in 1906, after Mr. Duke had obtained his release from the santarium. Mrs. Alice Webb Duke was his third wife, his second marriage, like the first and third, having ended in the divorce courts.

Mr. Duke's fourth marriage at Camden, N. J., June 11, 1910, to Miss Wylanta Roschelle of Durham, N. C., attracted wide attention, because on the previous day, when the marriage was scheduled to take place in Washington, the bridegroom, although he was in the city and had obtained the license, failed to appear until several hours after the time appointed. In the interval, between that hour and the next day, when he was pleading with his fiancée to accept his explanation and have the ceremony performed, the family at Durham was notified and a representative was sent hurrying by automobile from Durham to catch a Washington train. Mr. Duke and Miss Roschelle slipped away from Washington and went to Camden, N. J., where they were married and returned to Washington for their honeymoon and later went to their home in Durham. Miss Roschelle had been in Washington attending a private finishing school. Her age was given as 23 and that of Mr. Duke as 62 years.

Dr. Paul Lindau.

PARIS, Feb. 1, (Havas.)—The death is announced of the German writer, Dr. Paul Lindau. He was 79 years of age.

Paul Lindau was born in Magdeburg, Germany, on June 3, 1839, and was graduated from the Universities of Berlin and Halle. He went to Paris, where for nine years he was correspondent of several German papers. Returning to Germany in 1863, he edited the Düsseldorfer Zeitung for a time, and later took a similar position on the Elberfelder Zeitung. In 1868 he made his bow as a playwright, but brought out nothing of importance until 1872, when he wrote two plays, "In Diplomatischer Sendung" and "Maria und Magdalena," the latter bringing fame to its author. He did not abandon journalism, however, but continued in the dual capacity of playwright and newspaper editor. He visited the United States in the early eighties.

Wallace H. Rowe.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Feb. 1.—Wallace H. Rowe, President of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, died here today. He had been a factor in the steel industry since 1886 when he came to this city from St. Louis, where he had been associated with the wire manufacturing interests of John W. Gates & Co., in the employ of which firm he entered as a clerk in 1883. He was born in St. Louis Feb. 15, 1861.

Mr. Rowe came to Pittsburgh as Treasurer and General Manager of the Braddock Wire Company, which was organized at that time by the leading interests of the St. Louis Wire Mill Company. He was identified with a number of wire manufacturing mergers, including that of the American Steel and Wire Company.

Ex-Sheriff Benjamin Brown.

Ex-Sheriff Benjamin Brown, 79 years old, and for many years interested in the coal business and several banking institutions of Staten Island, died last night at his home, in Stapleton. Born in Manhattan, he had lived on Staten Island for more than sixty years, and had held practically every office in that borough up to Sheriff.

William Baylis.

William Baylis, for many years a member of the New York Stock Exchange, died yesterday at his home, 11 East Sixty-sixth Street. He was born in Brooklyn in 1847, a son of Abraham Burtis Baylis, who was a member of the Stock Exchange from 1841 to 1883, and its President in 1862. Mr. Baylis was educated at the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn and Princeton University and entered his father's firm and became a member of the New York Stock Exchange in 1870. Upon his father's death he formed, with his brother, A. B. Baylis, the firm of Baylis & Co., of which he was the senior member at the time of his death.

TRANSPORT SIBONEY BRINGS 3,336 TROOPS

45th Artillery, Lieut. Col. O'Rear Commanding, Returns from France Intact.

ANALYZED PRISON FARE

Private Paul Says German Bread Contained Powdered Bone, Peelings, and Sawdust.

After lying at anchor in the North River all night, the United States transport Siboney went to Pier 2, Hoboken, yesterday morning and discharged her complement of 3,336 officers and men from France, who were all impatient to get ashore. The Siboney brought back the 45th Artillery, commanded by Lieut. Col. J. T. H. O'Rear, who said that the regiment had landed in France on Oct. 23, nineteen days before the armistice was declared, and the entire unit had returned. Another officer on board was Major Robert M. Hazeltine of New York City, formerly of the New York National Guard.

The 45th Coast Artillery was made up of men from almost every State in the Union, including Chinese, Japanese, Indians, and Mexicans in its ranks. There was also on board the Siboney, Casualty Company 25 of New York, comprising 110 men. Among its officers was Major Monsoi Morris, who lives at the Knickerbocker Club in this city. He went over with the Fifteenth National Guard colored troops and said that they were hard fighters.

Fought with French.

"Last March," the Major added, "we were sent up to make a part of the Fourth French Army at Manahoule. There we were placed in the French formation and were literally a French unit. The only things left to identify them as Americans were their khaki uniforms and Southern dialect.

"We were furnished equipment by the French. We got into the Argonne fighting in March, and remained in the line twenty-six weeks. In that time Colonel Hayward, who commanded the regiment, was recommended for the Legion of Honor, and the regiment received seven blanket citations with the Croix de Guerre from the French.

"For a time," Major Morris said, "I was in charge of an American prison camp at Richelieu, in which we had 822 German officers. I never knew before what the word 'Prussian' really meant, They stated their intention of coming to America, directly the restrictions are relaxed, to evade the heavy taxes in Germany. These officers told me that they had planned this before the allied victory, because whether Germany won or lost it was realized that the taxes would be a heavy burden for many years."

Has Sample of Prison Bread.

Another casual officer on the Siboney was Major William S. Sheets of Silver Springs, Md., who went to France in 1917 at the end of November with the 502d Engineers. There were some New York soldiers on board who had been in German prison camps. One was Jacob Yedinsky, a former newsboy, with a stand at Fourth Avenue and Thirteenth Street, who spent four months in the hospital at Tastaat after he had been captured by the Germans. Private T. E. Paul of Springfield, Mass., another prisoner released when the armistice was signed, brought away a chunk of black bread he was given to eat in the camp. He asked an American doctor to have it analyzed. He said the bread was found to contain powdered bone, potato peelings, barley, and sawdust. There were also several New Yorkers on board who had been wounded or gassed in the fighting at Argonne, Château-Thierry, and St. Mihiel.

The British transport Celtic with 3,114 troops on board, including the 1st Gas Regiment complete and the 308th Sanitary Train, complete, arrived in Quarantine late last night and will dock at Pier 60, North River, this morning. The U. S. battleship Connecticut, with 935 troops, composed of 162d and 490th Aero Squadrons, air service mechanics, and casual companies, is expected to arrive at Hoboken about 11 o'clock today. The United States transport Agamemnon will arrive tomorrow with 2,914 troops on board.

BIELASKI JOINS OIL CO.

Becomes Vice President of Richmond Levering & Co.

A. Bruce Bielaski, former Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, has been elected a Director and Vice President of Richmond Levering & Co., Inc., oil engineers and operators. He will represent that corporation as Director of the Island Oil and Transport Corporation, the Acadia Oil and Gas Corporation, the Eastern Potash Corporation, the San Jacinto Petroleum Corporation, and other enterprises which the Levering concern operates or controls.

Richmond Levering, who recently resigned with the rank of Major, as executive officer of the Chemical Warfare Service, was in close official association with Mr. Bielaski in fighting enemy espionage for many months. Major Levering was appointed special agent of the Department of Justice in 1917, and, under Mr. Bielaski, helped to handle the case of Dr. Walter F. Scheele, the Rintelen and Amsinck cases, and other enemy alien activities, with especial reference to Latin American financial plotting of German agencies. The association of Major Levering with Mr. Bielaski was temporarily closed when the War Department urged Mr. Levering to give his abilities and experience as engineer-chemist and executive to its service.

With the signing of the armistice, Major Levering invited his former Federal chief to be his business partner.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST ACE

Official Record 72 Hun Machines

Will repeat his marvelous story of his thrilling air-fights—some of them 20,000 feet above the earth, at

CARNEGIE HALL, FRI. EVE., FEB. 14th, at 8:30

President Hawley of the Aero Club of America, introducing Col. Bishop at his first lecture in America, said: Ladies and Gentlemen:

"It gives me the greatest pleasure to introduce to you the Ace of Aces. A man who has brought down 72 German machines officially and 110 unofficially. A man who represents the highest type of AIR WARRIOR. A man who has received every decoration and distinction that it is possible for his country to bestow.

"THE AERO CLUB OF AMERICA is also proud to have awarded to Colonel Bishop its SPECIAL WAR MEDAL, for having brought down the greatest number of enemy machines destroyed by any of the allied airmen, and for bringing down 5 machines in thirty minutes, a record unparalleled in the annals of air fighting.

"On the morning he received orders to return to England, he went out for one last fling at the enemy, and before he returned he brought down 5 machines. On landing he said 'Good-bye' to his comrades, jumped into his motor car and caught the boat for England.

"He received the Military Cross, Distinguished Service Order, Victoria Cross and many other distinguished decorations for his many exploits, which surpass the wildest flights of the imagination.

"I take the greatest pleasure in introducing Colonel William A. Bishop of the Royal Flying Corps—the world's GREATEST ACE."

WHAT THE NEW YORK PRESS SAID OF THE LECTURE:

NEW YORK HERALD.
Colonel W. A. Bishop, greatest of all aces, held the audience almost breathless with an account of duels in the air almost without end, but there was no mention of the exploit that won for him the Victoria Cross, the most coveted of all decorations in the imperial service. It was the opening of a lecture tour that will cover the entire country.

NEW YORK SUN.
Colonel Bishop entertained an enthusiastic audience with stories of desperate air battles.

NEW YORK TIMES.
A large audience heard Col. William A. Bishop, "Ace of Aces," the Canadian flier, describe his experiences at the front. Colonel Bishop prefaced his talk with a tribute to the American pilots, whom he described as "unsurpassable," and told of the exploits of three Americans who had been members of his squadron.

NEW YORK WORLD.
Colonel Bishop, the Canadian Ace, thrills Lexington Theatre audience with war tales. While his audience gasped in wonderment, the Colonel gave an account of his manoeuvres in the sun, told how he had played leap frog with the clouds and how every twist and turn of his machine meant one more German sent to his death.

Tickets Now on Sale at Carnegie Hall Box Office, or at office Lee Keedick, 437 Fifth Ave. Mail orders will receive Prompt attention. Seats 50c to $2.00 Plus War Tax.

Col. Bishop will also lecture at the Brooklyn Academy of Music Sat. Eve., Feb. 15, at 8:30. Tickets now on sale at Brooklyn Academy of Music Box Office.

GALLIVAN CHARGES BACKED BY LETTERS

Bay State Congressman Reads Complaint Signed by Forty Officers from France.

TELL OF ARMY FAVORITISM

Accuse Regulars of Being in a Clique and Declare Gen. Wood Was Treated "Like a Spy."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Representative James A. Gallivan of Massachusetts, in the House today, renewed his charges made some weeks ago that National Guard officers were replaced in the last few days of the war to give place and promotion to the "Leavenworth clique."

He read a number of letters received by him from army officers and soldiers commenting upon war conoditions. These letters came to him after he made his first attack upon the conduct of the war by General Pershing.

One letter was signed by forty wounded American officers and sent to Gallivan from a base hospital. This letter said that the American soldiers were forced to fight a military autocracy behind the lines as strong as the autocracy they faced in the Germans. The letter also said that General Wood, when he visited France, was treated "more like a German spy than an officer of the United States."

Mr. Gallivan said that he promised to back up his previous charges by letters, and he proceeded to read one letter after another without giving the name of the writer. In his previous speech he referred to the retirement of Gen. Clarence B. Edwards, who was relieved of command of the 26th Division. He insisted that this one instance of the action of the "military clique" called for a Congressional investigation. The speaker said that he had received more than 400 letters from twenty-nine different States, complaining of military favoritism and which expressed in bitter language "the injustice of promotions and demotions in the American Expeditionary Force."

Mr. Gallivan warned his Democratic colleagues "who are constantly objecting when we endeavor to bring to the attention of the country the complaints of those boys who are coming back," that they were "making the mistake of their political lives in rushing to an imaginary defense of the men who have been guilty of cruel wrongs to our soldier boys."

"It is no party question," said Mr. Gallivan. "And the party which attempts to shield the guilty ones will go down to ignominious defeat."

Thanked by "Forty Officers."

The letter signed by forty officers was as follows:

"We read with joy and thankfulness your speech in the House, in which you discussed the A. E. F. high command, and are writing this to give you a few hints, which if you will follow them up will reveal a state of affairs that no one has dreamed of.

"It has been impossible for any one to criticise. If you did it here you were pro-German, if you said anything 'over there' you were sent home in disgrace. The Czar of Russia in his palmiest days never enjoyed the autocratic power that the Staff enjoyed here and abroad.

"It can be proved on investigation that medical officers were peremptorily ordered (and dared not disobey) to find unfit officers that it was not desirable from the Staff viewpoint to send overseas.

"Brest was unspeakable as a place to keep soldiers. Prison officials here would have been sent to prison for a term of years that would have dared to keep prisoners in such a hole. Yet we dumped our soldiers there out of sanitary camps, where they were well housed and well fed. Thousands fell ill of diarrhoea and dysentery and hundreds from pneumonia because of it.

"At no time was this remedied, yet at all times we had labor battalions there and engineers to do the work, but were too busy building France a port of entry that is excelled by none, to properly house and care for our soldiers. Pages could be written and then half would not be told you. Some of us were sent home that way and found conditions no better than last May and June. Yet the Secretary of War says it was ideal when he saw it a few months ago. We only wish he had to spend the time there under the conditions we did.

Wood Treated with Suspicion.

"When General Wood visited our front, he was treated more like a German spy than an officer of the United States. We have the word of several Colonels that know him well for this. He was hurried through his visit, and ordered back home without allowing him to visit the Italian front, or returning through England as he was invited to do by Lloyd George. General Wood was the idol of the army, officers and men alike, was one of our most efficient officers, yet he was kept in a corner here at home. Who did it?

"You're absolutely right as to the high command. God bless you for it; it is all we can say. The S. O. S. was full of regulars and the front lines were manned by reserve officers, as far as the fighting units went, and by the National Guard. This also applies to the regular medical corps, engineers, infantry, in fact to any branch of the service.

"This became so plain, and the guard and reserves were doing so well, making such a good name for themselves, and the casualty list was showing up so much at home against them, that what did they do? They did this: At the first of the war they (the regulars) were very jealous of the insignia 'U. S.' and the title 'U. S. Officer' in distinguishing them from reserve officers or National Guard officers. But when they saw that all the honor of war was going to be with the reserves and guard, they had an order passed making all of us U. S. Do you see it? We did, we assure you. And as you said, when it was all over but the shouting, our officers were replaced by G. H. Q. pets from the regular service.

Few High Officers Wounded.

"We would like to have a count of deaths and wounds. How many men were wounded above the rank of Captain? The number is negligible. Above those ranks none of us were allowed to soar, no matter how efficient we were, except in a few instances. It is all very well for them to say that an officer commanding an advance should not be exposed to fire, &c. We will say to you, and will prove, that hundreds of men were wounded and killed needlessly, because the officers ordering the advance or change of position were ignorant of the ground to be traversed, or did not know the position of the enemy.

"We can also prove to you that scores of men were sacrificed because the officers in command were ambitious for promotion and ordered needless advances, or those that would show up spectacularly in their favor, which were of no material advantage to the general advance, and would not have been ordered if they had had to risk their own lives with their men and lower officers.

"We know of one National Guard Colonel relieved of his command after a very successful advance and sent back to the S. O. S. because of jealousy.

Medical Reserves Ignored.

"We know that in the Medical Reserve Corps in France very few promotions were made among these devoted men, even after a general order was issued to promote them all. It was the general impression among these officers that this order was never intended to be obeyed, but issued to satisfy the pressure back home from these officers' friends. At least no attention was given to the names after they were sent in, except in a few isolated instances.

"So these men now returning to their homes after a year or more of service in the army are wounded more deeply in their pride than those actually wounded in war. This same rule applies to the line officers of the guard and reserve. In all instances a reserve officer is promoted at the will and pleasure of his superior officer. Consequently he is at his mercy, and must please this officer, no matter how efficient he may be, before he can be promoted. The regulars have us there, too. Their promotion comes to them automatically, for years of service or because they are regulars. Many good, efficient, hard working reserve and guard officers were outranked by some young West Point dude, who has been trained for four years to look on the man in the ranks as his 'oyster,' for no reason except that he was a regular and the other man a reserve or National Guard. The two things, above all, should be changed in our laws.

"In the regular army an officer is not judged for his efficiency as an officer, but for his social qualities. We could name several promotions for that alone, and several efficiency ratings based on that item alone.

"Our part in the great war was a success not because of the skill of our high command, but in spite of it. The American doughboy is the best soldier in the world today, and in our humble opinion has the poorest general officers.

"We have known this all along, but what could we do? We were muzzled as to what we could write home, and it is understood that to report even the grossest inefficiency or a superior officer, meant back home in disgrace for yours. So we have waited, hoping for just such a champion as yourself, that maybe would take the muzzle off and give us a chance to tell what has been done without the chance of dishonorable discharge staring us in the face. If a full, free-without-fear-or-favor investigation be made the American people will get off their knees hero worshipping, and maybe make some changes in the army regulations and laws that will prevent a repetition of this scandal now so well hidden.

"It is true that the S. O. S. were full of highly paid regular officers, while in the lines there was great need of them. Medical officers especially were needed, yet in some places great numbers were kept idle or worse than idle, and could not be assigned to work, or were not, even when asking every day for assignment."

B. R. T. CAN BORROW $3,000,000 AT ONCE

Judge Julius Mayer Also Appoints Ex-Judge Lacombe Master to Consider Claims.

GARRISON AFTER MORE CARS

Tells Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce That Company Must Serve the Public.

An order to enable Lindley M. Garrison, receiver for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit lines, to borrow immediately $3,000,000 on the companies' collateral was signed yesterday by Judge Julius M. Mayer of the United States District Court. Ex-United States District Judge E. Henry Lacombe also was appointed a special master to consider all claims against the companies offered before March 15.

Five other minor orders also were issued to govern the administration of the affairs of the company. One authorized the receiver to agree to terms of settlement in claims for damages arising out of the Malbone Street tunnel disaster, in which eighty-nine lives were lost, although it is specified that he shall not pay out any money in these cases except upon instructions from the court. Judgment in contracts made by the companies, including those with the city, also is conferred upon the receiver within the oversight of the court.

Another order permits the receiver to pay out of the company funds the interest due Feb. 1 on $7,000,000 of the first mortgage 4 per cent. bonds of the Kings County Elevated Railroad Company and on $15,070,000 of the first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds of the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad Company. "Any funds in hand" may be used in these transactions, the total of which disbursement will be about $540,000, and he is permitted to pay back any money withdrawn from the fund for operating expenses.

In the order authorizing the receiver to borrow $3,000,000 the court says that it reserves the right to determine the extent to which and the manner in which the B. R. T. shall be reimbursed for the securities used by the receiver as collateral for loans. The order provides also that if any part of the sum "is lent to any company in which the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is interested, the receiver may take demand obligations secured by the best lien obtainable." Judge Mayer protested vehemently against the request of counsel for banks holding B. R. T. bonds as security for loans that permission be given for the sale of those bonds in cases of necessity. It was decided finally that no bank should be permitted to dispose of the securities held as collateral without obtaining permission of the court, and the receiver was authorized to deal separately with each claim put forward by the banks and trust companies.

Mr. Garrison and Frederick P. Royce, the new general manager of the B. R. T. subway and elevated lines, were the guests of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon yesterday. It was announced there by Mr. Garrison that the immediate purchase of 250 cars of the new types for both subway and surface lines was being considered, and he requested also that a special committee of the cahmber be appointed to study the transit problems in Brooklyn and to recommend improvements to the receiver and his general manager.

"The B. R. T., as you know, is not a street railway or an elevated line," said Mr. Garrison. "It operates, however, some fourteen subsidiary companies. It has about 500 miles of street surface railroads and more than 200 miles of elevated and subway lines. It carried about 771,000,000 passengers this last fiscal year.

"One of its companies in 1913 entered into a contract with the city by which the company put in the existing railroads which it had, the city agreed to build the new lines which were required, the company agreed to aid and extend its existing lines, and they agreed to pool the receipts. The company was to receive its investments with a percentage of interest and to pay the city interest on its investment and to divide the balance half and half between the city and the company. The difficulties which all people in business have found for the last four years have very largely disabled the company, and we are now limping along."

Mr. Garrison told of the efforts to handle the traffic over the Williamsburg Bridge and through the Centre Street loop, and added, "You cannot carry 50,000 persons in an hour as we are doing without some persons having to stand up." A great strain was put upon the resources of the companies, he said, because of the necessity of keeping up this equipment needed only for a few hours of the day.

"We are endeavoring to provide enough money to install more of the large subway cars," he continued, "so that the comfort of the crowds during the rush hour may be increased. We are intimately connected with the surface company, because our finances are interwoven, and we are trying to provide 250 more surface cars, to give better service on the surface lines. This is a public service company and really has no excuse for existence if it does not serve the public."

A transit committee of the Chamber of Commerce that has been in existence for several months will give the receiver the assistance he requested. The members are: Herman A. Metz, George F. Baker, Herbert L. Carpenter, Frederick L. Cranford, E. W. McMahon, Le Roy T. Harkness, Robert Alfred Shaw and William E. Taylor.

Oporto Government Has No Funds.

LISBON, Jan. 31.—Palya Conceiro, head of the Monarchical Government established at Oporto, has demanded a loan from the bankers of that city. In reply the bankers declared that they were without cash and advised the inauguartion of a system of paper money, on which public opinion could first be consulted.

ACCUSES JOHN S. WILLIAMS.

Treadway Says Controller Abused Franking Law in Mailing Charges.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Representative A. T. Treadway of Massachusetts charged in the House today that Controller of the Currency John Skelton Williams had violated the franking laws in sending through the mails a statement which he issued to the press on Jan. 23, asserting that he was the object of propaganda aimed to prevent his confirmation.

"I wish to call attention of the House to a matter worthy of the consideration of this body," said Mr. Treadway, "which appears to be an abuse of the franking privilege on the part of the Controller of the Currency when he sends out to every bank in the United States a circular of notification that he had had some sort of trouble with a newspaper correspondent, and in which circular he supports his claims for reappointment and confirmation upon the part of the Senate.

"This statement reached me this morning from an official of a bank. It has a number on the envelope, showing that it was on the general mailing list of the Controller of the Currency, and I only have had time to read one or two very brief sentences to find that the franking privilege is used for the personal support of the gentleman himself. It seems to me a very improper action on the part of a Treasury official."

Mr. Treadway quoted parts of the statement and commented:

"The gentleman from Illinois a few moments ago called attention to the clogging of the mails from the soldiers. But if the use of the frank of the Controller of the Currency clogs the mails in any way for his personal aggrandizement, cannot he stop it and give our soldier boys a chance to hear from the folks at home?"

COMPLAINS OF REALTY DEAL

Lawyer Says Former Banker Gave Stock to His Depositors.

A. Bertran Samuels, a lawyer of 120 Broadway, yesterday directed the attention of the Mayor's Committee on Taxation to the business operations of John Bozzuffi, of 1,149 First Avenue, formerly a private banker. Mr. Samuels represents the 2,000 depositors of his defunct bank. Bozzuffi was convicted of grand larceny in 1916, and sentence was deferred presumably to give him time to make settlement with his depositors. He is to be sentenced in General Sessions on Feb. 6.

Bozzuffi was declared a bankrupt in August, 1914, and Mr. Samuels said that after the bankruptcy proceedings Bozzuffi had compromised with his clients by forming the Bozzuffi Realty Company, with a capital stock of $205,000, the amount of deposits in his bank. This was preferred stock, and each depositor received shares to the amount of his deposit. It is claimed by the attorney that Bozzuffi, without the authority of the court, issued $25,000 in common stock to himself. The former banker bought preferred stock from the Italian holders, giving in return promissory notes, which, it is claimed, he never paid.

SEEKS AID FOR FRANCE.

John Moffat Tells Need for Continued Relief Work There.

John Moffat, Executive Chairman in America of the French Heroes' Lafayette Memorial Fund, Inc., in an appeal for donations, announced yesterday that the fund will continue its war relief work in Europe, and particularly in Belgium, France and Italy, where there is urgent need for some time.

He said that the fund is maintaining homes and schools for orphans in France. One of these schools is at Chavaniac, the birthplace of Lafayette. The funds are also used in supplying food for wounded men in military hospitals in the war zone. Another urgent work is the caring for large numbers of prisoners, destitute civilians and the army of occupation in the devastated sections of Italy.

Other needs for relief work, Mr. Moffat said, are developing daily in the stream of repatriated military and civilian prisoners returning from Germany, of hundreds of thousands of refugees and appalling numbers of tubercular cases. This disease, he said, is becoming widespread, and remedial measures must be taken if these lives are to be saved. A tuberculosis commission has been appointed by France, and it invites American collaboration. France will pay half the running expenses of these institutions to be established to treat tubercular cases.

Mr. Moffat said that France is willing to give 5[illegible],000 francs toward establishing a tuberculosis dispensary in Paris to check the disease among women and children, as well as soldiers. They also are trying to help the Belgians who are broken in health, and to aid them in re-establishing their homes, schools and places of business.

In emphasizing the need of continued relief from America, Mr. Moffat said that Great Britain and France have borne the brunt of the relief work since 1914, and that we must not believe that with peace comes the end of suffering. Contributions are requested to be sent to James A. Blair, Jr., Treasurer, 2 West Forty-fifth Street, this city.

NEW YORK PLAYERS BEATEN AT TENNIS

Miss Bjurstedt and Alexander Defeated by Mrs. Wightman and Johnson.

MATCH PLAYED IN BOSTON

Miss Goss and Hall Lose Both Matches in Intercity Contest at Longwood Cricket Club.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 1.—New York's mixed doubles lawn tennis players were not equal to the task of beating the teams at the Longwood Cricket Club's covered courts here this afternoon, Boston winning, three matches to one. The match was virtually decided when Mrs. George W. Wightman and Harry C. Johnson, former mixed doubles champions and winners of two Longwood championships, beat Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Frederick B. Alexander, 6—3, 6—2.

Mrs. Wightman and Mr. Johnson later beat Miss Eleanor Goss and Walter Merrill Hall of New York in a three-set match, this pair having been beaten previously by Miss Marion Zinderstein and Nat W. Niles, who in turn lost their final to Miss Bjurstedt and Alexander in straight sets.

Mrs. Wightman and her partner played the most consistent tennis of the afternoon, lapsing for a time in the second set against Miss Goss and Hall, but making a finish in the third and deciding set. Miss Bjurstedt did not attain her usual speed and accuracy in her first match, in which Alexander, while brilliant at times, did not show his usual steady game. Miss Eleanor Goss, who made her first appearance here today, participated in many brilliant rallies at the net, but her back court game was not too good.

In her matches, Mrs. Wightman played some exceptionally fine tennis. She and Johnson won four of their first five games against Miss Bjurstedt and Alexander, getting the break in two deuce games. In the second set both teams were going fast, but all was over when with a 4 to 2 lead the Bostonians won an 18 point game and then ran out at 40—15 in the final game.

Miss Zinderstein and Niles did not do much against Miss Bjurstedt and Alexander, the New Yorkers losing the opening game in the first set and then taking the next four. In the second set, the Boston players won two games and then lost the next four.

The summary:

Miss Marion Zinderstein and Nat W. Niles, Boston, beat Miss Eleanor Goss and Merrill Hall, New York, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2.

Mrs. George W. Wightman and Harry C. Johnson, Boston, beat Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Fred Alexander, New York, 6—3, 6—2.

Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Fred Alexander, New York, beat Miss Marion Zinderstein and Nat W. Niles, Boston, 6—4, 6—3.

Mrs. George W. Wightman and Harry C. Johnson, Boston, beat Miss Eleanor Goss and Walter Merrill Hall, New York, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

ANDY KELLY ENTERS RACE.

Holy Cross Star Will Compete In Millrose Games.

Andy Kelly, former Holy Cross College star, and holder of the 800-yard indoor run mark, has entered for the special 70 yards (scratch) and 300 yards (handicap) events which will be part of the program for the annual Millrose A. A. athletic meet in Madison Square Garden Feb. 25. Kelly was recently honorably discharged from the Army, where he attained the rank of Captain. He is a student at Boston College.

Kelly's appearance in the Millrose meet will be in the nature of a comeback effort. He will be making his first appearance since he entered upon his war duties.

DAUBERT TRADED AT LAST.

Herrmann Says Deal is Made, but Suit is Still Pending.

Jake Daubert has finally been traded to Cincinnati for Shortstop Bill Kopf and Outfielder Griffith. According to a report from Cincinnati yesterday President Ebbets said that the deal would not be completed until Daubert had withdrawn his suit against the Brooklyn club. The said suit for $2,150 is now awaiting a hearing. It is also likely that Daubert has some assurance that a satisfactory adjustment will be made. The contract in question is one of those iron-clad affairs which the club owners distributed during the Federal League war.

The passing of Daubert from Brooklyn is the beginning of a general shake-up of first basemen which was started by the trouble between Hal Chase and the Cincinnati Club. Chase will not play again in Cincinnati and if he is exonerated from the charges against him by the National League he will probably go to the Giants, while it would not be surprising to see Walter Holke with the Dodgers.

CRESCENTS BOW TO ARMY.

Cadet Five Beats New Mooners by Score of 24 to 13.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Feb. 1.—The Army's basket ball quintet beat the Crescent A. C. five this afternoon in one of the fastest and most interesting games ever played in the big gymnasium. The final score read Army 24, Crescent A. C. 13. The Army's passing and floor work was finely executed. Johnston, a new man, proved a find as a forward, registering five of the Army's field baskets.

The lineup:

Army, (24.)	Position.	Cres. A. C., (13.)
Cranston	R. F.	McTigue
Johnston	L. F.	Heath
McQuarrie	C.	Ashmead
Barrick	R. G.	Stewart
Clatterboss	L. G.	Austin

Goals from field—Johnston, (5,) McQuarrie, (2,) Clatterboss, (2,) Daniel, McTigue, Heath, (3,) Austin. Goals from foul—Cranston, (3,) McQuarrie, Heath, (3.) Substitutions—Pfeiffer for Cranston, Daniel for Pfeiffer, McTigue for Ashmead, Ashmead for Stewart, Nicklas for McTigue, Hurten for Austin.

Referee—Mr. Deering, Manhattan. Umpire—Mr. Kirberger. Time of halves—20 minutes.

N. Y. U. FIVE IS SWAMPED.

Annapolis Team Buries Violet Under 50 to 15 Score.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 1.—Winning their fourteenth consecutive game the naval basket ball team defeated New York University here this afternoon 50 to 15. For five minutes at the opening of the first period the New Yorkers put up a stiff defense, and the midshipmen had much difficulty in passing beyond the first half dozen points scored.

The first half resulted 2 to 6 in favor of the Navy. Deringer played a particularly fine game as the pivot of the team play, and in following up, and Lewis and Byerly were fast and accurate. Kram was the only New Yorker to score more than once from the court and the second of his three goals followed a brilliantly executed dribble from past mid-court.

The lineup:

Naval Acad. (50.)	Position.	N. Y. U. (15.)
Lowes	L. F.	Marin
Lewis	R. F.	Kram
Deringer	C.	Delaney
Couble	L. G.	Willintz
Walters	R. G.	Brown

Field goals—Naval Academy, Deringer, 4; Ryerly, 4; Lewis, 4; Walters, 3; Lowes, 2; Bolton, 2; Spencer, Thomas, Couble. New York University, Kram, 3; Marin, Delaney, Brown. Foul goals—Deringer, 6; Marin, 3. Referee—Mr. Grove, St. John's. Time of halves—20 minutes.

Miss Boyle Wins Swim Title.

Miss Charlotte Boyle, woman national short distance swimming champion, last night annexed the Metropolitan A. A. U. indoor 100-yard title when she defeated a representative field over this distance in the pool of the Y. W. H. A. Miss Boyle, winning by a margin of about three yards, swam the distance in 1:12 3-5. Miss Ethelda Bleibtry was second, and Miss Rita Greenfield third.

WHITE BIRDS FLY AT N. Y. A. C. TRAPS

Chairman Corbett Introduces New Event in Shoot at Travers Island.

George J. Corbett, Chairman of the Shooting Committee of the New York Athletic Club, is one of those "live wires" who are always trying to dig up new stunts. The latest innovation in shooting at Travers Island appeared on the program yesterday and judging by the way the new shoot was received by the field of forty-eight gunners, it is going to be one of the most popular of the season.

The event has been called the Monthly Ghost Trophy. Sometime during the shoot, a white target is thrown from each set of traps, making four targets thrown during the afternoon. The contestants do not know when the white targets are going to be thrown. If the gunner manages to break one of the white targets he is eligible to shoot in the Ghost Trophy event at the end of the month. If he misses, he is fined 25 cents and cannot compete in the shoot at the end of the month, unless he manages to hit a white target later in the month.

Three hit and one missed the white targets yesterday. The gunner who failed was G. W. Derrick. He missed on Trap No. 4. On Trap No. 1 the white target fell to W. Bauer's steady aim. J. McLinn was successful on Trap 2 and the white "bird" thrown from Trap No. 3 was hit by A. W. Walter.

W. B. Ogden won the high scratch prize of the day. He took the event with a total of 95 out of a possible 100 targets. W. R. Delehanty won both the high handicap and the Travers Island cups.

SAYS FIGHT WAS A FAKE.

Fulton Now Cries That Jack Dempsey "Crossed" Him at Newark.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—Fred Fulton authorized the statement that his fight with Jack Dempsey at Harrison Park, New Jersey, July 27, 1918, was a prearranged affair to the extent that he and Dempsey were to box an eight-round "exhibition," and that Dempsey won in the first round by "double crossing" him. Fulton said he wanted a chance to fight the winner of the proposed Willard-Dempsey match.

BOXING BILL UP TUESDAY.

Senator Gibbs's Measure Provides for 10-Round Decision Bouts.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Senator Leonard W. H. Gibbs didn't discuss his boxing bill at length with Governor Smith here today.

"I will discuss boxing with him when we get back to Albany. My bill will be offered in the Senate next Tuesday afternoon," said Senator Gibbs.

Senator Gibbs' bill, contrary to reports, provides for official decisions. The limit of rounds is set at ten, and it provides for a one-man commission, and also that boxing be held only in buildings maintained for athletics.

To The Woman Who Understands!

SAYS Dr. Frank Crane, who has the gift of speaking our unspoken thoughts: "A woman's specialty is understanding. That is, understanding men. A woman gets to know you, by and by, better than you know yourself. Back of every man there stands, somewhere, the woman who understands."

THIS advertisement is addressed to The Woman Who Understands; who understands that a man sometimes doesn't understand that Smartness and Success live in the same block; who understands when and how to sow the seed of "spruce-up!" in a man's mind; who understands that cotton may go by the name of wool, but knows that it won't get by with him, if she has anything to say about it; who understands linings and seams and buttonholes and matching of colors; who will understand, and can tactfully guide a man to an understanding of the finer points of a Stein-Bloch Suit or Overcoat, from its well-cut lines to its well-wearing linings; who is ready to accompany him to the John David Shop to look and listen and counsel.

WE invite The Woman Who Understands and The Man She Understands to meet The Merchant Who Understands the points-of-view of them both.

BROOKLYN'S BEST KNOWN PIANO HOUSE.
ONE PRICE—NO COMMISSIONS.

Constructive Value

It is not reasonable to suppose that people generally know anything about value in the actual construction of a Piano.

They may know when the tone pleases or when the case design suits their taste.

But that the Piano is correctly constructed to give music of permanent art value and worth the money paid for it, is something left almost entirely to faith in the salesman or the concern selling.

CHARLES A. STERLING,
Who founded the Sterling business in 1866, the phenomenal success of which is a lasting monument to his sturdy New England character.

There are safeguards, however, which protect the purchaser of either a high or low priced instrument.

They are the established value of the piano and the known reputable character of the maker or seller.

STERLING Pianos

have values as established as Government bonds, and have been tested by years of service in thousands of homes.

The big or little amount you feel justified in spending for an instrument should in no way alter the honest value your money purchases.

Our small priced instruments honestly give you the same relative value that the larger priced ones give.

Your dollar buys a full dollar's worth with the guarantees, the service and the backing of the same company.

You pay one price and this price is the same to every one, no extras of any kind and no commission of any kind allowed to any one, nothing hidden and nothing to hide.

It will cost you nothing nor obligate you in any way to visit the best known Piano House of Brooklyn. If not convenient to call at once, let us mail you some interesting Piano Literature free.

WHICH MOTOR TRUCK SHALL IT BE?

A Form That Will Prove of Greatest Value to Intending Purchasers of Trucks. It enables You to Analyze Every Truck Proposition With Mathematical Accuracy. Send for it!

As it is now, most motor trucks are sold on "salesmanship"—the buyer learning by experience which truck is best suited to his needs and which represents the best value at its price.

Obviously, this is an expensive way to separate the sheep from the goats in motor trucks.

We have devised a unique form which eliminates guesswork and makes the proposition of truck-buying a matter of logical reckoning, much as one would go about totaling a column of figures.

We will gladly send it without cost or obligation to you. No intending truck buyer should be without it. Write, call or telephone.

The Big Fellow at The Automobile Show

Is the burly, broad-shouldered, powerful Goodrich Black Safety Tread tire.

Look him over closely. Notice his barred cross-tie safety tread. A real non-skid—not a fad pattern, or an advertising design. It stops a slip forward and sidewise.

Study carefully the extra width of the Black SAFETY TREAD; how it extends up beneath the side strip; and extra safety bars lay along the edge of it.

The extra bars under weight and pressure put more thickness of rubber, and more anti-skid clutch on the pavement.

Goodrich's Big Fellow Tire—the 1919 word in tire development—by sheer force of size and toughness gives you service value throughout a long mileage.

AUTO SHOW OPENS WITH RECORD CROWD

Never Such Attendance Before on Opening Night—58 Makes of Cars on Exhibition.

IN TWO SECTIONS THIS YEAR

Last Word in Mechanical Refinements and Luxury at Garden and 69th Armory.

New York's 1919 Automobile Show opened with enthusiasm in Madison Square Garden and the 69th Regiment Armory last night. Never has a motor car exhibit in the city had a larger attendance on the first night, and it was easy to see that the majority of visitors were genuine seekers for the latest improvements in design and mechanism.

Long before the opening of the doors at 8 o'clock, Madison Avenue in front of the Garden was crowded for the entire width of the sidewalk, and at the Twenty-sixth Street corner the line extended half way down the block toward Fourth Avenue. The women were as numerous as the men, and many soldiers and sailors were in the crowd. Scores of automobiles were parked around the square early in the evening, and the appearance in and around the Garden equalled that of the most successful Society Day in former exhibits.

The Decorations Artistic.

Both buildings have been decorated in an elaborate and patriotic manner, and no automobile show ever held in the Garden was ever made more attractive. The Garden arena is covered with pale blue bunting, and from the girders are suspended a row of artistic chandeliers interspersed with American flags and green foliage. In the armory an arbor effect of trellised vines and flowers has been artistically worked out, but the chief feature is the immense sunburst of red, white and blue forming a vast semi-circle extending high up the ceiling from the rear wall.

In the two buildings are displayed fifty-eight makes of cars including all the best known models. Thirty-two of these are in the Garden, occupying all the arena floor and the concert and exhibition halls. In their many types of open and closed cars they aggregate over 150 machines. A visitor last night who has attended all the shows here since the first one in 1900 said that he had never before seen such perfection in body design, neatness of finish and richness of appointments as in the present show. Every car has been polished so that it fairly shines.

One feature in the Garden is the large number of open chassis bodies exhibited, conveniently arranged so that every detail of the motor and mechanism may be studied with the utmost ease. Among the makes showing these chassis exhibits are the Oldsmobile, Chandler, Marmon, Maxwell, Cadillac, Studebaker, Buick, Daniels, and Oakland. Those of the Cadillac and Studebaker cars are finished in white, and are magnificent specimens of automotive engineering and factory workmanship.

While the closed cars have been growing proportionately in popularity, especially the comfortable sedans, the exhibit of open models, both of small roadsters and large touring cars, is fully as large as that of the closed types. A bridal blue roadster, just roomy enough for two and sentimentally decorated with white ribbon bows in the Buick booth, attracted attention.

The Maxwell displays a snappy bright red roadster, and the Stutz has a typical speedster in the same color. In the Daniels exhibit is a sport touring car, finished in white with a golf bag attachment above the running board.

The Packard and Dodge Brothers cars, facing the main entrance, make a fine appearance, the Packard twin-six town cars representing virtually the last word in luxurious appointments. The sedan and coupé in the Pierce-Arrow exhibit are of the same luxurious finish and appointments, and a similar high standard in design and equipment is true of the large Locomobile exhibit.

The Willys-Knight and Overland cars, comprising some of the most popular of the four-cylinder makes, show several minor improvements over former years. Other cars worthy of notice in the Garden are the Mitchell, Winton, Haynes, Peerless, National, Hudson, Essex, Mercer, Velie, Reo, and Cole. The Essex, which is exhibited with the Hudson in the Concert Hall, is the baby car of the show, being the only brand-new make of the year. It is a four cylinder type of moderate price, and its trial trips have proved that it is easy to handle and economical of operation.

In the armory twenty-six different makes are shown, representing more than one hundred types of open and closed bodies. In the armory also will be found the only foreign made car in the show, a magnificent Rolls-Royce, one of the best English built cars. No Rolls-Royce motors have come to America for two or three years. The one on exhibit has been entirely overhauled and fitted with a coupé collapsible body by the Brooks-Ostruk Company. Its price is $14,000, being the most expensive car in the entire show.

The same firm of body builders show what might be termed a camouflaged Pierce-Arrow car with a radiator of the well-known Italian Fiat type. This is a $9,000 car.

In the Armory Exhibit.

The chassis exhibit in the armory is fully as interesting as in the Garden, among the makers showing the open-frame bodies being the Hupmobile, Nash, Elgin, American, Chalmers, Phianna, and Liberty. The Franklin, which has a rich display of sedans, has one of its six-cylinder, water-cooled motors mounted on a stand, which attracted the interest of the technically minded motorists.

In addition to the cars in the Garden, the galleries contain a multitude of accessories, more than 200 exhibitors displaying necessary and luxurious additions to add to the convenience and sometimes to the expense of motoring. In carburetors and devices for getting the greatest possible efficiency from gasoline some new devices of interest will be found.

Among the early visitors was Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, America's premier "ace," who has just arrived from France. He is officially credited with having brought down twenty-six German airplanes, and the automobilists are preparing to signalize his safe return to America with a dinner in his honor tomorrow night in the Waldorf-Astoria, given under the auspices of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association.

Before Captain Rickenbacker became an airman he was one of the most intrepid racing motorists in the country. The Rickenbacker dinner will be the greatest banquet event of the show week, and more than one thousand acceptances have been received.

The show will be closed today, but beginning tomorrow it will be open every day and night during the week. On Monday morning, Feb. 10, the second stage of the show will be opened with a week's exhibit of motor trucks and smaller commercial vehicles.

OUR DIVISIONS LOST 56,592 IN BATTLE

ties in several regiments may equal the full strength.

The artillery regiments escaped with relatively light losses. In some cases machine-gun battalions suffered severely, and there are a number of the divisional engineer regiments that paid a heavy toll for their place in the front lines.

In announcing the casualty figures for the 35th Division, (Missouri and Kansas National Guard,) which have been a subject of public speculation, General March said fifteen divisions in France had sustained losses greater than the 35th. In that list the 92d (National Army negroes) Division, also reported to have suffered severely, stood twenty-eighth and the 93d Division stood twenty-fifth.

Do Not Include Wounded.

THE NEW YORK TIMES herewith presents the tables made public by General March showing the battle deaths, missing and prisoners for each of the thirty combat divisions. They give totals of the casualties which put soldiers permanently out of action. They do not include wounded figures, as the lists of those slightly wounded are still incomplete.

The totals given are about 95 per cent. complete for each division. A few new reports of casualties are still coming in, but most of the changes since Jan. 10, when the tabulation was begun, are decreases in the missing in action figures and corresponding increases in the other totals. This change is due to the release of prisoners and reports of deaths by eyewitnesses. The total figure for missing has now been reduced to close to 10,000.

Field signal battalions, ambulance companies and trains are not included in the tabulation of the divisions. The record of units outside of divisions will be available in a few days. This addition will have a relatively small effect on the totals here given.

The recording, classification and initial tabulation of these figures were done by the Medical Records Section, Division of Sanitation, of the Medical Department.

Summary by Divisions.

A summary of the casualty tables giving the classification of losses by divisions follows:

TO KEEP UP NATIONAL GUARD

Small Appropriation Made Pending Return of Men from Europe.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—An appropriation of $3,000,000 to maintain the National Guard at a strength of 106,000 officers and men during the next fiscal year was tentatively approved today by the House Military Affairs Committee.

In the original estimates for the coming year, the war department submitted merely a tentative figure of $100 for the National Guard, to keep this appropriation alive, and when General March was before the committee he explained that as the bulk of the old National Guard was still overseas, it was impossible to form any accurate estimate as to what the future of that branch of the military establishment would be.

In approving the $3,000,000 appropriation, committee members followed the recommendation of Brig. Gen. John W. Heavey, Chief of the Militia Bureau, who stated that the amount would be sufficient because it was unlikely the National Guard, after being discharged from Federal service could be recruited up to 106,000 officers and men, the minimum provided for under the National Defense act, before the next fiscal year was nearly over.

General Heavey said that the expense of maintaining the National Guard at the maximum strength of 424,000 men, allowed by the National Defense act, would be about $190,000,000 a year, but that this would be reduced to $55,000,000 if the War Department would transfer to it needed supplies and equipment from its surplus supplies.

GAIN $10,800,000 IN GOLD RESERVES

Reserve Banks Also Report Decreases in War Paper and Acceptances on Hand.

FEWER NOTES OUTSTANDING

Cash Reserves at the Same Time Show a Substantial Increase—Gain in Capital.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Substantial liquidation of war paper and other discounts, also further reduction in outstanding note circulation, are indicated in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly bank statement issued as at the close of business on Jan. 31, 1919. The banks' gold reserves show an increase of $10,800,000, largely through gold deposits made by the Treasury. War paper on hand decreased $140,600,000, other discounts $20,300,000, and acceptances $3,800,000.

On the other hand, Government short-term securities went up $119,100,000, the increase representing certificates of indebtedness taken by two banks to cover temporary advances to the Government. A decrease of $81,500,000 in Government deposits is largely offset by a gain of $65,700,000 in members' reserve deposits. This, together with the larger "float," accounts for a decline of $20,100,000 in net deposits.

The week saw a further decrease of $15,800,000 in Federal Reserve note circulation as against a simultaneous gain of $11,300,000 in cash reserves. Accordingly, the banks' reserve percentage shows a rise from 52.3 to 53 per cent. Aggregate liabilities on Federal Reserve Bank notes in circulation increased $2,600,000.

Increases of capital and surplus of existing members, chiefly in the Boston and Chicago districts, account largely for the increase of $93,000 in paid-in capital shown.

HOLD LESS WAR PAPER.

Member Banks Show Decrease of $25,800,000 in Liberty Bonds.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Moderate reductions in the holdings of United States war obligations, and a slight increase in the amount of paper secured by such obligations, are indicated in the consolidated weekly statement of the Federal Reserve Board, showing the condition on Jan. 24 of 768 member banks in about 100 leading cities. Principal changes affect, among others, the following items: United States bonds other than circulation bonds (chiefly Liberty bonds) decreased $25,800,000; Treasury certificates decreased $9,800,000; loans secured by Government war obligations, (war paper,) increased $6,600,000; other loans and investments decreased $45,300,000.

Practically no change is shown in the ratios of the aggregate holdings of United States war obligations and war paper to total investments, which work out at 25 per cent. for all reporting banks, 26.5 per cent. for the banks in the twelve Federal Reserve cities, and about 30 per cent. for the New York City banks.

All classes of deposits show decreases; Government deposits showing a decline of $169,600,000 at all reporting banks, and an even larger decline at the banks in the twelve Federal Reserve cities; all other demand deposits (net,) a decrease of $85,900,000, and time deposits, a decrease of $18,000,000.

Reserve balances with the Federal Reserve banks fell off $23,400,000 and cash in vault $11,700,000.

Speaks on Accident Prevention.

Under the auspices of the Safety Institute of America a series of lectures was begun yesterday in the assembly room of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Compny's building, 1 Madison Avenue, for the purpose of preventing accidents to employes in industrial pursuits. These lectures are to be held on alternate Saturday mornings hereafter until June 7. The lecturer yesterday was Dr. F. C. Smith, Surgeon United States Public Health Service, who devoted himself to pointing out the construction of and prevention of accidents to the breathing apparatus, the eye, and the digestive system.

RELIEF NEEDS GROW WITH THE WAR'S END

Organizations Speed Peace Measures to Meet Increasing Demands from Abroad.

FRENCH BABIES LACK MILK

Hundreds of Children Reported Dying Because of Its Scarcity in Paris.

The outstanding feature of the reports of the various war philanthropies during the last week is the fact that in no cases have the needs of the people of Europe abated, but that everywhere the demands for relief grow greater and greater. Whereas, during the war the needs of the soldier were paramount, now the civilian demands more and more attention. For instance, it is reported that hundreds of children are dying in Paris because of the lack of milk, which is so rare a commodity that not even the rich can purchase it. What little there is, is kept for the sick and for the children. Even condensed milk is scarce, and Dr. H. Mery, Professor of the Faculty of Medicine of Paris, who is connected with the Children's Hospital, reports:

"The shortage of milk is so great that the hospitals are ordered to prescribe for economical, not medical, reasons a water and vegetable soup diet. We have been compelled to diminish the milk rations of infants from 1 to 2 years old, with the result that these children diminish in weight. When you thank in our name the American Committee of Free Milk for France for all it has already done, pray attract its attention to the urgency of its continued help in this time in our history, when the milk shortage is greater than ever and the mortality is being augmented on this account."

The milk being sent by the American Committee of the Free Milk for France Fund, which is sent in dried form, through the contributions of Americans to the fund, in addition to being used for the children and in the hospitals generally, is also needed for invalids weakened through malnutrition and other causes during the four years of conflict, and who are only prevented from becoming tuberculosis patients by the timely intervention of the food. It has also been of inestimable use to nurses who have broken down as the result of their labors, to the very old, to young mothers, and to prisoners of war who have only just been returned to France in an emaciated condition.

The Red Cross continues to develop its activities along peace lines. The Motor Corps has just been put on a permanent basis, with Dr. Dorothy C. Smyley in command of the forty-three chapters of the Atlantic Division. The services of the corps will be available to the State and national authorities in all emergencies.

Sell Unclaimed Mail.

The Red Cross Shop at 587 Fifth Avenue has just opened a Post Office Department, at which "unclaimed" mail is being sold. Yvette Guilbert will act as salesgirl in the bargain department tomorrow. Among the articles recently received at the shop are a number of handsome silk bags, which were made by wounded soldiers in the military base hospital at Lakewood, N. J. Each bag has a card giving the name of the soldier who made it, with a brief account of how he was wounded. The proceeds of these sales will go directly to the soldier.

Miss Flora G. Sell, Dietitian of the Atlantic Division, is now engaged in teaching a class in cooking for the Polish Gray Samaritans. Thirty young women in all, upon finishing the course, will go to Poland for relief work among the stricken population.

For the assistance of a destitute civilian population, America's Allies Co-operative Committee, of which Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard is Chairman, is making an especial drive. At the headquarters, 299 Fifth Avenue, help is needed in making the 10,000 comfort bags which the committee wishes to send to the women of the devastated regions. Each of the bags contains a warm garment, such as a sweater, a shawl, or a skirt; or a chemise, an apron, a waist, or a pair of stockings. Added to these are a pair of scissors, needles, a spool of thread, one black and one white ball of darning cotton, a thimble, soap, wash cloth, comb or brush, paper of pins, safety pins, hairpins, buttons, sheets of writing paper, pencil and envelopes. Household articles are also included, such as spoons, knives, forks, paring knife, candles, cake chocolate, American flag, mirror, pair of shoestrings, a set of knitting needles, string, and toilet powder. Donations of any kind, money, household articles, and clothing, will be received and forwarded by the committee's Shipping Department, 1 East Thirtieth Street.

French Children Made Happy.

Last December many thousand American children filled Christmas coin carrier paper stockings for the benefit of children in Northern France, and were thus able to send Christmas joy to numerous French children who for four years had known no Christmas whatsoever. What the result was in one instance is indicated in a letter sent to the American Committee for Devastated France from the American Woman's Hospital:

> Long shall we remember that midnight procession through the beautiful chateau grounds, each one of our staff carrying a lantern on her way to the old eleventh century church on Christmas Eve. Nor shall we forget that sweetly impressive service conducted by the curé, whom we all love for his devotion to our sick people. A great delight to us were the old French Christmas hymns and the "Adeste Fideles." After the midnight mass we returned to the hospital for supper and for our tree, and for the distribution of our gifts from home.
> Christmas morning there fell flakes of snow softly covering the Noel roses.
> The old familiar Noel hymn was sung in French by the staff surrounding the Christmas tree, and also by the patients in their beds. Gifts were then given—stockings, shawls, and underwear, toys and sweets.
> One small boy's remark translated into proper American was, "Golly, I'm glad I was operated on here this Christmas"; and one old woman's remark, "Thank you, I thought God had left us since the war began," are all the appreciation needed for the far-off givers. One visitor donated a phonograph, so there was music for ears that had heard only the boom of cannon.
> To those who say France is not appreciative, let us quote: "From life we get only what we give."

Invitations have been sent out for an important meeting of the Serbian Relief Committee of America, to be held at the residence of William Jay Schieffelin, 5 East Sixty-sixth Street, on Monday afternoon, Feb. 3, at 4:30 o'clock. Brief addresses will be made on conditions in Serbia and how best to meet its immediate needs. The speakers will be Abram I. Elkus, former Ambassador to Turkey; Dr Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews; Professor M. I. Pupin, Honorary Consul General of Serbia; Miss Helen Losanitch of Belgrade, Serbia, and others.

Another letter emphasizing the needs of the army since the signing of the armistice is the following, received by the Lafayette Fund:

2 Place de Rivoli,
Paris, Jan. 9, 1919.

Miss A. E. Marks, the Lafayette Fund,
New York City.

My Dear Miss Marks:

I have to thank you for your kind letter of Dec. 5, inclosing detailed list of 47 bales of Lafayette kits.

It is impossible to tell you how gratefully these kits are received or what comfort they bring to the men during this fifth Winter of the war. Notwithstanding the armistice, the armies of occupation are still suffering their hardships of Winter campaign and until they are demobilized require the same attention that has been given them heretofore. I beg you to send all the kits that you can possibly find. Very sincerely yours,

(Signed) H. O. BEATTY,
Member of the Commission.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—There is a well-defined disturbance over Utah with a slow eastward movement, the general depression covering the Southwest and extreme Central West, where there were quite general rains and snows that also extended eastward into the plains States and Eastern Texas. There was no other precipitation of consequence except rains in the Florida Peninsula.

Except in the extreme Southwest and from the upper Ohio Valley eastward and northeastward, temperatures are above the seasonal average, decidedly so in the plains States and the Northwest.

Rain will fall in the East Gulf States, extending Sunday night and Monday into the South Atlantic States and Tennessee. In the Ohio Valley and the lake region fair weather Sunday will be followed by snow Monday, except probably rain in the Ohio Valley. In New England and the Middle Atlantic States the weather will be fair Sunday, followed by increasing cloudiness Monday.

It will be somewhat colder Monday in the Lower Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the East Gulf States.

Winds for Sunday and Monday along the North Atlantic Coast will be strong northwest Sunday, diminishing by night, fair; Middle Atlantic Coast, diminishing northwest winds, becoming northeast and east Sunday night, fair; South Atlantic Coast, moderate northeast and east, fair, except rain Sunday night and Monday in the southern portion.

FORECAST TODAY AND MONDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, New England, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Sunday. Monday increasing cloudiness.

Western New York—Fair Sunday. Monday cloudy, probably snow in the western portion and by night in the eastern portion.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	21	29	4 P. M.	19	31
6 A. M.	17	26	6 P. M.	16	29
9 A. M.	14	28	9 P. M.	12	26
12 M.	15	31	11 P. M.	11	25

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 29; for the corresponding date last year it was 18; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 30.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 28; at 8 P. M. it was 27. Maximum temperature, 34 degrees at 2 P. M.; minimum, 24 degrees at 9 A. M. Humidity, 46 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 47 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.96 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.97 inches.

Education Notes.

Men teachers in the elementary schools have formed the Elementary School Men's League. Its President is John B. Cottrell of P. S. 19, Brooklyn. It will hold a meeting in Terrace Garden at 4 P. M. on Feb. 7.

A resolution has been adopted by the School Garden Association requesting the appointment of a director of school gardens in order that the school garden work may be more efficiently organized.

The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund have authorized the Controller to derive revenue from the following plots of ground turned over by the Board of Education as no longer required for school purposes: East Eleventh Street, west of Avenue A, Manhattan; Rhinelander, Bogart, and Radcliffe Avenues, the Bronx, and Hopkins and Jamaica Avenues, Queens.

Supt. Snyder of the Building Bureau has submitted for approval plans and specifications for the general construction of the annex to P. S. 43, the Bronx.

The Superintendent of Schools has requested that payment as general assistants for services in Evening Schools 2 and 19, Manhattan, and the Bushwick Evening Trade School be allowed, although the number of classes was less than the number entitling said schools to a general assistant. The Board of Education has approved the request.

A lecture in art on "Diaz, Troyon, Daubigny, and the Later Barbizon Men" will be given by Professor Leigh Hunt on Feb. 4 at 4:15 P. M. in the Doremus Lecture Hall of the City College. The public is invited to attend.

The graduation exercises of P. S. 69, Manhattan, were held on Thursday morning. Sixty girls and 101 boys were graduated. The school has an elementary high school department, and 46 of the 101 boy graduates completed the seventh, eighth, and ninth years in two years, and will enter De Witt Clinton High School tomorrow.

SEE BIG PROBLEMS FACING BUSINESS

General Confidence Here That Difficulties of Readjustment Will Be Solved.

FEAR THE LABOR SITUATION

Textile Industry Expects Heavy Orders if Workers Agree to Their Terms.

CREDIT MEN OPTIMISTIC

Express No Fear of Debacle in Prices — Analine Dyes in Sound Position.

In the light of developments since the signing of the armistice representatives of many lines of business yesterday discussed the commercial outlook with THE NEW YORK TIMES. While in nearly every instance optimistic they were unanimous in agreeing that problems of the first magnitude must be faced in the immediate reconstruction period and solved with justice to all interests, labor as well as capital. Chief among the big problems seen by those interviewed were labor and price readjustments, profits, cancellations and allied subjects. It was the belief of many that the country's business had come to a pause in many lines pending settlement of the big problems raised by the war, and the necessity for getting back to a normal peace basis. This condition, it was explained, was not alarming, provided the transition to a business peace footing could be brought about gradually, and without sudden drops in either wages or prices. In many quarters the hope was expressed that labor and capital would get together, and discuss their mutual problems, sanely.

In this connection the attention of practically the entire textile industry was concentrated yesterday upon the threatened strikes in the silk, cotton, and woolen mills of the Eastern United States. The workers in many instances are demanding a forty-eight-hour week, in place of the fifty-four-hour schedule obtaining in many mills during the war period, while asking that no cut be made in wages.

Manufacturers, jobbers, and selling agents in this city, representing big mills in every section, said that were it not for the threat of a strike, the outlook on the whole would be decidedly promising, especially as producers, distributers, and retailers were known to be short of finished merchandise. Both jobbers and retailers, they said, have been pursuing a hand-to-mouth buying policy for a considerable period, this having the effect of reducing goods available for consumption to a very low figure.

G. A. O'Reilly of the Irving National Bank, an institution brought into close and extensive contact with commercial interests, yesterday discussed the business outlook as seen by the bank.

"The general attitude of business men of practically all classes with whom we have discussed the business situation is optimistic," Mr. O'Reilly said. "This optimism, it seems, is based in part, the larger part perhaps, upon confidence in American ability to overcome difficulties, in part upon a perhaps somewhat exaggerated estimate of the benefits which are to come to us through foreign trade, and in part upon our extensive gold holdings, apparently unlimited national credit, and present good health of business generally.

Sees No Solutions Offered.

"Nobody seems to have anything to offer in the way of solutions, beyond the broadest kind of generalities; but somehow business men seem to believe that in some way the thing will be done and the period of smooth sailing will be reached without serious mishap to business.

"Among possible sources of difficulty labor appears to be taken the most seriously, but everybody seems waiting for the other fellow to make the first move toward a solution of this problem. Numerous manufacturers say that they wish the wage scale to stay well up, but are unable to figure out what will happen when the requirements of competition may demand a more cheaply produced article.

"Reference to the desirability of a general getting together between labor and capital is encountered everywhere, but nobody appears willing to say which side must do this getting together. It begins to look as though the practical development of this idea will require more time than is consistent with the needs of the labor emergency, the approach of which is so freely admitted.

"Many business men are referring to the importance of high production as a means whereby the threatened labor crisis may be averted. They say that as long as the wheels are kept going around at full speed, and the factories are kept open, and there is an active demand for product, everything will be lovely and capital can stand high wages and labor afford to be good-natured.

"In the face of this pleasing thought is the other, not so pleasing, that unless the general attitude of purchasers undergoes a change, production will be obliged to slow down if overloading, congestion, and all the related evils are to be avoided. If cancellations are to continue, if purchasers are to remain passive, awaiting lower prices and cheaper labor, if manufacturers are to insist upon the margin of profit to which they have been accustomed, and if business generally is to be optimistic in theory and pessimistic in specific action, rather clearly producton must slow down and labor difficulties will assume tangible form.

"These undesirable tendencies have been indicated strongly in recent interviews with business men. Manufacturers in different lines are unable, or unwilling, to make prices and stand back of them for a period. Distributers acknowledge the danger of getting overloaded, and consumers are getting away from war atmosphere, and getting down to a cold business basis. The dangers which may result from such an attitude should not be underestimated, but it looks as though the splendid general optimism of the country will be quite equal to the task ahead once the seriousness of this task is fully realized."

Information received by the National Association of Credit Men from its members in every line of business in all parts of the country indicates that business generally will be able to adjust itself to peace conditions without a violent shock to economic stability.

"In looking over the field of commerce and credits we cannot find any element of panic or serious danger," said J. H. Tregoe, Secretary-Treasurer of the National Association. "While stocks of merchandise would invoice generally a larger sum than would the stocks of twelve months ago, yet in units they are no larger, and the indebtedness for merchandise does not exceed in the total the indebtedness of twelve months ago.

Sees No Debacle in Prices.

"We cannot see any substantial or economic reason for a débâcle in prices; there was some profiteering during the war, a natural consequence of war conditions; therefore in some commodities declines were reasonable and very sane. In the general total of commodities, however, agricultural and industrial, we do not anticipate any débâcle that should cause a loss of composure or a heavy shrinkage in accumulated profits.

"The chief guarantee against such a débâcle would be the keeping of composure and the holding of commodities for proper prices—not that we advocate the upholding of prices against the natural tendencies, but sacrificing commodities might put the seller in a position of being unable to replace the commodities at the selling prices."

Mr. Tregoe returned recently from a survey of business conditions, which covered the territory east of the Mississippi, and says that, without undue optimism, and yet in the spirit of real sanity, this country is offered wonderful opportunities in the commercial field. Mr. Tregoe urged, however, that unemployment and labor unrest receive the most careful attention from all employers and others having the well-being of the country and its workers at heart.

At the request of THE NEW YORK TIMES, Lew Hahn, Executive Secretary of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, made the following statement:

"The man who goes out of his way at this particular time to attempt to fill the rôle of prophet in considering the commercial and economic outlook of the next six months or year is a reckless sort of fellow. It seems certain that the present uncertainty which is felt by merchants everywhere will be likely to continue for some time, and although it is difficult to understand how anybody can be pessimistic concerning the future business in this country, it will not do to be too optimistic at the outset. It seems sure that in certain localities considerable unemployment is likely to develop. This situation, in fact, already exists in some centres where large numbers of men from the service have been demobilized, and where plants that had been working night and day have been closed or their activities partially curtailed. Already advertisements begin to appear in the newspapers offering for sale plants and machinery that were devoted to the production of munitions, and such announcements not only speak for a process of changing over which is going on in the country's industries, but in themselves probably operate to create added uncertainty."

Expect Prices to Drop.

Mr. Hahn said that retailers quite generally realize that as labor costs and other costs which enter into production were to come down, prices must come down too, and added, "They naturally expect merchandise prices to go down the ladder first." The Secretary said that retailers were not disposed to commit themselves heavily at present prices, even though there had been a quite general softening up in the various markets. Today, he said, the average merchant realizes the wisdom of careful buying to supply his immediate needs. The movement in some quarters, Mr. Hahn said, to guarantee prices to retailers is not looked upon by all retailers as a desirable development.

Fletcher D. Dodge, Secretary of the Toys Manufacturers of the U. S. A., Inc., said yesterday that the general situation in the toy industry was an unusually early and large demand on the part of toy buyers for merchandise. War conditions, the Secretary said, prevented manufacturers from filling all the orders received last year. This fact, combined with very liberal Christmas purchasing by the consumer, practically cleared the shelves of the dealers. "The outlook for 1919 is most encouraging," Mr. Dodge said.

That the new American dyestuff industry was standing the strain of the readjustment period was the statement of Robert Alfred Shaw, Vice President of the National Aniline and Chemical Company.

"Considering that the armistice came earlier than we expected," Mr. Shaw said, "the American dyestuff industry has met the situation well. At that time there were no large stocks in the hands either of manufacturers or consumers, and prices have been but little influenced by the expected arrival of peace. Stocks in the hands of manufacturers are now larger than in November, for the reason that the textile mills have slowed up awaiting orders for civilian goods. But these are not large in comparison with what they were a year ago. Prices for American colors will be affected by lower costs for raw materials, but these lower prices will come gradually as the higher cost materials are consumed."

Expect Prosperous Year.

E. E. Rittenhouse, Vice President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, made it plain in a statement that the big life insurance companies expect a reasonably prosperous year for the entire country.

"The life insurance business in the United States has been very good during the entire period of the war," Mr. Rittenhouse said. "During the last six months it has been remarkable. This has not been due to what is commonly called 'war prosperity,' but to the fact that the war and the greatest epidemic the country has ever had have given an unusual emphasis to the need of life insurance protection, and the individual has responded accordingly.

"American life insurance companies will distribute to the bereaved families of the war and the epidemic nearly $100,000,000. This naturally stimulates new business. This is the greatest 'conflagration' hazard life insurance has ever been called upon to meet.

"The business world is already well advanced in the work of readjustment of our disturbed economic and industrial conditions, and the proverbial American characteristic of adaptability to extraordinary situations promises a reasonably prosperous year for the entire country. The returning soldiers are being so widely distributed throughout the nation, and their return will cover so many months, that even the labor situation may adjust itself without the difficulties which many are now anticipating."

Collector Mark Eisner of the Third New York Internal Revenue District, in discussing the effect of taxation upon the general business outlook, said it depended not upon the rates, but upon the equality of the incidence of the tax.

"If the tax is fair," Collector Eisner said, "business will not be adversely affected. If, however, two concerns in the same line of business, operating under practically the same conditions, should be differently treated, from the tax standpoint, merely because their form of organization is different, this discrimination must inevitably result in business instability.

"However, any unfairness in the pending bill can readily be corrected by the next Congress, and it is my opinion that we will soon see taxation treated in the same manner as any other overhead expense without any adverse effect upon business.

"I believe that six months hence the adjustment processes will have solidified and that comparatively normal conditions in business will prevail."

WANT QUEENS GRADE CROSSINGS REMOVED

Public Service Commission Asks Legislature for $250,000 Appropriation.

PLACE COST AT $1,000,000

Would Have City Also Contribute $250,000 and Railroad Company $500,000.

The most important plan for the removal of grade crossings yet instituted by the Public Service Commission of this city will be in operation within a short time if the Legislature accedes to a request by the commission for an appropriation of $250,000 to pay the State's share in an estimated expenditure of $1,000,000 for improvements on the Long Island Railroad. An equal amount must be supplied by the city, and half of the total amount by the railroad company.

There are more than 400 grade crossings in this city, and very little was done toward removing them despite frequent accident, many of them fatal, until a few years ago, when the commission began paying special attention to the matter. Up to 1907 only $9,000 had been spent for their removal in this city out of a total of $1,500,000 appropriated for the purpose throughout the State. A total of $950,000 appropriated for the work in this city since 1910 will be exhausted with the completion of work now under way.

A statement by the commission says that the new appropriation asked for is for the removal of grade crossings which experience has shown to be imperatively demanded by the welfare of the public. In urging the Legislature to make the appropriation the commission has called attention to the fact that the particular section of Queens traversed by the Atlantic Division of the Long Island Railroad would undoubtedly increase more rapidly in population and in taxable values if the menace of grade crossings was removed. It is said that the traffic over this division is the heaviest suburban traffic in this part of the country. The statement of the commission also says:

"The commission appeals to the Legislature to further the project, because two new rapid transit extensions recently opened through this part of Queens will certainly result in the building of many new houses within a relatively short period, thus adding materially to the traffic crossing railroad tracks. At the same time, the already vast railroad traffic is increasing, which means that more trains must be operated, and that the element of danger will be proportionately increased.

"In addition to doing a large through passenger traffic from outlying points of Long Island the Atlantic Division also conveys a surprisingly large number of commuters in and out of the Flatbush Avenue terminal. Along Jamaica Avenue, paralleling this division, is the new Jamaica Avenue extension of the Broadway and Lexington Avenue elevated lines, while a few blocks to the south of it is the Liberty Avenue extension of the Fulton Street elevated line, both of them operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company."

Names Dangerous Crossings.

It is also pointed out in the statement that the railroad line traverses such rapidly growing sections as Woodhaven, Woodhaven Junction, Union Course, Clarenceville, Morris Park, and Dunton. The crossing at Norwood Avenue, the most westerly of the twenty-one crossings, is one of those the commission is anxious to remove from grade. Other crossings considered dangerous and which the commission thinks should be removed as speedily as possible are the following:

Logan Street, Euclid Avenue, Crescent Avenue, Railroad Avenue—a very important station—Enfield Street or Elderts Lane, Rockaway Plank Road and Shaw Avenue at the Union Concourse station; Benedict Avenue at Woodhaven, Woodhaven Avenue, Vandeveer Place, Hatch or Napier Avenue, Freedom Avenue, and Wyckoff Avenue in the vicinity of Woodhaven Junction; Grand Avenue and Greenwood Avenue at Clarenceville; Linden Avenue, Jefferson Avenue, Johnson or Church Avenue, Lefferts Avenue and Beach Avenue in the vicinity of Morris Park.

Then the commission says:

"Traffic over the Atlantic Division is almost, if not quite, as congested as that upon any railroad entering this city. More than 20,000,000 passengers are handled in and out of Flatbush Avenue terminal every year. This is a greater number than either the New York Central or the New Haven Railroads carry in and out of the Grand Central Station, and is within a few thousand passengers of their combined daily traffic to and from that station. In one month, during which a close count was kept of the traffic for purposes of comparison between the two stations, the daily average to and from the Flatbush Avenue terminal was 67,443, as against a total of 73,200 passengers in and out of the Grand Central Station. In one recent six-month period the total traffic in and out of the Flatbush Avenue terminal was 10,200,000, as against 6,400,000 in and out of the Pennsylvania Station."

The commission says that for a good part of the distance between Flatbush Avenue and Jamaica all of the traffic must be carried over two tracks, and that from Flatbush Avenue to East New York the line is mostly two-tracked and is partly an elevated and partly a subway line. From Norwood Avenue to Woodhaven Junction the line is four-tracked, but from the latter point to Jamaica there are only two tracks. The commission adds:

"Serious consideration has been given to the impending necessity of placing schedules of trains operated over the Atlantic Division upon a headway basis during the rush hours and possibly throughout the day. This headway should not be less than two or three minutes. If this becomes necessary it is obviously vital that all grade crossings must first be removed, as it would be practically impossible to operate trains on grade crossings with any assurance of safety to pedestrians and vehicles under such short headway."

Any considerable increment in population in the sections fringing the Atlantic Avenue division, it is explained, will not only require that at the twenty-one points referred to there shall be access across the tracks, but that in addition other points of crossing shall be provided for the reason that some of the present crossings are as much as 1,700 feet apart.

Those parts of the tracks which are fenced in entirely, it is said, cut off vehicular traffic, much to the inconvenience and expense of business men in the neighborhood.

French Pilots on the Rhine.

PARIS, Friday, Jan. 31.—French pilots, for the first time in forty-eight years, will soon be guiding French and German vessels up and down the Rhine. The men will be recruited from among the helmsmen and pilots of the high sea rover fleets of the French Navy and are now being instructed under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Marine. The pilots will take charge of steamers, tugs, and barges loaded with foodstuffs destined to the armies of occupation and will also command squadrons of light gunboats charged with the "watch on the Rhine."

Germany Releases More Americans; Sent to England and Neutral Lands

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The War Department has announced a list of Americans held by the Germans as prisoners of war who have been released. Included in the list are three enlisted men who have died in Germany. They are H. W. Cornelius, Newal, Wis.; Charles Olson, Windber, Penn., and Brownlow Cowans, Hartsville, Tenn.

Lieutenants H. E. Bash of Huntington, Ind.; J. C. Stanley of El Paso, Texas, and the following enlisted men from New York and vicinity have returned to France after being released from German prison camps:

MARGULIS, DAVID, 178 Ludlow St., New York City.
APPLIN, J. E., Dansville, N. Y.
McGARRY, E. W., 160 Twenty-second St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
BROCK, ALBERT, Princeton, N. J.
CASTIGLIA, MICHELLE, 238 East 152d St., New York City.
REYNOLDS, J. J., 669 Ninth Av., New York City.
O'SULLIVAN, W. B., Forestville, Conn.
SCHMIDT, JOS., New Haven, Conn.
WEINHOLD, F. A., Schenectady, N. Y.
MOLEY, J. J., 953 Thirty-ninth St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The following seamen have been released from Brandenburg and sailed from Warnemünde for Aarhuus, Denmark, on Dec. 8:

BOULAIS, RAOUL, Marieville, Quebec, Can.
SAVELY, C. G., Philadelphia, Penn.
KOWALESKI, J. D., Middletown, Conn.
MILLER, T. B., Jacksonville, Fla.
YOUDIN, SAM, 215 Henry St., New York City.
CASKEY, E. B., 100 Stevens Av., Jersey City, N. J.
DURFEE, T. S., Boston, Mass.
SAWYER, J. T., Dubuque, Iowa.
BROWN, J. W., Hampton, Va.
BLOM, J. A., 104 Water St., New York.
COLSTAD, ADOLF, Seattle, Wash.
OLIVER, ALFRED, 225 East 123d St., New York.
LEPP, JOHN, Baltimore.
JONES, THEOPHILUS, 349 Bridge St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
HENRY, HERBERT, 99 Prince St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
GERRITY, DANIEL, Washington, D. C.
SORENS[illegible], ELMER, Philadelphia.
MART[illegible] E. U., Baltimore.
PERK[illegible], W. W., Lot, Whitley County, Ky.

J. T. Meehan of 572 Warren Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and E. R. Pflomm of 247 West Ninety-seventh Street, New York, have been released from Merseburg and are detained at a hospital in Scotland.

John Crisafulli of 507 Amsterdam Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., and G. U. Parker, 47 Reeve Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., have been released from German prison camps and have arrived at Leith, Scotland.

Fred Lober of Maspeth, N. Y., is at the Leith General Hospital.

Michael Kearns of 657 Park Avenue, New York, has left Stettin, Germany, and has sailed for Copenhagen, Denmark.

Sidney Schlaenger of 511 East Eighty-second Street, New York, has been released from a German prison camp and has arrived at Altdam.

Albert Shearer of Woodhaven, N. Y., S. M. Cash of 1,835 Douglas Street, Brooklyn, George Ringler of 1,270 Broadway, New York, and Edward Fisher of 228 East Second Street, New York, have been released from German prison camps and are located at a hospital at Dartford.

TO DEGERMANIZE HIGHER EDUCATION

Drastic Changes in Secondary Schools Suggested to Make System Wholly American.

WOULD END SPECIALIZATION

Comprehensive High Schools to Fit Youth for Citizenship, with Compulsory Attendance.

For the purpose of establishing high schools which meet American needs, the National Education Association recommends that a number of drastic changes be made in secondary education throughout the country, especially that American institutions get away from the German method of specialization which led to the formation of castes. The United States Bureau of Education has just issued the report under the title "Cardinal Principles of Secondary Education." It is the chief document prepared by the commission on the Reorganization of Secondary Education, which has been working on various problems in that field since 1912. The Chairman of the commission is Clarence D. Kingsley, State Supervisor of High Schools in Massachusetts, and one of the members is P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education. The New York City members are Thomas H. Briggs and William H. Kilpatrick of Teachers College, Columbia University; Henry Newmann, Ethical Culture School; William Orr, International Y. M. C. A.; W. E. Foster, Stuyvesant High School, and Otis W. Caldwell, Director of the Lincoln School.

The Commission bases its presentation upon the contention that the purpose of democracy is to organize society so that each member may develop his personality primarily through his activities designed for the well-being of his fellow members and of society as a whole, and they would focus secondary education upon such great social objectives as health, citizenship, vocation, worthy use of leisure and ethical character, instead of the traditional "intellectual discipline."

With the high schools so reorganized as to meet these needs, the Commission holds that secondary education is essential for all the youth of the nation, and urges legislation whereby all young people, whether employed or not, shall be required to attend the secondary school for at least eight hours in each week that the schools are in session. "No single piece of educational legislation could do more to raise the level of intelligence and efficiency and to insure the welfare of democracy. Such part-time or continuation education should not be exclusively vocational. It should be conducted in comprehensive high schools, rather than in separate continuation schools, as is the custom in less democratic societies. By this plan the American high school can become uniquely American, welding by its influence all young people of the community into one civic whole, thus becoming a living embodiment of the unity which should overtower all diversities within the body politic."

Contrary to that conception of education which believes in the elimination from the educational system of all those who "fail to keep the pace," letting them shift for themselves as best they may, the conception which believes in the policy of holding back those pupils who are slow in certain kinds of work, the commission holds that "the over-age pupil must not be held back in the elementary school or lose interest and develop habits of dawdling. Instead the secondary school must provide suitable forms of instruction for such pupils."

To solve the problem the Commission recommends that a wide variety of curriculums be offered, and that these should, as a rule, be conducted side by side in comprehensive high schools, rather than in specialized high schools, as was the German method.

PALESTINE FUND ASSURED.

Zionist Organization Reports Half the $3,000,000 Provided For.

One-half the sum desired has been contributed to the Palestine Restoration Fund, it was announced yesterday by the Zionist Organization of America. At a meeting of representatives to the central conference of Zionists in this city Louis Lipsky, Secretary of the Zionist Organization, said he was confident that the $3,000,000 fund would be raised within the time limit of the drive, and that from present indications would be heavily oversubscribed.

The Women's Committee of the Palestine Restoration Fund announced yesterday that Mme. Kalich would give a benefit performance of "The Riddle: Woman" for the fund at the Fulton Theatre on March 2. Arrangements are being made for Palestine Restoration Fund Day, to be observed in this city on Feb. 9. Harry Kahn, in charge of the fund drive, said yesterday that more than 5,000 volunteer workers had been enrolled.

Among the larger contributions received from other cities in the last week are: Cleveland, Ohio, $50,000; Coatesville, Penn., $17,000; Newark, N. J., $20,000; Youngstown, Ohio, $5,000; Jersey City, $7,500; Plainfield, $5,000; New Brunswick, $3,000; Binghamton, $3,000; Schenectady, $2,000. At a Brownsville meeting $12,000 was raised.

ALL CANADA 'DRY' AFTER APRIL 30

Provincial Enactments Are Buttressed by Dominion Cabinet's Orders in Council.

LATTER LAPSE WITH WAR

Prohibition Workers Urge New Legislation and a Plebiscite When Troops Are Home.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—With the exception of the Province of Quebec, prohibition is in force throughout Canada. And Quebec goes dry on May 1. Supplementing the provincial laws are Dominion Orders in Council, prohibiting for the period of the war, and twelve months afterward, the importation into dry territory, the manufacture and the interprovincial shipment of liquor for drinking purposes. These Orders in Council were adopted by virtue of the War Measures Act, passed in the special session of 1914. Dominion enactments along the lines of the Orders in Council are essential if the provincial laws are to be effective. But the War Measures Act expires when peace is proclaimed. And according to expert legal opinion, the Orders in Council will lapse at the same time, although they contain a clause that they shall remain in force for twelve months after the war.

In view of this situation the Government will in the coming session of Parliament introduce legislation to validate the Orders in Council. For what period they will be validated is a question which is certain to arouse discussion.

The Dominion Prohibition Committee has urged this action on the Government:

(1) Legislation to continue in effect the Orders in Council.

(2) Legislation to continue these in effect until a vote of the electors of Canada shall have been taken on the question of continuance or discontinuance.

(3) The vote on this question to be taken at a date to be fixed by the Government at least six months prior to the day of voting, and with due regard to the restoration of civil life in Canada of the soldiers now overseas.

The view taken by the Dominion Prohibition Committee that final action should be postponed till all the men are home again has strong popular support. It is thought probable that the Government will follow the suggestion and that the plebiscite will be taken when the returned men are able to vote.

The virtually Dominion-wide prohibition, now in effect, came almost as suddenly as the ratification by the States of the United States amendment to the Constitution. There had been "dry" territories under local option for years. In Quebec, which is for the time being the only "wet" province, the number of municipalities locally dry had been gradually increasing. In turn, the provinces had passed prohibitory legislation. But it was not till the present Union Government came into power at Ottawa that Dominion prohibition was regarded as likely.

A plebiscite on the question was taken several years ago, and, with the exception of Quebec, all the provinces gave a majority in favor of prohibition. But, in view of the unfavorable action in Quebec, the Government there declined to enact prohibitory legislation, although, taking the Dominion as a whole, there was a majority in favor.

The war has done much to stimulate the prohibition movement in Canada. Dominion enactments began with measures primarily intended to conserve foodstuffs. In November, 1917, the use of grain or other food substances for the distillation of potable liquors was forbidden. Later in the month the quantity of barley to be used in the manufacture of malt was limited. After Dec. 31 importation of liquor containing more than 2½ per cent. proof spirits was forbidden save under license for certain purposes. Then, in March, 1918, came the Order in Council prohibiting "the manufacture of intoxicating liquor in Canada, and forbidding the transportation of such liquor into any part of Canada, wherein the sale of such liquor is by law prohibited and the sale of such liquor for delivery in any such part of Canada, and the delivery in any such part of Canada of liquor sold in any other part of Canada."

In announcing this policy, the War Cabinet stated that its purpose was to "prevent waste, to promote thrift, to conserve resources and thus to increase national efficiency."

The course of prohibition in the United States will, it is expected, largely influence the continuance of Dominion prohibition in Canada. The result of any Dominion plebiscite would, in turn, affect the continuance of provincial enactments. So far as Ontario is concerned, for instance, a plebiscite has been announced by the provincial Prime Minister, to be held when all the soldiers have returned.

Writing the History of the War.

PARIS, Feb. 1, (Associated Press.)—To insure the writing of an accurate history of the war, a score of officers under orders to return to America have been detained and sent to Italy to make a study of the regions over which the Italian and Austrian campaigns were fought. A large number of officers are now engaged in studying the devastated regions of France and Belgium for the same purpose.

BOWMAN SEES RUIN FACING HOTEL MEN

High Taxes and Prohibition Heavy Blows at Legitimate Industry, He Says.

PROFITS LOW LAST YEAR

Provisions of Pending Revenue Bill Amount Almost to Confiscation, He Asserts.

In whatever form the pending Revenue bill shall be enacted into law, its provisions will affect the man in the hotel business pretty much the same, whether he does business in New York or Chicago or Denver or San Francisco. The income tax problem of one differs from that of another, the hotel men are agreed, only by the difference in the amount of capital invested. But the majority of hotel proprietors, like the majority of men in other lines of business, have not had time to become familiar with the provisions of the pending bill in its latest amended form.

For the purpose of showing how the bill affects the hotel business in general John McE. Bowman, President of the companies operating the Biltmore, Commodore, Belmont, Manhattan, Murray Hill, and Ansonia Hotels, made this statement yesterday:

"American hotels had to do business last year under conditions vastly different from those affecting other lines of industry. This year they are faced by the confiscation of a remunerative part of their business. Otherwise, from their standpoint, there could be no complaint against the provisions of the new Revenue bill beyond what might, in justice, be directed against it by any legitimate industry, namely, that the proposed heavy tax on corporations in general acts to prevent them from providing a reserve out of the earnings of a profitable twelvemonth to care for less profitable years in the reconstruction period which is now with us.

Confronted by Specter of Ruin.

"But the hotel, and the great metropolitan hotel in particular, has no year of enormous prosperity and swollen profits to fall back upon. And, unlike other industrial concerns, it finds itself in a situation where, just as appeared the opportunity to restore profits to normal levels, after the drain of heavier operating expenses, Liberty bond subscriptions and generous response to appeals from the Red Cross and the numerous other forms of war relief work that have distinguished the great conflict from all previous wars, the hotel industry, instead of being permitted to enjoy a reasonable measure of relief from oppression, such as legitimate business looks forward to in periods of stress or disturbance, is confronted by the specter of ruin.

"In THE NEW YORK TIMES of Jan. 29 the leading editorial was entitled 'Food Won the War.' That headline means a great deal to some of us. It is not true that food alone won the war, but it was the greatest factor in that accomplishment. Notwithstanding the millions of men we raised, trained, and sent to France; notwithstanding our great efforts in the manufacture of munitions, airplanes, and the other active engines of destruction which, out of our abundant resources, we fashioned for the overthrow of the Hun, food was, after all, our greatest weapon.

"There were some sneers and there was not a little jesting when Herbert Hoover made 'Food Will Win the War' the slogan of the Food Administration, yet food did what Mr. Hoover prophesied it would do. Mr. Hoover himself has several times given testimony to the part played by the hotels of the country in making our great food savings possible. It was the hotels that demonstrated how food could be saved by setting the example, and it was the example of the hotels of the country that led or shamed housewives into doing their own patriotic duty in the homes.

"What the great hotels of the country—the hotels of the better class—did to help win the war has not brought them the credit that is due. In carrying out their pledges to the Food Administration they suffered actual loss. Charges of profiteering were hurled at them, and when they gave up the use of wheat, the greatest and most effective of all food conservation measures, they lost the patronage of large numbers of food slackers who were ready to be patriotic in everything except when it came to fighting or eating.

Methods Had to be Revolutionized.

"To meet war conditions and the varying conservation requests of the Food Administration, the whole method of operating a hotel of the better class had to be revolutionized. Instead of permitting the patrons to be wasteful, the great hotels had to cut down their allowance of food to them. In the estimation of the unthinking, and to many who were supposed to be intelligent, the hotel man, for all his patriotic effort, his heavy subscription to Liberty Loans, his hearty support of the Red Cross and of various war relief organizations, became a parsimonious profiteer.

"In speaking of corporations in general, I have said that 1918 was a profitable year. It was not a profitable year for many hotels in the United States, especially those of the better class. I mean profitable as compared with the period before we entered the war. Many hotels made a profit, but it was not a normal profit—a profit that they had every right to expect. I believe a survey would show that except where a tremendous volume of business was done, the average American hotel of the better class lost money in the operation of its restaurants.

"However, the year 1918, in my belief, will rank as a profitable year for hotels as compared with the year 1919. In the case of many business enterprises, the period of readjustment promises to be short, and the prospects of acute financial difficulties are remote. In the hotel industry the Revenue bill, together with recent destructive legislation and certain confiscatory features of governmental regulation, threatens to bring about a condition of real embarrassment.

"The importance of the hotel industry, I believe, is underestimated in the popular mind. It is the fourth largest in the United States. In New York the value of real estate represented, capital invested in operation, and number of operatives employed in the hotel business give it even greater local importance. The New York hotel gives far more for the money than any other hotels. This is not a reflection upon hotels of other cities, but metropolitan conditions both demand and help make it possible.

"On July 1, 1919, the new prohibition amendment will go into effect, and a considerable diminution in the income of these hotels must necessarily follow. A great amount of space in them will be released by the discontinuance of the sale of liquors, and this space cannot be utilized for income-producing activities. The overhead charges in a first-class hotel in a great city are tremendous, and there will be no way of meeting these, to say nothing of making a profit, except through the sale of rooms or of food.

"Every time market and labor conditions have dictated increases in prices on menu cards, complaints have followed. Many persons seem to have difficulty in realizing that the problems of increased costs of foodstuffs, fuel, and labor, which are encountered in the home, are intensified and manifolded in great hotels. The loss occasioned by dry legislation can be met, if met at all, only in one way, and that is by considerably increased rates for rooms.

"And yet, it is extremely doubtful if such a course would produce increased income for a considerable time, as the effect would be to drive a large number of the regular patrons of the better class of hotels to lower-priced hotels—lower because they offer less of comfort and convenience, a lower standard of service, and inferior attractions in general to what a comfort and luxury-loving American public demands.

Taxation of Hotels.

"If any business enterprise is confronted by certain reduction in earnings, sound policy dictates a conservation of present income. Under the revenue legislation now in Congress, the surplus of the 'prosperous year' of 1918—if any—that might otherwise be reserved to care for the lean period which must ensue, is confiscated by the Government under the necessity for higher taxes.

"Undoubtedly the business of the whole country must bear a heavy burden of taxation in order that the expenses of war may be paid and that a proper ratio be maintained between the national debt and the Government's income from taxation. However, it would seem that a sound taxation policy should protect the industries taxed, not only from motives of justice, but in order that no tax-producing factor may be destroyed.

"The earnings of the hotels have been reduced lately by the action of Postmaster General Burleson in cutting down the hotel charges for local telephone service from 10 cents to 5 cents, although representatives of the larger hotels clearly demonstrated that such a procedure entails a positive loss. This, however, is a small matter compared with the loss of income which must occur through the operation of the dry law.

"Under the pending Revenue bill, as passed by the Senate, the larger hotels, in common with other corporations, will be taxed at least 30 per cent. on the amount of income representing a return of over 8 per cent. in addition to the 12 per cent. on the net income after deducting the former tax. Let us take the case of a hotel with an invested capital of $1,000,000—not an unusual figure nowadays. Let us suppose that the net income subject to taxation is 12 per cent., which is a very generous—I might almost say extravagant—guess at the net earnings of the average big hotel. That means the net taxable income is $120,000. The specific excess profits tax of such a hotel would be $13,600 and the straight income tax would be $12,678, a total of $26,2[illegible]—nearly 22 per cent. of the so-called net income after taxes are paid.

"I have said that 12 per cent. was a high estimate of the profit of the average hotel of the better class for last year. There are many hotels whose net profits were not over 7 per cent.; some were as low as 3 per cent.; some made no profit at all. It seems to me that Congress and the people should be advised that the hotel industry, one of the largest in the country, is threatened with disaster, if, together with constitutional prohibition, causing the destruction of part of their business, hotels are faced with such burdensome taxes as the new Revenue bill imposes."

IF GERMANY GOT HER COLONIES BACK

A British Map Showing What Her U-Boats, Based Upon Them, Could Do Now.

The British Government has published a map showing at a glance the great ocean areas that would be imperiled by German U-boat activities should Germany retain her former overseas possessions and sometime in the future should again go to war to regain what she has lost in this one. Practically the world's chief trade routes would be threatened by submarines based on Duala, in what was German West Africa; Dar-es-Salaam in former German West Africa, Rabaul in that part of New Guinea which was German, and on what was German Samoa.

Submarines based on each of these places would be able to operate throughout a circle having a radius of about 4,000 miles, and the circles would overlap one or more of the other circles, making possible operations by a single submarine from two and in some instances three of the four bases.

Submarines based in Duala, in the Cameroons, for instance, would be effective throughout a zone that would imperil practically every great transatlantic trade route from Vigo, in northern Spain, thence half way across the Atlantic and southwest to Georgetown in British Guiana, thence south through Pernambuco, Rio Janeiro, and Santos in Brazil to a point within a few hundred miles of Montevideo, Uruguay, the circle swinging east through the South Atlantic and thence north to Madagascar and northern British South Africa, near Mozambique.

Dar-es-Salaam, the German submarine base in East Africa, would control a 4,000-mile arc that would overlap the Duala arc, and which, like the Duala base, would imperil every one of the South African trade routes. It would, as would also the Duala base, imperil all Southern Atlantic trade routes between Argentina, Brazil, and Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan, and other Far Eastern lands. The Dar-es-Salaam circle includes all ports in the Indian Empire, the Suez Canal on the Indian Ocean side, the Straits of Sumatra, all trade routes between South Africa and Australia and New Zealand, as well as those from South America to Pacific points, and many of the routes between Vancouver, San Francisco, Seattle, and the Far East.

The base that Germany would be able to maintain in Rabaul, New Guinea, would be next to her great European base at Emden, the most important point of operations. Included in the Rabaul circle would be all of Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, the Hawaiian Islands, the entire island part of the Japanese Empire and the whole of the Asian coast from Saigon, in French Cochin China, to Siberia and the Aleutian Islands in the north. The circle overlaps not only the Samoan but also the Dar-es-Salaam circle. Such a submarine base would imperil every trade route operating between Vancouver in the north to the southernmost ports of South America and all ports in the mid-Pacific and the Far East.

The submarines that would be able to operate closest to North America would be those based on Samoa. The rim of this circle would be closest to the United States at a point just south of San Francisco. Like the Rabaul circle it would also include all of the principal Pacific islands, and the Australian continent, and would imperil every one of the principal trade routes between our Western ports and Far Eastern points. Submarines based on Samoa could also, in emergency, operate from the base at Rabaul. Moreover, the Samoan circle would reach nearest South America and thus endanger the safety of ships operating westward from every South American and Central American point, including, of course, the Pacific terminal of the Panama Canal.

The danger that would come from submarines based on Emden, Germany, has been shown already in this war. This base would affect the entire North Atlantic and all trade routes between European ports and New York and other North American ports, as well as between those ports and all points in the South Atlantic.

SAYS JAPAN EXPECTS CHINA TO PLAY FAIR

Dr. Iyenaga Denounces Dr. Wellington Koo's Statement That Treaty of 1915 Is Nugatory.

BELITTLES CHINA'S WAR AID

Japan Society Hears Discussion of Need for Better Trans-Pacific Communication.

Dr. Wellington Koo's statement at Paris that the China-Japan treaty of 1915 is nugatory brought a reply yesterday from Dr. T. Iyenaga, director of the East and West Bureau in this city, who was one of the speakers at the first open forum of the Japan Society. The purpose of the gathering at the Bankers Club, 120 Broadway, was to bring out views on trans-Pacific communication, cable and wireless.

Speaking of the words of President Wilson in proposing the League of Nations, Dr. Iyenaga pointed out that they heralded the end of the diplomacy of Metternich and Talleyrand and the coming of "the people's diplomacy." He declared that the practicability of the President's ideal lay in the people "having at their command the means of making themselves fully conversant with the world situation and of forming thereby their opinions about it."

He recalled the ready communication that obtains across the Atlantic, "which permits the minutes of yesterday's meeting to be read at today's breakfast table," and said that New Yorkers were thus able to gauge the situation almost first hand, public opinion being thereby molded while the matter was still fresh. He then turned to the Pacific:

"Between Tokio and Osaka and this shore there is only one line of cable and a wireless plant installed at Funabashi, with another plant under construction. These are the sole means of direct telegraphic communication between the two great nations on the opposite shores of the Pacific. That these appliances are inadequate to meet the demand for the transmission of messages, commercial, official, and otherwise, no one will gainsay."

Dr. Iyenaga declared that the high charges between the United States and Japan should be lowered in the interest of great mutual understandings and the promotion of commerce. He advocated the laying of at least two additional cable lines, with greatly amplified wireless facilities, for "so vital has become the rôle played by the cables and the wireless in the growth of democracy and in the realization of 'people's democracy,' that no effort should be spared to increase their efficiency and multiply their services.

"In concluding, you will permit me to illustrate the point I have been dwelling upon. The great Senate of the United States is today complaining, through the mouths of its eminent members, that it is kept in the dark about the peace proceedings. How much more will the Japanese people feel so? They are silent; no echo of their voices comes across the Pacific. It is therefore hard to gauge their feelings.

"The only noise heard nowadays is the noise made by China. Now that the war is over, China, which during the war was warned by the Allies for her failure to serve efficiently the allied cause, seems to have started on a venture to captivate the world by her tongue and pen. Her delegates and agents in Paris, Washington, and elsewhere are industriously engaged in setting up her claims. Were words without the backing of deeds sufficient to capture the world, what a cheap job it would be! It is well to remember that the words of President Wilson, eloquent as they are, derive their driving power from the immortal deeds of 100,000,000 Americans who contributed to the winning of the war.

"It is reported that Mr. Wellington Koo has asserted at the Peace Congress that the China-Japan treaty of 1915 is nugatory; for, he argues, it was concluded under duress. Does Dr. Koo mean to intimate that China is so weak, so helpless, that she could not help signing the treaty under compulsion, and that the treaty which she, after eliminating what she considered objectionable, namely group V, has signed in good faith, is today, after four years of operation, to be thrown into the waste basket? Is China going to repeat the story of Germany in tearing up treaties as "scraps of paper"? Is the international order, which is based upon the faithful fulfilment of treaties entered into between nations to be upset by the vagaries and whims of the time-serving diplomats? I hope not. I was aware that Bolshevism was running riot in Russia, but did not imagine that it was spreading so fast and wide to other portions of the globe.

"Japan is silent; she has done her part in the war to the best of her ability; she feels assured that her task, loyally and faithfully performed, will receive due recognition by her allies. As she has made sacrifices during the war, so she is ready to make more sacrifices for the cause of harmony among the powers and for the realization of the League of Nations. I am disposed to think that she might agree with good grace to a compromise plan evolved by the congress for the possession and administration of the South Sea Islands which she now occupies, if this is to be for the good of all.

"Japan hails the League of Nations, for it stands upon the foundations of justice, equality, and fraternity. As Japan is ready to render justice to other nations, so she expects from them fair, just and equal treatment.

"Japan has kept every international pledge she has made. We are assured by her Foreign Minister that Japan will restore Kiao-Chau to China. This, however, I am confident she will do of her own accord—not because of any pressure exerted from outside, least of all by China, which has neither shed a drop of blood nor expended a cent for the reduction of the German fortress. The German lease of the territory would have run for seventy odd years more had not the Japanese forces, in conjunction with British troops, wrested it from Germany. It would, therefore, be none but a graceful act on Japan's part if she restored it to China at the conclusion of peace.

"Viscount Uchida has declared that Japan's foreign policy is to be a fair and clean one for all the world. Especially to China, Japan has expressed her genuine friendship and perfect willingness to lend a helping hand in the unfolding of her great future. It is, then, but meet that this sincerity and neighborliness should be reciprocated."

A promise that the outlook for Pacific cables would soon be brighter, with great speed accomplished in sending messages between this city and Japan, was made by George W. Clapperton, Vice President and Traffic Manager of the Commercial Pacific Company. W. W. Davies of the Australian Press told of the difficulties he had experienced in getting new cables through to Australia, and urged a lower rate on news dispatches, since, he said, events had proven that commerce followed in the wake of news.

Roy W. Howard, President of the United Press, whom Frank Dilnot, correspondent of The London Chronicle, introduced, spoke, and was followed by Dr. Jeremiah W. Jenks, of the Far Eastern Bureau, who discussed the things which, he said, were holding back a complete understanding between Americans and Chinese. He said he thought greater cable facilities with a consequent greater exchange of news would do much toward giving both nations a true perspective of each other.

EIGHT COLLEGE CREWS MAY COMPETE IN AMERICAN HENLEY ON THE SCHUYLKILL RIVER MAY 31

PHILADELPHIA GETS AMERICAN HENLEY

Regatta Will Be Held May 31, with Possibly Eight Crews Competing.

STEWARDS AWARD EVENTS

Childs Cup Race Will Be Rowed at Carnegie Lake, Princeton, on Date to be Decided Later.

The American Henley, one of the foremost rowing events of the year, will be rowed on the Schuylkill River in Philadelphia on Saturday, May 31. The Stewards of the American Rowing Association at a meeting at the Columbia University Club yesterday announced that the probable crews in the race would be the Union Boat Club, Boston, Princeton, Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Annapolis. Cornell, Yale, and Harvard will also be invited to take part in the regatta.

The association plans to have the regatta next season the most successful in the history of the event, and with at least half a dozen crews in the race it is expected that the event will be the most spectacular rowing affair of the season. With the temporary elimination of the Poughkeepsie Regatta, the American Henley takes on added significance this season.

The distance of the race will be one and five-sixteenths miles, which is becoming the accepted distance for most of the college events. The regatta may grow in proportions, because it is planned not only to hold races between the first eights, but also between junior and freshman eights. The association will also endeavor to renew interest in fours and single sculls, and if enough interest is shown in these events they may also be included in the program. It will be many years since there have been single sculls in regattas made up of college crews.

It was also decided that the Childs Cup race would be rowed this year at Carnegie Lake, Princeton. The date has not yet been decided, but it is believed it will be some time early in May.

The Pennsylvania rowing men at the meeting gave an outline of the plans which are to be put into effect. The Quakers will open their season with a race with Annapolis on the Severn April 12. This will be the sixteenth annual renewal of this event. The distance will be one and five-sixteenths miles. Pennsylvania will row five races this season in seven weeks' time. Coach Joe Wright believes that several short races of this sort are much better sport and much better for the men than the long training involved in preparation for the four-mile grind at Poughkeepsie. Last year Pennsylvania rowed four races in five weeks' time and won three out of the four, being defeated in the last race of the season by Annapolis in the American Henley event.

The officers elected at the meeting yesterday were: Dr. Hugh Cabot, Harvard, Chairman; Julian Curtiss, Yale, Vice Chairman; Russell Johnson, Philadelphia, Treasurer, and John Arthur Brown, Pennsylvania, Secretary. Those present at the meeting were Commander Joseph R. Morrison, Annapolis; Charles Halsted Mapes, Columbia; Francis S. Bangs, Columbia; Charles Lund, Union Boat Club, Boston; Lee Williamson, Baltimore; Thomas Reath, Pennsylvania; John Arthur Brown, Pennsylvania; Dean McClenahan, Princeton.

Secretary Brown said after the meeting that the gathering was one of the most enthusiastic in years, and that with rowing conditions back to a normal condition by next Summer the Stewards believed that college rowing would command more interest than ever before.

The decision to hold events other than for first, junior and freshman eights is expected to interest rowing clubs outside of colleges. It would not be surprising to see a general revival in sculling, for the winning of such an event at the American Henley would carry with it considerable prestige. The aim of the American Rowing Association is to make their annual regatta similar to the old time national regattas, which aroused countrywide attention. An open program is expected to attract the attention of crews other than college organizations. An effort will be made to interest boat club fours in the event.

The fact that so many colleges are becoming interested in the short distance races leads many old oarsmen to believe that the spectacular regatta may not be renewed on the old conditions. Just before the regatta was temporarily suspended, the stewards had decided to cut the distance from four to three miles, but now that there is a general movement for shorter races, it may be that the Poughkeepsie event will be for only two miles, if it is revivevd.

MOUNTAINEERS SEEK TITLE.

Basket Ball Team Has Chance for Sectional Championship.

The West Virginia Mountaineer basket ball team has the best opportunity in its history to acquire the sectional floor championship of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia this year. The Mountaineers have won four of the five games scheduled so far. Pitt has been defeated at Pittsburgh and Marietta at Marietta. One game with W. & J. is in dispute. The W. & J. game is practically the only thing that stands out as an obstacle to West Virginia's winning the sectional title.

Another strong contender for the title is Allegheny College, which without doubt has been the leading floor team in this section for the last decade. For almost ten years straight she won game after game from Pitt, W. & J., and other rivals and has stood pre-eminent in Western Pennsylvania.

HUNTERS BAR AIRPLANE.

New Jersey Nimrods Seek Laws Against Hunting from Machines.

The rapid development of the airplane in warfare has suggested such vast possibilities for the machine that steps have already been taken to curb its activities in peaceful pursuits. For one thing, it will not be possible to hunt wild game with or from an airplane in New Jersey if the New Jersey Fish and Game Conservation League succeeds in its present campaign.

This organization, which was formed last November, has prepared a bill to be presented at the present session of the State Legislature which includes among other features, a measure to prohibit hunting with or from flying machines. The organization has seen in the airplane a new menace to beast and fowl. It has been realized that with an airplane wild game could be trailed and run down in the most inaccessible haunts. A deer would have slight chance to escape hunters overhead, and birds would have no escape in flight from the hunters.

The New Jersey organization represents about 3,500 hunters and anglers and is making a strong campaign to protect the game in the State. It expects to have its bill adopted at Trenton.

Among other features of the bill are measures to postpone the opening of the deer season until Dec. 15, and to unify the State and Federal laws governing migratory bird shooting. Legislation is also sought for the protection and propagation of fish.

TIGER CREW BEGINS WORK.

'Varsity Eight is Composed of Veteran Oarsmen.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 1.—Work on the machines has started at Princeton in preparation for the coming crew season, and Coach John Fitzpatrick is very hopeful as to prospects of a successful eight. An abundance of excellent material has turned out for rowing, and among the 'Varsity candidates are a number of oarsmen with considerable experience. Five of the men at present rowing in the first 'Varsity boat participated in intercollegiate races last year.

Bill Paxton whose work at stroke last year was in large measure responsible for the good showing of the Tigers, has been elected Captain for this year and he will stroke the eight again this season. At present the following men comprise the 'Varsity eight: W. M. Paxton, stroke; C. R. Gregor, 7; L. C. Rhoades, 6; W. B. Bryan, 5; P. C. Walter, 4; B. S. Michael, 3; J. G. Campbell, 2; E. R. Gardner, bow.

Although no definite schedule has yet been arranged, several races are under consideration. It is probable that the Childs Cup Race will be held on Lake Carnegie. Plans are under consideration for the inauguration of an annual triangular race between Princeton, Yale, and Harvard. For this purpose the Tigers are willing to row on the Charles River this year.

Under the coaching of Keene Fitzpatrick work on the board track and in the cage at Princeton has been making rapid progress in the past week in preparation for the first meet of the indoor season. This meet will be the junior national championships of the A. A. U., to be held at Brooklyn on Feb. 15 in the 23d Regiment Armory. This will be followed by the Boston Athletic Association games March 1; the senior national A. A. U. championships on March 8, and the Meadow Brook Club's games in Philadelphia, on March 15. The only dates which have yet been arranged for the Spring term are the Penn relays on April 25 and 26, and a dual meet with Yale on May 10.

The Tigers will be handicapped in the junior national championships by the inability of Captain Erdman and Van Cleve to compete. Erdman is ineligible to enter the meet on account of having won the intercollegiate championship last year in the hurdles. Van Cleve will be unable to compete for at least a month, as he strained a ligament in his leg.

With freshmen eligible for several meets this season, considerable interest in track events is being shown by the first-year men, and this year's squad is the largest in a decade. There are three interscholastic champions among the entering men, all of whom ought to prove point winners for the 'Varsity next year. Swede, from Mercersburg, holds the two-mile title and is one of the foremost distance runners in the East. He will probably be entered in the mile and two-mile in both the Penn relays and the junior national championships.

CORNELL OARSMEN BUSY.

Preliminary Training for Crew Already Under Way.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 1.—A boom in rowing at Cornell University is indicated by the large number of undergraduates who are registering for varsity, freshman and intercollegiate practice in the crew room at the gymnasium, and by the keen interest manifested in the plans of the athletic association to arrange two varsity races for Ithaca this spring, one on Spring Day in May, the other for June 21, the big day of the Cornell Semi-Centennial Celebration, which will bring thousands of alumni to Ithaca.

More than 150 students have come out for varsity and freshman rowing so far, while a big intercollege rowing squad is expected when outdoor rowing can begin. Cornell has undertaken to put intercollege rowing in charge of the varsity coaches, thereby establishing a precedent that may be adopted in other sports. Trustee and faculty members have been urging the extension of the intercollege system. The athletic association is willing to give the use of its plant for that purpose, and the coaches are willing to give skilled coaching to intercollege athletes.

Although Charles E. Courtney, who at seventy, comes back as head coach, will not be called upon to do as much work as in his younger years, he is nevertheless the final authority in rowing. John Hoyle will attend to much of the detail both in the boathouse and crew room, while in the Spring John Collyer will come here to help in putting on the finishing touches. Courtney believes that with the distribution of work he can undertake the coaching job.

YALE CREW PLANS MADE.

Triangular Meet on the Housatonic Is Planned.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 1.—Harvard's acceptance of Yale's challenge for the annual regatta on the Thames during commencement week in June has practically completed the Eli rowing program for the season. Princeton is planning to send a crew to the Housatonic River at Derby to meet Yale early in May. Cornell has been invited to enter this race, making it a triangular two-mile affair.

It is not likely that Yale will send her two 'Varsity crews to Philadelphia during Easter week to meet the University of Pennsylvania. Yale has restricted its rowing expenses this season. For the same reason, the Yale rowing squad will not make as long a stay as usual at New London, but will endeavor to send a couple of crews to the American Henley on the Schuylkill in May.

Yale was delighted at Harvard's acceptance of her challenge to race again at New London. Harvard sent its crew to Derby to meet Yale on the Housatonic River last year, and the Yale Rowing management was inclined to believe that Harvard would desire Yale to go to Boston to race on the Charles this season.

Yale's coaching staff this year will be Dr. Mather Abbott, a member of the Latin faculty of the university, as head coach; Rufus Hyatt, captain of the 'Varsity last year, as assistant coach, and Captain Winter Mead of the 'Varsity, who is assisting in the coaching of the record-breaking squad which is at work on the rowing machines in the gymnasium. At present eight 'Varsity and eleven Freshman crews have registered. If the mild weather continues, the entire squad will be transferred to the George Adee boathouse for outdoor rowing within a fortnight.

With the exception of Captain Hyatt, the entire 'Varsity eight of last season is again among the candidates. This includes the following oarsmen: W. Austin, L. G. Adams, J. McHenry, C. D. Munson, D. Vail, S. H. Knox, M. Patterson and M. W. Borders.

TRINITY FAVORS BASEBALL.

College Abandons Track Athletics in Favor of Diamond Game.

Track athletics at Trinity College have been temporarily abandoned as a major sport in deference to baseball. This action was taken at a recent meeting of the Hartford institution's athletic association. In deciding to have representation in baseball the Trinity authorities were prompted by the fact that the diamond game is more nearly self-supporting, and provides a longer schedule.

This year's baseball activities will be curtailed somewhat in comparison with those of previous years. It is even possible that the proposed Southern trip around Easter recess will be abandoned because a curtailment of the recess to four days makes an extensive trip impossible. It is planned to arrange a schedule of ten games. In former years about eighteen games were played.

PRINCETON FAVORED IN HARVARD SPORTS

Tiger Crew May Be Invited to Participate in Regatta at New London.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 1.—The cross-roads that are admitting Princeton into the athletic affections of Harvard are by the same token to all intents providing the path that is carrying Cornell away from all dual athletic competition at Cambridge. In other words, Princeton is taking the place of Cornell in Harvard's athletic program, and the triumvirate of Harvard, Yale, and Princeton is fast becoming a reality.

Furthermore, Princeton is being acclaimed with more warmth at Harvard than was Cornell, in fact, strange as it may seem, has usurped the place that Yale has held in two sports for a number of years. And the Jungleers may not even now be finished in their athletic invasion of Yale's place on the Harvard calendar.

The break between Cornell and Harvard in track athletics severs the last tie that bound these two colleges in major sports. The pair for a number of years haven't met on the diamond or hockey rink, and their rowing and football relations ended in 1916. The expense of the trip to Ithaca this year is the reason assigned at Harvard for the failure to meet Cornell on the track.

Cornell, with her mighty teams in all sports, could not really be treated as a minor opponent at Harvard, and the Ithacans demanded, as was their right, that the Crimson should repay each visit that was paid them at Cambridge. This brought a trip which Harvard found expensive, as well as trying, and indications are that during the present year the Crimson will not oppose a Cornell athletic team of any kind.

Harvard men in the past have presented convincing arguments that their teams are developed solely for the purpose of defeating Yale, and these dual clashes have furnished the climax of their respective seasons. Any defeat on the way to this great objective has been generally passed by slightly with the statement that it is the Yale game that counts only. A victory over the Eli Blues spells a season worth while, even if every game leading up to that achievement is a defeat.

Harvard taking on Princeton in hockey and track after its so-called objective contests with Yale is something to ponder over. Since Hobey Baker first skated his way into the affections of the American hockey fans, the Crimson has regarded the Tigers as an opponent more to be respected than Yale, and that may have something to do with scheduling the Princeton-Harvard battle at Brooklyn, N. Y., two weeks after Yale is engaged on the same surface.

This situation, however, does not hold true in track. Princeton has been offered May 24 for a meet in the local stadium. This date is the Saturday following Harvard's venture against Yale at New Haven and the customary relaxation that follows a meeting between the two rivals cannot safely be felt by the Crimson now with the Tigers awaiting them a week away. Harvard's track men then must be developed to be at their best for the Princeton, instead of the Yale meet.

Even Princeton may be taken this year into the New London regatta, which Harvard and Yale have rowed as dual opponents for a number of years. These two rivals are in favor of a return to the Thames, and Princeton, it is understood, wants to be a third party to a race with its rivals over some course, and may be included in the Thames regatta, which the distance purposely cut down for her from four to two miles.

Should this be brought about, there is a strong likelihood that in the near future the triangular football meetings of the teams will be made in rotation. Yale and Princeton men have often objected to the present system which allows Harvard a week between its big games, while Princeton and Yale are forced to play their important contests two Saturdays running. If things move along as fast as they appear to be doing, the Yale-Princeton or Harvard-Princeton football match will replace in turn the customary Harvard-Yale contest as the final game between these great rivals. It is only a question of time when this will be brought about if Harvard, Yale and Princeton are to enjoy equally the fruits of their triangular comradeship.

RELAY TEAMS PREPARING.

More Than 100 Schools Have Entered for Penn Carnival.

Judging by the numerous acceptances to date, the twenty-fifth annual relay carnival to be held on Franklin Field on April 25 and 26 will be more widely represented than ever. Though the college invitations have been out only ten days and the high and preparatory school invitations scarcely a week, the list now shows 30 colleges, 50 high schools, and 25 preparatory schools—106 institutions in all. This is a larger entry list than ever before at this date, and indicates that the American colleges and schools are getting back into track and field athletics with a rush.

The Eastern colleges are coming in fast. The Middle States Conference A. A. relay championship, which is now one of the annual features of the carnival, already has a splendid entry with Dickinson, Franklin, and Marshall, Haverford, Lehigh, New York University, Rutgers, and Stevens Institute. As Lafayette, Swarthmore, and Washington and Jefferson are sure to enter also, this race should be one of the best of the day. Charles R. Cox, graduate manager of Georgetown, writes that they have twenty-six candidates out for the team.

Pennsylvania's stock took a decided slump the last week with the inability of Smith to enter college again and the order from Dr. McKenzie that Landers, Pennsylvania's champion, do no running over the 100 yards because of an abnormal blood pressure. Landers and Smith can both do the quarter in 50 seconds, so this is a great loss for the Red and Blue. Gustavson, Davis, and Hammond are three good men, so Penn is not altogether out of the running, but at present Princeton, Pittsburgh, and Harvard all have the men for fast teams.

The preparatory schools are making a better showing than usual in their entries. Germantown, Friends Central, Penn Charter, and Episcopal, the entire Interacademic list, have entered for the championship, and at present it looks like an open race. Episcopal has lost all four of last season's winning team, which leaves Penn Charter as the favorite.

The high school entries flow in so fast that it is difficult to keep track of them. Newark Central and Philadelphia Northeast are two entered already for the American high school relay championship. Brooklyn Manual, a school that formerly ranked with the fastest in the country, will try to stage a come-back this season. The opening of several new high schools in Brooklyn took away many of their finest boys, but they hope to show something here on April 26.

BROWN BACK AT WILLIAMS.

Other Stars Raise Hopes for Strong Football Team.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Feb. 1.—The return of a number of members of the crack football eleven which represented Williams in 1917, when the season was completed without a defeat, has led to high hopes for the Purple's chances on the gridiron this coming Fall.

"Ted" Brown is the latest player to resume his studies after receiving his discharge from the service. He attended the officers' training school at Camp Devens. He was captain-elect for last year, but was not on hand to lead the team.

In addition to Brown, the Purple eleven for 1919 will have the services of Carick and Bonnar, ends; Fieser, a guard, and Wright, who was Benny Boynton's understudy at quarterback. Before the gridiron season comes around it is likely that more veterans will be back at college.

WILL NAME TENNIS DATES.

U. S. N. L. T. A. Will Announce Season's Plans This Week.

Plans to make the tennis season of 1919 the most successful in the country's history will be discussed at the annual meeting of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on Friday, Feb. 7. Recent developments abroad point to a rapid revival of interest in international competition. England has restored its championship, France has challenged for the next Davis Cup contest, and Italy is reported ready to enter. Under such circumstances the association anticipates a greatly increased interest in the game here, which entails careful consideration of the problems confronting the annual meeting.

This will begin at 3 o'clock, and the intention is to finish the business at one sitting, so that the evening may be left free for a "victory dinner" in honor of the President, George T. Adee, and other tennis men who have returned from military service. The dinner will be one of the most popular features of the meeting, for during the war these gatherings were purely businesslike, and this will be the first chance the tennis enthusiasts have had to enjoy themselves. Reservations can be made through Paul B. Williams, 20 Broad Street.

The association's wartime activities will be reviewed in various reports, dealing with its campaign to finance and recruit ambulance sections for the Government, and to provide tennis equipment for men in the service. Figures recently compiled show that the association furnished equipment for more than 100 tennis courts in military camps, Secretary Edwin F. Torrey also is understood to have compiled a report, which will come as a surprise to the members, detailing several matters which have not previously been on record.

Several important committees will report, among them being those in charge of ranking, balls and supplies, umpires association, rules, equalization of voting power, national doubles and singles, and the Davis Cup. These, together with the officers' reports and the new business which always develops, promise to provide plenty of material for discussion. Meetings of several committees have been called for Friday forenoon and the Executive Committee will assemble at noon.

The officers have been renominated and no contest is expected to develop, the ticket being: President, George T. Adee, New York; Vice President, Julian S. Myrick, New York; Secretary, Edwin F. Torrey, Clinton, N. Y.; Treasurer, A. H. Chapin, Springfield, Mass.

Much interest is being taken in the award of the championships, the clay court being particularly sought after. Several clubs are out for it and will have representatives present to urge their claims.

BOOSTS COLLEGE TENNIS.

Major Moore of Harvard Advocates It as Compulsory Student Sport.

Compulsory athletics at least three times a week is the plan advocated by Major Fred W. Moore, Graduate Treasurer of Harvard athletics. Major Moore does not believe that physical work of this sort should count toward a degree, as many physical educators do. He believes also that some sort of sport or game is far superior to any set system of physical exercises. He strongly approves of tennis and golf, because they would retain activity in these sports after leaving college.

Major Moore's remarks on the subject are as follows:

"It seems to me that it should be compulsory for every man to take some kind of exercise three times a week. I see no reason why such work should count toward a degree, but I believe that it should be required, together with some sort of advisory physical examination twice a year.

"A sport or game is much preferable to calisthenics, and so I believe that if men were required to take exercise they would learn golf or tennis or some other sport which they might keep up after leaving college. It is not only the exercise that is needed; there is also the spirit.

"The man who lies awake a week before the Yale game wondering how he will play his part in it, probably gains little actual pleasure from football. But he has gained the spirit to fight to the end, which is of value whether it be in athletics, or law, or research work.

"Moreover, this spirit will permeate the whole undergraduate body, and not only determine the opinion held by others as to the character and spirit of a college, but also determine that very character itself. Just as the new recruit in the marines fights better because of the great reputation of that body, so the acts of the men on the field affect the general attitude of the undergraduates. Intercollegiate athletics as an example and stimulus are not only beneficial but even necessary."

WOMEN STARS IN NET PLAY.

Miss Bjurstedt, Miss Sears, and Others Enter Casino Heights Tourney.

The best women tennis players in the East are among the entries in the Women's Invitation Tennis Tournament which begins at the Heights Casino in Brooklyn tomorrow afternoon. Besides Miss Molla Bjurstedt there are Miss Eleanor Goss, Miss Marie Wagner, Mrs. Rawson Wood, Miss Helen Pollak and Miss Clare Cassel of the Metropolitan district.

Other prominent players are Miss Eleanora Sears, Miss Marian Zinderstein, and Mrs. George Wightman of Boston. The list of entries is as follows:

Miss Molla Bjurstedt, Mrs. S. Fullerton Weaver, Miss Marie Wagner, Mrs. Rawson Wood, Mrs. W. H. Pritchard, Miss Eleanor Goss, Mrs. De Forest Candee, Mrs. Albert Humphries, Miss G. Della Torre, Miss A. C. Cragin, Miss Helen Pollak, Mrs. M. B. Huff, Miss Julie Brown, Mrs. Edward Raymond, Mrs. E. P. Shattuck, Mrs. Chisholm, Miss C. Winn, Mrs. D. C. Mills, Mrs. M. D. Straffin, Mrs. Briggs, Mrs. H. Green, Miss Gott, Mrs. Barger-Wallack, Mrs. S. Waring, Miss Eleanora Sears, Miss B. Holden, Miss Marian Zinderstein, Miss A. Hooker, Miss B. Hooker, Mrs. George Wightman, Miss H. Hooker, Miss Clare Cassel, Mrs. T. Cassebeer, and Mrs. Lohst.

TRY MASS ATHLETICS.

Program at Penn State Is Developing 'Varsity Athletes.

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., Feb. 1.—The Winter mass athletic program at Penn State is now fully under way, and the gymnasium is being used during every spare hour. In addition to the time given to coaching the 'Varsity basket ball and wrestling teams, Coaches Bezdek and Harlow are busy with the interfraternity contests, in which about 600 men are participating. Harlow is also devoting considerable time to some seventy-five men who are out for boxing, and they are rapidly becoming proficient in the art of self-defense.

The Interfraternity Basket Ball League, composed of forty teams, has completed its first week, and approximately forty-five games have been completed. A handsome cup has been provided, and it will be awarded to the winning team.

Interclass contests have featured the work of the wrestlers under the direction of Coach Yerger. As a result of the interclass meet held this week, some strong material for the 'Varsity squad has been unearthed, and Yerger feels greatly encouraged over the outlook. Shaulis, a strong wrestler on last year's freshman team, has entered college, and he will make a big bid for a 'Varsity berth. Captain Brown has been compelled to keep out of harness for the past few days as a result of an injury to his arm. He will be in shape for the opening meet on the 22d of this month, however.

FOX HILLS OFFERS COURSE FOR PROS

Cream of Professional Golfers Will Compete in Annual Tournament.

The Fox Hills Club has officially offered its course to the Professional Golfers' Association for the latter's championship tournament to be held next Summer. Recently the pro body asked the Metropolitan Golf Association to reserve the third week in August for its tournament, which will be similar to the one held at Siwanoy in 1916.

Already several other nearby organizations, including Shackamaxon and Canoe Brook, have signified a willingness to handle the event. This meeting, by the very nature of the conditions, should attract the cream of the professional talent, as only those who have qualified in elimination tests are eligible. The Fox Hills offer also includes a preliminary day when amateurs and professionals pair up in a four-ball competition. In that event the entertaining club expects to furnish the prizes.

Fox Hills is no stranger to tournament golf. At various times important events have been staged there. In 1905 both the metropolitan amateur and open championships were held over the links at Clifton. The open was won by Alec Smith after a tie with the late Will Anderson.

Ten years later the "met" open was again the attraction, resulting in another tie, this time Gil Nicholls and Bob MacDonald showing the way with totals of 292. On the playoff, Nicholls won. Possessing many fine holes, Fox Hills is more of a test today than ever, as the aim has always been to keep abreast of the times.

This coming season looks as though it would be a year of come-backs in golf. At least two national champions who had been out of the game temporarily have announced their intention of resuming competitive play. One of these is Mrs. Clarence H. Vanderbeck, winner in 1915, and the other is Francis Ouimet, who has been ineligible for amateur events for some time. Ouimet, who was reinstated early last year, will be a contender in the national championship at Oakmont.

Mrs. Vanderbeck, after winning in 1915, practically dropped out of golf. Since this country entered the war, she has been busy with Red Cross work, but the other day she announced that when the women gathered at Shawnee for their annual competition she would be on hand. Besides the national title, Mrs. Vanderbeck won the Women's Eastern Golf Association tournament in the same year. She also captured the gold medal for the low gross score in the qualifying round of the national event at Onwentsia in 1915.

Francis B. Warner, Secretary-Treasurer of the Golf Association of Philadelphia, will endeavor to issue a handicap list as soon as possible, provided the clubs can be persuaded to send in their reports. As no handicap list has been issued in two years, the clubs, in making their returns, will have to start all over again.

SEEKS TITLE GOLF EVENT.

Baltimore Wants Amateur Championship Event for 1920 Season.

Baltimore is expecting to land the amateur golf championship tournament of 1920, according to reports from the Maryland City. At the recent meeting of the United States Golf Association, Maurice Tyson Ellicott, representing the Roland Park Club, made application for the tournament for next year. Ellicott's was the first bid received. Sterling E. Edmunds of St. Louis also made a bid for the fixture.

Golfers of the Baltimore district are planning a concerted agitation for next year's award. Ellicott on his return to Baltimore, said he expected approval from the majority of the officers in the movement to land the championship for Baltimore. It is planned to conduct the play over the links of the Baltimore Country Club. If the tournament is awarded to Baltimore, it will be the first time that the national golf championship has been decided south of the Mason and Dixon line.

SCARSDALE CLUB ELECTS.

Clubhouse and Golf Course Are Being Improved.

At the annual meeting of the Scarsdale Golf and Country Club the following members were elected to the Board of Governors to serve from one to three years: E. C. Holsten, Frank O. Ayres, Frank E. Bethell, Thomas F. Burgess, Philip W. Russell, George A. Harwood, E. B. Marchant, H. V. Conrad. The officers elected by the Board of Governors for the year 1919 were Frank E. Bethell, President; Philip W. Russell, Vice President, and George A. Harwood, Secretary. The office of Treasurer has not yet been filled.

During the temporary closing of the clubhouse it will be thoroughly renovated and improved. Changes will be made in some of the holes on the course. The committee in charge of the different activities of the club are planning numerous events, and expect a very successful year.

BILL O'HARA IS A TRAPPER.

Former Ball Player and Soldier Gathers Fur in Canada.

From major league baseball player to trapper in the northern district of Canada is a far cry. Such is the career of Bill O'Hara, who formerly disported himself in the regalia of a big New York Giant. More recently O'Hara was a soldier in France. He participated in some of the thickest of the fighting and was wounded.

With O'Hara is Mack Murray, a former Canadian football star. Together they are running a trap line on the shore of Echo Lake, about ten miles from the Canadian alien enemy camp at Kapukasing. In writing of his work as a trapper, O'Hara said that while there is an abundance of rabbits, moose, bear, marten, fox, lynx, deer, and otter tracks, the trapping "isn't much."

This has caused O'Hara to evolve an idea which provides for the employment of modern methods in getting fur. In writing of the matter O'Hara says:

"We have been considering the adoption of modern methods of getting fur. We learned a few things during the war. One of the chief difficulties is in getting the fur to market—when one has any fur. Airplanes will do the trick. We have also applied to the War Office for an observation balloon from which to scan the country roundabout, machine guns to mow down herds of moose and deer, hand grenades for bear dens, and searchlights to blind the denizens of the wild at night."

This Puppy May Be Winner.

Many of the fanciers who have seen the bull terrier puppy, Noross Vanguard, think he will be the runner-up to his sire, Haymarket Faultless, at the Bull Terrier Club's specialty show in Madison Square Garden, Feb. 18. This "Victory" show bids fair to be the best held in America.

CRAGIN DEFEATS POSTLEY.

Advances to Third Round in Seventh Regiment Tourney.

Arthur S. Cragin won his way through the third round of the Seventh Regiment Indoor Tennis Championship at the armory yesterday by defeating A. C. Postley, 6—2, 6—2. Cragin had no trouble in beating his opponent, his swift drives keeping Postley at a disadvantage.

In the Class B tournament H. S. Follett and Jay Anderson won their way through the semi-finals and will meet for the title. Follett defeated W. H. Hax 6—1, 6—1, while Anderson won from Harold Moore, Jr., 6—3, 6—3. The finals will be played next Saturday.

ETHICAL DEFEATS PAWLING.

Local Basket Ball Five Wins Handily by Score of 31 to 20.

The Ethical Culture School basket ball team came back this afternoon and defeated the Pawling School quintet by the score of 31 to 20 on the Pawling court. The New York boys took the lead and kept it throughout. The score at the end of the first half was 14 to 5 in favor of Ethical.

In the second half the Pawling aggregation pulled up a bit, but the Ethical team tightened, and that was the finish of the Pawling hopes. The Ethical team showed superior skill in passing and shooting.

The lineup:

Ethical, (31.)	Position.	Pawling, (20.)
Kurtz	R.F.	Schoonmaker
Levien	L.F.	Nelson
Doolittle	C.	Swan
Schlesinger	R.G.	Kieser
Wilenchick	L.G.	Helmer

Goals from field—Kurtz, (4,) Doolittle, (4,) Schlesinger, (3,) Levien, (2,) Swan, (5,) Schoonmaker, Nelson, Helmer. Goals from fouls—Kurtz, 5 out of 8; Nelson, 4 out of 7. Referee—William S. Cooke, De Witt Clinton.

FENCING SEASON OPENS.

Columbia Has 35 Candidates Trying for Team.

The fencing season at Columbia University has opened auspiciously with a squad of about thirty-five candidates starting work. About twenty of these are for the freshman team, and already De Kay, Edward Davis and Walter Bonner have shown great promise.

Last year Columbia won the intercollegiate championship and of that team the captain, H. W. Forster, and this year's captain, Millard J. Bloomer, Jr., are back at work. Horcasitas, the individual champion last year, did not return to college, but there is plenty of material from which to choose a successor to him. Among the most promising candidates are Leo Arnand, a seasoned fencer; Edward Stelle, captain of last year's freshman team, and Contreras, captain of the yearling team of the previous year.

A tentative schedule to include Yale, Annapolis, Harvard and University of Pennsylvania has been drawn up but not yet authorized. The intercollegiate championship will be held early in April.

BUSY POLO SEASON AHEAD.

Military Camps Have Developed New Players and Mounts.

During the past year there probably has been more informal polo played in the United States than ever before. This was because the sport was so generally taken up at the camps, where it proved to be excellent training for the cavalry. Polo has thrived especially in the training camps in the Southwest and in California, the polo practice being the leading sport in the cavalry.

Many of our cavalrymen who played polo in the Philippines continued the sport here in the camps where they were stationed as instructors. Nearly all the camps in Texas and California had their polo fields, and also camps in Virginia and other Southern States.

This general participation in the game means that there will be renewed interest in polo next summer. The part that the horse has played in the war adds to the enthusiasm for the sport, and it is predicted that the sport will be so widely played that there will be more "mixed mount" play than ever before.

There will probably be so much polo that the exclusive reign of the expensive polo pony will come to an end. There will be many more ponies developed than ever before for the game, and, judging from the success which the military men have had with "mixed mounts," these will have an excellent chance in the competition with the high-priced ponies.

There is sure to be a revival of the game in the Long Island polo colonies. Already notice has been given that there is to be no trespassing whatever on the polo fields of the Meadowbrook Club, for it is planned to have them in the best condition for the coming season. Other polo fields in the vicinity of Westbury also are being prepared for a busy season.

POMERANIAN SHOW IS NEXT.

Will Be Benched at Park Avenue Hotel on Feb. 12.

The many dog shows scheduled for the near future are attracting unusual attention among local fanciers, indicating increased interest in dog breeding. The American Pomeranian Club Show, which will be held Feb. 12 at the Park Avenue Hotel, is expected to surpass any of the organization's previous fixtures. Entries are already pouring in from the leading kennels and there is a demand for extra prize lists.

The Bronx County Kennel Club will hold its all-breed show at the Bronx Casino March 5. Miss Arnolt has been selected as all-around judge, and J. A. Kelley of Newark, N. J., for the Boston terriers. The other judges will be announced soon.

More than $150 in cash and many attractive trophies have been donated to be competed for at the second annual A. K. C. show of the Yorkshire Terrier Association of America at the Park Avenue Hotel, March 17. Mrs. William C. Thompson, President, and the Bench Committee are making every effort to make the coming show more successful than the initial show last year.

The French Bulldog Club of America will conduct its annual show at the Park Avenue Hotel on a date in April. This was decided at a meeting held last Tuesday. The adoption of a definite date was delayed until a later meeting.

HUN-CHASING DOG AT SHOW.

Sergt. Williamson's Gas Enters Special Class in Garden Event.

Gas, declared by his owner, Sergeant Williamson of Uncle Sam's army, the best dog that ever chased a Hun, will be one of the entries in the service classes at the Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show which will be held in Madison Square Garden Feb. 19 to 22, inclusive. Sergeant Williamson presented himself and his canine charge at the offices of the committee yesterday and formally nominated Gas for some of the prizes which are to be distributed.

These classes are attracting unusual attention and promise much interesting competition. They will be judged on Washington's Birthday, the closing day of the show. It is expected that the uniformed men and women leading their dogs into the ring will furnish an attractive spectacle.

The entries to date have surpassed what was expected. The officials are, therefore, anticipating a successful show.

BEGIN WORK SOON ON PARK STADIUM

Officials Get Behind Project for Big Athletic Field in Van Cortlandt Park.

SEEK AN APPROPRIATION

Frederick Rubien and Commissioner Hennessy Outline Plans for Monster City Playground.

Definite steps will be taken soon which promise a realization of the long-planned stadium at Van Cortlandt Park. Officials of the Amateur Athletic Union, Public Schools Athletic League, United States Football Association, and amateur baseball authorities, are putting their shoulders to the wheel in an effort to stimulate interest in the project to the end that the proposed work on the stadium will take concrete form without further delay. The stadium has been planned and advocated now for a period of nineteen years. Plans and blue prints were submitted and drawn up as far back as June, 1900.

The agitation seems to have passed the planning stage. Frederick W. Rubien, Secretary-Treasurer of the A. A. U., who is urging the project, declared yesterday that he expected to have a quarter-mile running track completed on the site by next Fall. If this plan is realized, some of the A. A. U. championship events will be decided at Van Cortlandt Park.

Park Commissioner Joseph P. Hennessy of the Bronx, together with Arthur G. Waldreaon, the department's landscape architect, and Engineer Seymour are deciding on a campaign which promises ultimately to end in the erection of the stadium. When the construction work is completed this city will be in possession of the leading athletic field and playground centre of the world.

Commissioner Hennessy, as a result of a consultation with various athletic officials, has decided to immediately request an appropriation of between $10,000 and $20,000 from the Board of Estimate. This appropriation will be expended, according to present arrangements, on the construction of a sewer and grading the plot. The sewer will eliminate what is known as Tibbets Brook. This work will be undertaken immediately.

The site for the proposed stadium now consists of thirty acres of waste land. Commissioner Hennessy declared that the spot was an eyesore with his department, and he is heartily in favor of the plan which will improve the land. The property is south of the beginning of Van Cortlandt Park at about Broadway and 241st Street, and is just north of the site upon which stood the former home of the West Side Tennis Club. Bounding it on the north is the continuation of the Spuyten Duyvil Parkway. On the south is Van Cortlandt Park South. To the east are the tracks of the Putnam Division of the New York Central Railroad, and on the west is Broadway. The site can be reached by the west side elevated and subway routes.

Mr. Rubien has submitted a plan for the proposed stadium which provides for a quarter-mile running track with a 220-yard straightaway enclosing a field large enough for regulation intercollegiate or soccer football games. There is also provision made for ample room for the usual field athletic events, such as running broad and running high jumps, pole vault, throwing the weights, discus, and javelin.

In submitting his plan the local A. A. U. leader pointed out to Commissioner Hennessy that the field is so planned that it can be developed for various athletic purposes at little expense, leaving for the future the construction of the stadium. Mr. Rubien suggested that as early as was convenient a stadium be built which would accommodate 15,000 spectators, with provisions underneath for a gymnasium, indoor handball courts, shower baths, locker rooms, and dressing accommodations for the many thousands who annually utilize Van Cortlandt Park for recreational purposes.

It is proposed to utilize the back wall of the stadium for outdoor handball courts. West of the stand provision is made for an outdoor gymnasium for boys, girls, and men, three basket ball courts, two additional football gridirons, and three baseball diamonds. All of this is proposed for a twenty-three-acre field west of the railroad. In the seven-acre field east of the railroad provision is made for thirty-eight regulation tennis courts, where it is planned to conduct annual championship competitions.

"The whole proposition meets with my approval," said Commissioner Hennessy. "You can rest assured that this department is ready and willing to do all possible to bring about the construction of a suitable athletic field which will be a credit to the City of New York. This land is now, and has been for years, an eyesore to the department. I think it is an ideal location for an athletic field. It is well located and will localize and hold all the sports together. Our facilities for recreation are inadequate. I will give all the help I possibly can, and am open to suggestions from all those interested in the project, as I want this athletic field and stadium when finished to be the finest in the world."

A similar proposition was successfully carried out by the Park Department at the suggestion of A. A. U. clubs in 1905, when Cromwell's Creek and the marsh at Macomb's Dam Park was filled in and developed as an athletic field.

Since that time various plans have been proposed for the development of the Van Cortlandt marsh into an athletic field. Four years ago Landscape Architect Arthur G. Waldreaon prepared a plan providing for a track, outdoor swimming pool and playfields on this site. As a result of subsequent agitation an appropriation of $70,000 was made by the Board of Estimate in 1916. The field was filled in to an elevation of three feet above high water, but no provision was made at that time to fill in Tibbets brook, which runs through the property.

W. AND J. OBTAINS MURDOCH

Football Manager Will Also Supervise Other Athletics.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 1.—While formal action by the athletic council at the institution remains to be taken it is known that Washington and Jefferson College has accepted the terms of John H. Murdoch, Jr., of Washington, to become graduate football manager, succeeding Robert M. Murphy, recently resigned. In addition to handling the affairs of the football team, Murdoch will act as graduate manager of all athletic teams at the institution, thus marking a new athletic departure at Washington and Jefferson. The prospective manager is already at work on the details of the football schedule. The only gridiron battles for next year definitely signed up by Murphy before retiring were those with Pitt at Pittsburgh on Nov. 8, and with West Virginia University, at Fairmont, W. Va., on Thanksgiving.

The new manager will endeavor to arrange a big Eastern game for next Fall. Washington and Jefferson has not appeared in the East since 1916, when it played both Yale and Rutgers. If one of the "Big Three" cannot be met efforts will be put forth to secure a game with the Army, Rutgers, or Columbia.

Close Dog Show Entries Feb. 8.

Entries for the bull terrier show in Madison Square Garden on Feb. 18 will close Feb. 8. As this show will be held the day before the Westminster Kennel Club's many fanciers are taking advantage of the opportunity to exhibit at the two leading shows of the breed without leaving the Garden.

SEEKS PLACE FOR BOUT.

Rickard Is Busy Arranging for the Willard-Dempsey Match.

With the selection of Jack Dempsey as the opponent for Jess Willard, world's champion, in a heavyweight title bout to be conducted by Tex Rickard, by July 4, but one detail remains to complete the arrangements for the big scrap. This is the place where the contest will be held. Any surmises on this detail are purely conjecture. Promoter Rickard is keeping close counsel and has as yet dropped no hint of his intentions. Rickard has, it is reported, declared himself ready to go abroad with the attraction if conditions make such a move necessary. It is regarded as extremely doubtful, however, if this emergency will arise.

Dempsey's selection was popular. The Salt Lake City heavyweight is conceded the position of likely successor to Willard, and there are many who are of the firm opinion that he will score a decisive victory. Friends of Willard, on the other hand, point out that the champion will have a great advantage over his challenger which will prove favorable if the battle becomes a contest of strength and endurance.

Johnny Dundee, Italian lightweight, who is reported to have severed his connections with Scotty Montieth, his manager, has matched himself for a ten-round bout against Johnny Ray of Pittsburgh, to be held in Pittsburgh Feb. 10.

The proposed bout between Jim Coffey, Irish heavyweight, and Battling Levinsky, which it was planned to hold Thursday night at a special show of the Armory A. A. of Jersey City, has been abandoned by the Jersey City promoters, it became known yesterday. It is planned to promote the bout in Boston Feb. 12.

Joe Welling, Chicago lightweight, and Barney Adair, of Harlem, will be opponents in a bout tomorrow night at Boston. The boxers are scheduled to go twelve rounds to a decision. Welling is also reported to be matched for a bout at the Newark Sportsmen Club Feb. 10.

Unusual interest is reported in the bout between Lew Tendler, crack Philadelphia lightweight, and Billy Brady, of Syracuse, which will be held Tuesday night at Syracuse.

Willie Jackson, of the Bronx, is awaiting the outcome of a ten-round bout which will be held Tuesday night at Minneapolis. The principals will be Frankie Britt, of Massachusetts, and Matt Brock, veteran Cleveland boxer. Jackson is matched to meet the winner in a bout scheduled for Feb. 14.

Tom Gibbons, brother of Mike Gibbons, of St. Paul, will be pitted against Clay Turner, Indian heavyweight, in a bout at the Velodrome A. C. of Buffalo, Feb. 10. The bout will be for ten rounds.

Jim Coffey, Irish heavyweight, will reenter the ring Thursday night, when he is scheduled to box Battling Levinsky for eight rounds at the Armory A. A. of Jersey City. This contest will be the principal attraction in a special show arranged by the management of the Jersey City Club.

Jimmy Duffy, a west side lightweight who before the war boxed some of the leaders of the class, is the latest boxer to be mustered out of Uncle Sam's service. Duffy was stationed at a Southern army camp. He plans an extensive ring campaign.

Battling Levinsky, who was reported through with the boxing game after his knockout at the hands of Jack Dempsey, is reported matched for a ten-round bout against Bill Brennan of Chicago, to be held in Buffalo, Feb. 10.

Harlem Eddie Kelly, who is campaigning for a bout with Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, is scheduled to box Lew Tendler of Philadelphia in a six-round bout at the Olympia A. A. of Philadelphia, Feb. 10.

Joe Lynch, west side bantamweight who is abroad with the American Expeditionary Forces, will box in London, England, Tuesday night against Tommy Noble, an English bantamweight. The contest, which will be for twenty rounds, will be held at the National Sporting Club. Lynch, in a letter to his manager, Edward Mead, stated that if he is successful he will probably secure a return match with Jimmy Wilde, who scored over him in the recent interallied tournament.

Pal Moore, Memphis, Tenn., bantamweight, who defeated Wilde in a sensational bout, will box Dick Loadman of Lockport, N. Y., at the Queensberry A. C. of Buffalo tomorrow night. The contest will be for ten rounds.

Jeff Smith, former Camp Dix boxing instructor, and Johnny Howard are both reported in excellent condition for their eight-round bout, which will be held tomorrow night at the Armory A. A. of Jersey City. Both boxers are residents of Bayonne, N. J., and, for this reason, there is considerable local interest in the bout.

The next ring appearance of Pete Herman, bantamweight champion, will probably be in a bout at the National A. C. of Philadelphia. Negotiations are now progressing for a match between Herman and Johnny Murray, a local lad, which is planned for Feb. 14.

NEW ROCHELLE Y. C. ELECTS

Club Waives Initiation Fee for Army and Navy Men.

In recognition of the services rendered to the Government, the New Rochelle Yacht Club has decided to waive the initiation fee for all members of the army and navy who are eligible to join the organization. This action was taken yesterday at the annual election and dinner which was held at Reisenweber's. The resolutions adopted provide that until June 15 all men serving in or who have been honorably discharged from the United States Army or Navy, who may desire membership in the New Rochelle Yacht Club, and are found to be eligible to same, shall be admitted to membership without payment of the customary initiation fee.

In the selection of officers Commodore Charles A. Marsland was reelected. He now enters his third term in this office. Other officers elected were: Henry W. Martin, Vice Commodore; Martin S. Kettenhorn, Rear Commodore; George H. Mohr, Secretary; Henry M. Lloyd, Treasurer. The Trustees are William L. Elliott, Harold T. Birnie, and George C. Pouter. The Regatta Committee consists of George P. Granbery, W. H. Porter, and L. E. Manley, and Lieutenant Roger M. Haddock is measurer.

Despite the war, the club encouraged yachting last year and is preparing for numerous activities this year.

BASEBALL IN EUROPE.

Comiskey Thinks an International Series Is Probable.

Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, believes that baseball will become so popular abroad as a result of so many games being played by our soldiers that the near future will see world series contests between English, French, Canadian, and American teams each Fall.

"To my mind there will be an international series each Fall," said Comiskey. "Both American and Canadian soldiers have done their part in introducing the national game, and the British are beginning to think cricket a slow pastime. Frenchmen have evinced a desire to learn the sport, and the Italian in the Asiago has not been averse to playing. Japan has always possessed an abundance of material. A Japanese is naturally agile, and thinks quickly, which are two good ball-playing essentials. When we encircled the globe with the Giants four years ago we met our toughest opposition in Japan and Australia."

BUYING OF STEEL PICKS UP A LITTLE

But Manufacturers Do Not Believe That Real Business Will Begin Until Spring.

READY FOR EXPORT TRADE

Impression Prevails in the Industry That Great Britain and America Will Split Up Orders.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 1.—Developments in the iron and steel market during the last week have not been very important. On the whole there has been slightly more buying during the second half of January than during the first half, but it has been made clear that the turn of the year was not to bring a general revival in buying. In December there had been predictions that business would materially improve shortly after the beginning of the year, but there has never been any basis for expecting a radical change in the iron and steel market at this time of the year. Almost invariably improvement comes in the Spring, when there is opportunity for resumption of outdoor work on a large scale, and the expectation in the steel trade now is that there will be a material improvement in demand in the early Spring.

Operating rates vary freely at different mills, but the general average as a whole appears to be between 60 and 65 per cent. While this appears to be a low rate, it would really represent as heavy a rate of production, in actual tonnage, as the average in 1912 and 1913, the two best tonnage years before the war. Capacity increased greatly during the war, but it is probable that when a really well-distributed demand for steel comes it will engage all the productive capacity available.

American and British ocean shipping rates have been cut sharply, and the competitive condition between the two countries is not greatly altered. On the major part of the export business offered the British mills are beating the American mills, but that causes no great amount of concern, because it is recognized that Great Britain, having been a large iron and steel exporter for decades, is fully entitled to business now, and if there is anything like normal amount of export business there will be much for American mills when British mills are filled. British pig iron and steel exports in both 1912 and 1913 ran about 5,000,000 tons, and that represented more than half the British capacity. The American industry, being about three times the size of the British needs a much larger export tonnage to put it on the same basis, and a moderate amount of business lost to the British is no great concern, the chief point being whether demand from non-producing countries will really be on a large scale. If it is the American mills will get business, and the Belgian and German mills cannot be counted on for a long time.

The directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute have decided that they cannot make any recommendation to the trade as to the adoption of a new form of contract for the sale of finished steel products. While there has been a movement in some quarters to "reform" contracts and methods of doing business in the finished steel trade, not much disappointment has been expressed at the decision of the Institute directors not to act. It is reflected that while the sales methods of the mills have been criticised, on technical grounds or by comparison with methods in other industries, they have at any rate been highly successful, for the industry has prospered, and in most quarters that is considered a very good and practical test.

Pig Iron Prices Hold Firm.

Prices of pig iron, unfinished steel and finished steel products are holding very firmly, there being no signs of price cutting by any producers. There is no expectation that there will be any departures from recognized market prices for some time to come, as there is no incentive to cut prices, present buyers being willing to pay prices asked. The opinion is growing that eventually there will be material declines, but only as commodity prices generally recede, and as the cost of living is reduced. There will hardly be wage declines of consequence until the cost of living is reduced, and it is far from probable that wage reductions will be more conspicuous outside the iron and steel industry proper than within it.

A few transactions in resale pig iron are being made, almost invariably at cut prices, and that is regarded as a natural development in the circumstances. The scrap market continues to decline, and coke is weakening somewhat from time to time. Operators are curtailing production so as to avoid the making of coke that would have to be dumped on the market.

Asking prices on iron bars at the mills are as follows: Chicago mills, 2.90c, Pittsburgh; Pittsburgh mills, 2.90c, Pittsburgh; Eastern mills, 3.50c, Pittsburgh. This makes the price delivered Philadelphia 3.745c in the case of both Eastern Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh mills, while the Chicago mills' price for delivery to Chicago is 3.17c. Freights from Pittsburgh are 27 cents to Chicago, 24.5 cents to Philadelphia, 27 cents to New York, and 30 cents to Boston.

In the West a definite and open cut has been made from the Government limit. The question has been as to how far from home the Western mills would sell. Obviously, they would sell to Chicago and Western points at 2.90c, Pittsburgh, but they might not ship far against their freight. Even if they figured 2.90c Pittsburgh, equal to 3.17c Chicago, and then used 3.17c mill as a basis for shipping east, they would interfere with the market of the more Eastern mills.

It was learned during the last few days that some of the Western mills have interpreted the Pittsburgh base freely, and are willing to ship far East on that basis, even to Eastern Pennsylvania points, as well as Boston. Some sales have actually been put through for delivery at such points at 2.90c plus the freight from Pittsburgh to point of delivery. This makes nearly as low a realized price at mill as if the sale were made from Pittsburgh delivery at 2.90c flat, the through rate from mill to Eastern points being only a few cents a hundred pounds lower than the sum of the rates from Western mills to Pittsburgh and from Pittsburgh to point of delivery.

During the first half of January the operations of the independent sheet mills were at about 76 per cent. of capacity, against 69 per cent. in December and 62 per cent. in November. The increase in operations was due to the removal of war restrictions, there being many lines of sheet consumption that were designated as not essential during the war, and such consumers of sheets are now very active. The high point in filling the accumulated demand occurred in the early part of January, and operations in the latter half of the month more nearly reflect the continued demand, being probably at a trifle under 70 per cent. of capacity. The leading interest is said to be operating at 75 per cent. or more for January as a whole. Demand for sheets is almost entirely for special grades, for automobiles, enameling, metal furniture, and similar uses. Along these lines the demand is very heavy—in fact, unprecedentedly so.

The demand for common sheets, particularly corrugated sheets for building operations, is extremely light. In time of normal demand the special sheets comprise much less than one-half the total, so that when demand for special sheets produces an operation of 70 or 73 per cent. of the mill capacity, it is well seen that it is extremely heavy. The sheet market is firm, and there are no signs of any shading. At their present rate of operation mills are booked to April 1 or later, and so there is no incentive to cut prices. Current orders are almost entirely for prompt shipment, in from thirty to sixty days.

Ferromanganese Goes Down.

The reduction in the asking price of domestic makes of ferromanganese from $225 to $200 for 70 per cent., delivered, does not seem to have established a market value for the commodity, as there are no bids at anything like $200. A high appraisal of the market, as commonly understood, would be $175 to $200. There cannot be said to be any definite market for imported ferromanganese, which is 80 per cent. material, as formerly. Reports have been heard of this being available at $165, seaboard, which would be much cheaper than 70 per cent. material at the same figure per ton. In one instance a consumer who had an old contract with British producers at $165 has refused to take deliveries at this time, and an offer was made to him to cancel upon payment of $10 a ton. This, from one viewpoint, would suggest a current value of $155 for the material. The consumer desires delivery to be deferred on account of his having had to buy domestic last year, when the foreign, long overdue, was not deliverable.

The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, after operating its tin plate mills at 50 per cent. capacity for several weeks, this week had practically all its mills in operation, though not all for the full period of sixteen turns for the week. A decided increase in production, however, is reflected. There has been an improvement in specifications against old contracts. Very little has been done so far in the line of making contracts for the present half year by either the leading interest or the independents, and the last named continue to operate at about 50 per cent. of capacity. The leading interest has also increased operations at its sheet mills and this week has been working them at about 80 per cent. of capacity in that department.

Along the line of iron and steel scrap the values have continued to decline, with offerings very fair and with consuming demand extremely limited. Dealers do not appear to have much confidence in prices, as they are showing a tendency to go short of the market when they can find possible purchasers; but at the same time it is probable that there is a considerable quantity of material actually seeking an outlet. The mills do not seem to be bare of scrap by any means, despite their light purchase of late, and the number of mills that laid in stocks against the Winter is probably larger than was supposed a few months ago.

The question is often propounded as to when the time will come that the open-hearth steel producers will increase the proportion of scrap in their mixtures, seeing that scrap is obtainable at much lower prices than pig iron. With basic pig iron at $30, Valley, or $31.40 delivered Pittsburgh, heavy melting steel at $17 is very cheap, indeed. One theory advanced is that the mills are definitely waiting for scrap to reach bottom, and dealers who hold this theory make the prediction that, as not infrequently in the past, the mills will overplay the game, and when they start to buy they will find a rising market to contend with.

The pig iron market is absolutely stagnant, there being scarcely any inquiry and with sales extremely limited. Some resale iron has been put through at cut prices, but furnaces are all firm at recognized prices, as follows: Bessemer, $32.20; basic, $30; No. 2 foundry, $31; malleable, $31.50; gray forge, $30. These prices are free on board Valley, freight to Pittsburgh being $1.40. Producers of standard grade foundry coke who have it to sell have marked down their price to $6.50, not so much on account of competitive conditions as because they desired to keep the spread between furnace and foundry coke at $1 per ton, as it has been for so long a time. There are various cokes offered for foundry use at lower prices, but they are not standard. There is no market in standard coke, and the market is thus quotable as follows: Prompt furnace, $5.50; prompt foundry, $6.50. Production of coke in the Connellsville region was 277,324 tons, a falling off of 14,000 tons from the previous week.

TO REDEEM FRENCH NOTES.

J. P. Morgan & Co. Announce Plan—Heavy Dealings in Foreign Bonds.

J. P. Morgan & Co., acting on behalf of the French High Commission, announced yesterday that they would be prepared on April 1 to redeem the French 5½ per cent. notes, due that day, at the rate of $1,052.50 for each $1,000 note. In explaining this proposition, the following statement was issued:

"Many holders of 5½ per cent. secured loan convertible notes of the Government of the French Republic, due April 1, 1919, have made inquiries as to the method of availing of their option to receive payment in dollars in New York or in francs in Paris at the rate of francs 5.75 to the dollar.

"In order to permit holders of said notes, without inconvenience or cost of shipping, to obtain the benefits arising from the privilege of optional repayment in Paris at the foregoing rate, the above notes may be presented at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on the day of maturity, April 1, 1919, for payment at the rate of 105¼ per cent. of the principal amount, to wit: $1,052.50 for each $1,000 in principal amount of notes. Coupons due April 1, 1919, accompanied by proper ownership certificates, will be paid on that date at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. at the same rate, to wit: 105¼ per cent. of the face amount of such coupons."

The French 5½ per cent. notes, which closed at 104⅝ on Friday, opened yesterday at 104 13-16, rose to 105 3-16 on the Morgan announcement, and closed at 105⅛. It is believed that they will hold at that figure until the date of maturity arrives.

Incidentally, dealings in foreign Government bonds yesterday was unusually heavy and for the first time on record the volume exceeded dealings in Liberty bonds. Total transactions for the two-hour session amounted to $7,395,000 par value, of which $3,669,000 was in the foreign Government issues and $3,251,000 in Liberty bonds. A feature of the day was the advance in the City of Paris 6 per cents., which sold at par for the first time in some months.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Hancock Mine Announces Suspension of Operations.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 1.—In the first half of last month the Arizona Commercial Mining Company produced 2,653 tons of ore that averaged 7 per cent. copper. It is not the intention to curtail operations in a large way at present.

The Hancock Mine announces suspension of operations.

The Mayflower-Old Colony is maintaining its rate of from seventy-five to eighty feet of sinking a month and should continue this progress. Barring difficulties in the way of soft ground, at this rate the shaft should be down to 1,000 feet by Spring. Cross-cutting then will begin.

Butter Exportation Permitted.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Exportation of butter, prohibited during the war, will be permitted under an order issued today by the War Trade Board. The order provides for licensing of butter for exportation to all countries except Great Britain, France and Italy. Butter purchases for shipment to the three allied counries will continue under the Allied Provisions Export Commission.

AWAIT STEEL REPORT AS INDUSTRY TEST

Wall Street Inclined to Discount Dividend Reduction for the Last Quarter of 1918.

NOT WHOLLY UNFAVORABLE

Rumors Tell of Drastic Inventory Adjustments That May Account for Cut.

Wall Street has been disposed for a long time to consider the declaration of dividend on the common stock of the United States Steel Corporation as one of the barometers of industrial conditions. In view of the transition period through which industry is now passing, the dividend for the last quarter of 1918 was awaited last week with keen interest, and when it became known that another cut of 1 per cent. in the extra had been made, thereby making the dividend 1¼ per cent. regular and 1 per cent. extra, instead of 2 per cent. extra as in the preceding quarter, there was a disposition to consider this an an indicator of unfavorable conditions for the immediate future. The sentiment of doubt was shown in the action of the stock of the corporation, there being a sharp decline on Wednesday morning after the dividend cut of the afternoon before, which came too late to be felt in the market of that day.

A deeper investigation of the action of the Directors was construed by many as not being such an unfavorable sign for the future as was at first supposed. It became noised about the Street that heavy adjustments had been made in inventory to apply over the entire year, and that for this reason the earnings of the corporation, which showed only a slight surplus after the payment of the dividend on the common, could hardly be taken as indicative of the true position of industrial conditions during the last quarter of the year, and therefore could not be considered as an index for the future. This revival of confidence was not so manifest as to have a marked display in the stock market, but the downward tendency of Steel Common itself was halted, and this served to give a firmer tone to other issues which had been under pressure. The net decline in the junior steel issue was 2⅛ points, the stock closing at 89½, as compared with a low of 88¾ immediately following the dividend cut.

Whether adjustments of inventory and the like were made by the Steel Corporation is thus far only a matter of conjecture, but there is a firm belief in most quarters that drastic provisions were put in force. It is for this reason that opinion is inclined to look forward to the annual report of the Steel Corporation as the real test of future conditions than to base conclusions on the quarterly earnings statement. This report may give some inkling as to the adjustments which it is believed were made in the last quarter as well as disclosing some other interesting facts which have thus far been hidden. There is particular interest shown in the question of what became of some $30,000,000, which was returned to the company as the excess paid on the Government taxes of 1917. This amount may have been added to surplus.

COFFEE HELD UP IN BRAZIL FOR A RISE

Grade Which Sold in This Market in June at 8⅜ Cents Is Now 16 Cents.

Depleted stocks, not only in New York, but in the principal buying markets of the world, together with prospects of short crops for several years to come, are probably the chief causes of the present high range of coffee prices. There are other factors which also play a part in the situation, an important one being the "valorization" system of the Brazilian Government, whereby the planters' surplus products are used as a basis for governmental financial operation. While it may be true that the coffee planter himself is the chief beneficiary of the present situation, his real gains are not so great as the paper prices would make them appear, for he has worked under a deficit caused by overproduction for several years past, and his ability to take advantage of the present situation depends largely upon the world's willingness to accept his reasoning as to the future condition of the market.

Brazil produces more than three-quarters of the world's supply of coffee, according to figures compiled by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. Other countries grow better coffee, but in Brazil planting and growing conditions are more favorable, and there is little danger that any other nation can supplant her. Coffee prices are quoted upon the Brazilian product as a basis, and fluctuations of all grades are based upon the shifts in the selling price of Rio and Santos. In other words, Brazil controls the market.

Large reserve stocks of coffee, used as the basis of the Brazilian Government's financial operation, were held in all the chief coffee markets of the world, except in New York, at the outbreak of the war. In addition there were large stocks in Santos and in Rio de Janeiro. The lack of such stocks in New York was due to a suit brought under the Sherman anti-trust law against the syndicate which had participated in the valorization deal. The syndicate sold its holdings and dissolved itself in order to avoid complications. There was plenty of privately owned coffee in New York, however.

The curtailment of shipping and other restrictions prevented the free movement of coffee from that time forth. Reserve stocks in the various countries, including those held by private owners in New York, were rapidly depleted, but production in Brazil went on apace. The stake of the State and national Governments in the planters' operations became larger and more embarrassing.

In June, 1918, No. 7 Rio, the grade upon which quotations are based in the American importing market, was selling at 8⅜ cents per pound in New York, and the warehouses in Brazil were filled with a bumper crop of nearly sixteen million bags.

In the latter part of June, which corresponds to the last week in December in our latitude, severe frosts occurred throughout the growing region, and undoubtedly destroyed a great number of trees of recent planting. The extent of this frost has never been made clear here. Estimates were made that the 1918-1919 crop, as a result of this frost, would not be over 6,000,000 bags, with some estimates as low as 3,000,000. It was also believed that production would be curtailed for two or three years. Experts have said that a frost occurring at such a time of year could not have been as far-reaching in its effects as was claimed, but despite their opinions the price of coffee began to rise. By September it had passed 9 cents; in October it passed 10 cents, and around the 1st of January, this year, it was selling at more than 16 cents, and the users in this country were beginning to protest.

The "visible" supply in the United States, which was 2,263,000 bags on Jan. 1, 1914, was reduced to 1,310,000 on Jan. 1 of this year. At the other end, in Brazil, the situation was reversed. There, instead of about 3,000,000 bags on hand, as was the situation in January, 1914, the Government and the planters were holding no fewer than 9,296,000 bags.

Coffee men in the United States and the other countries were clamoring for stocks, but the Brazilians, holding to their belief in an approaching shortage, would sell only at prices which suited their wishes. The demand, for the reasons given above, remained constant. The United States and the other countries given to the use of coffee were willing to pay any price in order to get their customary amounts. The price naturally rose rapidly. Part of the rise to the householder may have been due, of course, to increased shipping costs, but there is no doubt that the speculation in Brazil, and the willingness of the Government to hold its stocks, are important factors in the situation. The planters believe that with the reopening of trade routes, the European demand, of which the German demand is a great part, will be greater than for the past few years, and that during the lean years to come they can unload their present surplus to advantage. They may count, too, on the effect of prohibition in the United States.

EGGS.—8,322 cases. Arrivals are sufficient to supply all needs. Some receivers have stock coming in at the close for which they have no immediate outlet. Market shows further sharp decline under continued weaker Western advices and reports of declining interior markets and prospects of large supplies in transit. Storage eggs are nominal at the moment in the absence of important trading on the open market. Nearby white eggs are lower and Californias are also pressing for sale at lower figures, market closing unsettled and irregular, with actual values not clearly defined. FINANCIAL MARKETS

Foreign Bonds the Centre of Dealings, with Prices Higher —Copper Wage Problem.

The bond market on the Stock Exchange supplied more interest than dealings in stocks yesterday, which is not saying much, perhaps, as stock trading was lifeless and marked only by the decline of a few specialties. Still, the expansion of activity, with rising prices, among the foreign Government bond issues was unusual for a Saturday, and drew attention for the reason that the turnover exceeded sales of Liberty bonds. It was the first time this had occurred. The increased demand for French 5½s was explained by the announcement that the French High Commission had arranged with the fiscal agents here for the payment of the bonds at maturity in this country on a basis which would allow holders to benefit from the franc exchange privilege the same as though they sent the bonds to Paris for payment. The advantage of this arrangement is manifest, not only in respect to the premium which holders will receive, but because the risk and details of shipment will be avoided. The principal of the bonds is to be paid plus $52.50 per $1,000 of principal on April 1. Coupons payable on that date will be met at the same rate as the face of the bonds, namely, at 105¼ per cent. The French municipal issues moved forward with the 5½s yesterday.

The discussion of wages at copper mines, which has become an active factor in the metal situation during the last few days, promises to have an important bearing on the early future of the industry. The movement to renew the sliding scale of wages has received considerable of an impulse since the demand for copper receded, and this presupposes that the producers will look for further declines of the price before new buying gets under way on a substantial scale. It may be that agreements among workers and producers to lower wages in the copper industry will promote a similar tendency in other lines, although as yet there have been few intimations of any broad wage reductions.

The statement of the Clearing House banks showed that demand deposits had declined $43,700,000 during the week, and this withdrawal of funds was reflected in an expansion of $19,000,000 in the surplus reserve. The excess reserve increase was also furthered by a gain of $12,700,000 in reserve credits at the Federal Reserve Bank. Again the paper secured by United States obligations which was discounted by the Federal Reserve Bank showed a sharp decline, amounting to $72,700,000. The bank's gold reserve declined $24,000,000, compared with an increase of $4,000,000 the week before. The amount of Federal reserve notes of the local institution declined $2,600,000, and the contraction of this item was made noteworthy by the fact that since Jan. 1 the withdrawal from circulation of this class of notes has been in excess of $70,000,000. Being closely related to commercial credits, the retirement of the notes appears to reflect the current state of business where mercantile bills are drawn to supply working funds.

Coffee Ready for Shipment Here.

From Santos, Brazil, the American Consul reports that over 500,000 bags of coffee are ready for shipment to this country. It is estimated that this will require ten ships during the next six weeks. Shipments thereof will greatly improve financial conditions in that country.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

More Financing Coming.

Although the bond market has shown recently that it has assimilated about the limit of long-time railroad and industrial bonds and is still suffering slightly from indigestion, with some dealers reporting a supply of recent issues on hand, there are indications that a large amount of financing can still be done provided the houses of issue are willing to make the prices of their offerings sufficiently attractive. In the public utility field bond men say there is a demand for the high-yield offerings and that the market is ready to take a large amount of new issues, but must have them at the right price. They say also that the demand is not entirely for short-term notes, but would apply to long-term bonds if the yield was high enough. More substantial offerings are expected in the period before the opening of the Victory Liberty Loan campaign.

No Rate War.

The uneasiness in shipping circles that followed the recent slashing of ocean freight rates by the British and the cutting of rates by the United States Shipping Board has been quieted to some extent by publication of reports that the change in rates was effected jointly and was not the result of independent action. This readjustment of rates from a war to a peace basis is so far-reaching that it appeared for a time that a rate war was threatened. The announcement by the Shipping Board that the recent cut in rates to Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, and the Far East was made after the British and American interests had co-operated, was received yesterday with considerable relief. It is expected that the news schedules will stimulate trade immediately.

Eastern Region Savings.

Savings of more than $23,000,000 a year in the Eastern Region of the present American railroad map, are estimated in the annual report of A. H. Smith, Regional Director. Mr. Smith estimates that more than $4,000,000 was saved through unification of terminals and stations, and his estimated annual saving through the elimination of passenger service was set down at more than $12,000,000. Reductions in organization and miscellaneous economics, he estimated, resulted in a saving of almost $7,000,000 more. While the more conservative railroad operators reserve comment they admit that the Eastern Region, which began the year with the worst freight congestion in its history and went through its worst Winter, came out of adversity with flying colors. One of its achievements was the carrying of 3,300,000 troops in addition to regular passenger and freight business.

The Steel Dividends.

Some idea of the prosperity which industrial companies have been enjoying during the last three years is shown by the dividends paid on the common stock of the United States Steel Corporation compared with the dividends in the prewar years. From 1901 to 1915, inclusive, the corporation paid dividends of $222,360,232. In the last three years, however, the company paid dividends of $207,133,269, an amount less by only about $15,000,000 than the dividends paid during the preceding fifteen-year period. In other words, the corporation paid dividends of 43¾ per cent. from 1901 to 1915 and 40¾ per cent. for the three-year period 1916 to 1918, inclusive.

Cuba Cane Financing.

The differences between Henry Evans and the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation as to the advisability of the sugar company putting out an issue of bonds, it was announced yesterday by Mr. Evans, had been settled at a conference held last Friday. Until this verbal understanding has been reduced to writing, he suggests that stockholders refuse to give proxies. The agreement, he believes, will, if carried out, protect the stockholders. Some definite statement is expected tomorrow.

New York Air Brake Weak.

A further decline of 5¼ points in New York Air Brake was made in yesterday's short session, the stock closing at 92¼. Pressure against this issue has been apparent for some time, the decline of the last week amounting to 12¾ points. Traders appear to have a doubt as to the continuance of the present 20 per cent. dividend rate.

U. S. Steel Bonus.

Shareholding employes of the United States Steel Corporation who have held their stock since 1914 will find their holdings quite profitable, for, under a plan just announced, they are to receive a bonus equal to $30.10 a share on their preferred stock and $21.07 a share on their common. These bonuses cover the five-year period, and, in addition to this, the shareholding employes will receive an extra bonus of $5 a share for each year his name remains on the stock books.

French Bonds and Exchange.

The announcement that J. P. Morgan & Co., acting for the French Government, will cash in the French 5½ per cent. notes, due April 1, at 105¼, means that American holders of these notes will not have to ship the bonds to Paris to get the 5.75 rate on francs, offered as an extra inducement at the time of flotation. It also means that there will be no unusual accumulation of funds at Paris looking for transfer to the United States. If the whole issue of bonds were sent over to Paris and there cashed, the money would have to be returned here by buying dollars in the French market, which might tend to upset the franc exchange rate here for a short time.

Rights and Rights.

Quite the reverse of the performance of Texas Company earlier in the week was the way Ohio Cities Gas acted yesterday, when it was learned that the shareholders of this latter company were to receive the right to subscribe to new stock totaling one-fourth of their present holdings. In the face of this offering of rights, Ohio Cities broke more than 8 points, and this after a poor showing on Friday. Texas Company, when its rights were announced, did the unusual and advanced.

American Imports Into Brazil.

A decree has been issued in Brazil continuing for this year the preferential tariff rates to certain American products. This allows a reduction of 30 per cent. on the import duty of wheat flour, and 20 on the duties of the following when made in this country: Condensed milk, manufactures of rubber, paints and colors except writing inks, varnishes, typewriters, refrigerators, pianos, scales, windmills, cement, corsets, dried fruits, school furniture and writing desks.

A BANK OF STRENGTH AND CHARACTER

Why Bonds Are Cheap

ADDITIONAL Government financing to pay war expenses and uncertainty as to the fate of the railroads is mainly responsible for present low prices of good bonds.

AFTER large wars a temporary lull in business has usually resulted, followed by a long period of prosperity and lower interest rates. With improving economic conditions it will no longer be possible to obtain the attractive income returns now available from sound bonds.

CONGRESS MAY ACT TO HELP BUILDING

Home Loan Banks on General Plan of Farm Loan Banks Have Been Suggested.

MORTGAGE BASIS FOR BONDS

Building and Loan Association Reports Show Large Withdrawals to Buy Liberty Bonds.

In an effort to promote building operations during the period when returning soldiers are seeking employment, the Department of Labor has started a movement for the purpose of extending loans through building and loan organizations to home builders throughout the country. The plan, which is still in a tentative state, provides for the establishment of Home Loan Banks in each of the Federal Reserve districts where the building and loan organizations may deposit first mortgages they already hold as collateral to put behind issues of debenture bonds somewhat similar to the bonds of the Farm Loan Banks. The bonds under the plan would be "instruments of the United States Government," and would be free from taxation.

The movement got under way on Jan. 3, according to a bulletin by the Department of Labor, which is to be issued today, when a conference was held between Franklin T. Miller, Director of the department's newly organized Division of Public Works and Construction Developments, and E. L. Keesler, President of the United States League of Building and Loan Associations. Mr. Keesler had records which showed that because of the withdrawal of some $350,000,000 of funds from building and loan associations in 1917, with further large withdrawals in 1918, in order to permit stockholders to buy Liberty Bonds, many organizations found themselves six months behind in making loans for the construction of new homes. He maintained that if building association assets, consisting of mortgages, could be made negotiable they could be used as the basis of additional credit.

The matter was considered at length at a conference of members of the Executive Committee of the League of Building and Loan Associations at the Department of Labor on Jan. 22 and 23. In the meantime investigation was made of possible ways and means for forming a plan to make long-term mortgages collateral for loans, in the course of which officials of the Department of Labor and the Treasury Department were consulted. The delegates informally decided upon this recommendation:

That a law should be advocated, modeled somewhat upon the Federal Farm Loan act and in part upon the statute establishing the Land Bank of the State of New York providing for Home Loan Banks in the twelve Federal Reserve Districts, which should have moderate fixed capital and be hedged about by adequate restrictions. The local building and loan associations would become stockholders of these banks. The banks would be authorized to accept on deposit as collateral security building and loan mortgages from member associations, and to issue therefor debenture bonds, turning over the cash proceeds to the depositing associations. The bonds and assets of the federated banks would be exempt from taxation.

The bulletin says that at a dinner later Senator Calder of New York expressed warm interest in the movement, and offered to introduce such a bill as the one suggested. Representatives Fordney of Michigan and Morgan of Oklahoma, discussed the proposal, the latter pointing out that building and loan associations being State corporations, would have to obtain legislative permission to invest in the proposed banks.

The point was made by the building and loan men that their organizations were asking nothing from the Government in the way of financial aid, and that all they wanted was permission to raise money on their assets tied up in first mortgage securities to the amount of $2,000,000,000. The suggestion was made that the associations organize for this work. K. V. Haymaker of Detroit remained in Washington after the meeting adjourned to represent the league in the plan. The selection of a Detroit man seems to be significant in view of the building situation in that city. The February letter of the National Bank of Commerce of Detroit showed that only 4,137 new buildings at a cost of $13,147,267 were built during 1918, compared with 13,090 buildings in 1916 at a cost of $46,413,780. The total of new buildings, alterations, and additions in 1918 was valued at $18,226,832 in contrast with $39,675,440 in 1917, and $51,067,110 in 1916.

COTTON IRREGULAR.

Market Closes with Net Losses of from 17 to 23 Points.

There was little interest or animation in yesterday's cotton market. At the outset prices were irregular, being off 16 to up 13 points from Friday's closing, and after the opening the movement hung fire for a time and then turned easier. Some light selling by Wall Street firms was supplemented by scattered selling later from the South, and by the end of the first hour the market was down anywhere from 20 to 45 points. Then, just before the close, the list improved a little, so that when business left off at noon the net losses on the day averaged from 17 to 23 points for the active months.

Gossip was concerned mainly with the labor situation, which promises to come to a head tomorrow, when the textile operatives will decide whether or not to accept the forty-eight hour week, with no increase in pay.

The so-called "holding movement" is also causing some concern in New York trade. The planters are being urged to hold their cotton for 30 to 35 cents, and there is the prospect of a serious shortage if this is done. But just now the ring does not fear any shortage and the bears, for the time being, appear to have all the benefits of position in the market, notwithstanding what surely must be a weakened technical condition.

The following shows the statistical position of cotton figured by The Financial Chronicle:

AMERICAN L. & T. REPORT.

Gross and Net Earnings in 1918 Below Those of 1917.

The report of the American Light and Traction Company for 1918 shows net earnings amounting to $4,014,801, which, after the deduction of preferred dividends, was equal to $13.91 a share earned on the $20,583,900 common stock. This compares with a net of $5,023,381 in the preceding year, which was equivalent to $20.25 a share on the same stock. Gross for the year was $4,326,367, which compared with $5,392,615 in 1917, and $5,859,938 in 1916.

After the payment of preferred and common dividends there was a surplus of $970,239, a decrease of $1,212,003 from the $2,182,242 surplus in the preceding year. Profit and loss surplus as of Dec. 31, 1918, was $11,869,329, which compared with $12,246,874 in 1917.

PLACE 1920 TAX BILL AT $2,100,000,000

Bank Estimates $1,100,000,000 Interest on Debt, Balance for Administration.

GIVES FIGURES FOR ALLIES

Sees $3,400,000,000 Needed by Britain and Germany, $3,000,000,000 by France.

The tax bill for 1920, which will include interest on the national debt and the cost of administering the Federal Government, according to a compilation recently made by the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, will be in the neighborhood of $2,100,000,000, of which $1,100,000,000 will represent interest on the debt, and the balance the cost of administration. This sum, huge as it is, is less, it contends, than the other belligerents will have to raise in the same year. Great Britain and Germany, the bank assumes, will have tax bills of $3,400,000,000 each, while Russia, if she decides to meet her obligations, will face a requirement of $3,200,000,000; France will have to raise $3,000,000,000, Austria-Hungary about $2,400,000,000, and Italy approximately $1,100,000,000.

On the basis of annual pre-war income the people of the United States, it adds, will have to pay into the Treasury about 5.2 per cent. of what they earn. Here again the United States has a tremendous advantage, for the British people, according to the bank's figures, will be called upon to pay the equivalent of 28.8 per cent.; the French, 40 per cent.; the Russians, 45.5 per cent.; the Italians, 26 per cent.; the Germans, 30.9 per cent., and the Austrians about 48 per cent.

Figuring the pre-war income of the Allies and the United States at $70,750,000,000, and the amount necessary to be raised in taxes in 1920 at $12,800,000,000, it is shown that 18.1 per cent. of income will be taken in taxes. For the Teutonic nations, exclusive of the Balkan allies of Germany, the pre-war income is figured at $16,000,000,000 and the 1920 taxes, for Government and interest, at $5,800,000,000, or 36.3 per cent. Incidentally, this takes into consideration only the cost of governing the Teutonic countries and their interest charges and does not make allowances for whatever indemnities may be assessed against them by the Peace Conference.

"A way to appreciate the significance of the figures," observes the bank, "is to translate them from money into the time and effort necessary to earn that money. Thus, if 5 per cent. of the American's income is to be turned over for his Government's expenses in 1920, it is clear that an equivalent percentage of his employed time will have to be devoted to producing earnings to meet the necessary taxes. So the income earned by the productive effort of the average American in fifteen out of the year's 300 working days will be necessary to support his Government. By the same measurement, the income for eighty-four of the Englishmen's working days will be necessary for Government upkeep, while ninety of the German worker's days will be required. The Frenchman will have to give slightly more than two days a week and the Austrian and Russian will have to contribute nearly half of their working time."

The bank maintains that circumstances which contribute to increasing the people's income, thus lessening the burden of taxes, may confidently be looked for. "A significant thing about all the proposals that look to overcoming the future burdens of war debt," it says, "is that they are essentially economic rather than financial."

The Problems Of Peace

by Thomas Gibson

An interesting series by this well-known writer on economic subjects starts in the current issue of The Financial World. Every investor, merchant, manufacturer and business man can follow this series to his material advantage.

How War Helped Coppers

In the current issue Carpel Breger gives a complete survey of how the war has helped twenty-nine of the important copper producers. In statistics he tells you what could not be compressed in a volume.

These two interesting articles and many others are current features of The Financial World. Send a dollar for the next eight weekly numbers.

FREE FINANCIAL LITERATURE

Where to Find News on Your Investments

The best minds of Wall Street are constantly producing valuable literature on stocks, bonds, railroads, coppers, oils, etc. These booklets, circulars and special reports contain the latest data on financial matters. They are free. Yet the investor is seldom aware of the particular one that will help him. There is only one place where this current financial literature is reviewed and indexed. That is in the magazine which every investor should have. It is the only directory of financial literature published. Sample copy of February issue—just out—free.

"Investors' Book of Booklets"

Home Loan Banks To Stimulate Building

THE leading article in The Annalist tomorrow (Monday) discusses a new law advocated to enable an increase of mortgage credit that will enable building and loan associations, whose treasuries are depleted by patriotic response to the calls of war, to be replenished to meet the demands for building operations.

It is suggested that there be legislation that will permit building and loan associations to use mortgages which they own as collateral for new loans.

An article by George Clarke Cox calls for a definite merchant marine policy on the part of the Federal Government. Mr. Cox fears that our war-given opportunity for world commerce will be lost unless a program of governmental support, which shall reduce construction and operating costs, is adopted without delay.

AN OPPORTUNITY

For a jobber or manufacturer of a food product who is desirous of a trade name that will carry with it great selling value, unquestionable atmosphere of high grade quality, and will be recognized throughout the entire United States because of several hundred thousand dollars spent in publicity and advertising given the name.

These benefits await a manufacturer of a high grade product, together with an incorporated company controlling the name and value of this publicity, ready for almost instant promotion and expansion.

The estimated worth of any product depends on the number of people who know its trade name and respect it.

Here is an opportunity for making a going business in record time. The above corporation, which has never started operations, together with the value of trade name and national advertising, can be purchased at a nominal figure.

Present owner has other interests and is unable to develop the possibilities. Write for further details, P. O. Drawer 542, Westfield, Mass., "The Pure Food Town."

A suitable annual salary will be paid to a university man of undoubted moral and social standing who will invest $25,000 in shares of a New York State corporation which has been established since 1905; duties will be to enlarge business from a local to a national institution, calling for organizing and executive ability.

No important modification will be made in the above terms and no application will be considered unless accompanied by university and bank references; correspondence will be treated confidentially. B 11 Times.

MAN WITH CAPITAL

wanted by an established concern manufacturing a NUT LOCK. It is not a split ring. The device is simple, inexpensive to make, and is an absolute lock. Requires no special bolt or nut; does not injure thread of nut. Amply protected by basic patents. It is no experiment, as the device is now in successful use by a number of leading concerns. The market is almost unlimited for a good nut locking device.

This concern desires to secure the services of a live man, familiar with the manufacturing line, who can invest $25,000. To the right man it offers a splendid opportunity. Write for full particulars to P. O. Box 556, Springfield, Mass.

PARTNERSHIP.

An exceptionally good opportunity is offered to reliable party, preferably one having the knowledge of developing a selling organization (but this is not absolutely essential) and who can invest about $5,000 in a going manufacturing business that has been selling its product for the last few years to some of the largest concerns in the United States. War brought on restrictions, and, now that there is peace, we have wonderful possibilities for developing the domestic market as well as a worldwide business. Investment will be amply secured, and right man is offered substantial interest in the business and a good salary from start. B 702 Times Downtown.

MANUFACTURING CONCERN DESIRES PLANT AND POSSIBLY MORE CAPITAL.

Large manufacturing concern, now employing several hundred people, earning more than normal return on its capital, with business increasing rapidly, has no debts, and plenty of money to discount bills current on present volume, would consider selling an interest to individuals or Chamber of Commerce who could provide 100,000 ft. fireproof plant and $100,000 of new capital required to keep pace with its increasing market; principals only will please answer. K 351 Times.

My typewriter business is now paying big returns; I need more capital in order to fill present orders and to extend its growth; if you can invest with me a small amount in cash or bonds I can guarantee you a substantial return on your investment; this is no get-rich-quick scheme, but a rare opportunity to connect with a legitimate, conservative business that is now making money. William Patten, 56 West 125th St.

Several young men, serious, aggressive, ambitious, now in leading positions in old established export and import houses, wish to start their own business organization and are looking for one or several capitalists to finance them. The Merchant's Point of View

ANY review of existing business conditions would be inadequate which failed to stress the prevailing uncertainty of mind as the principal cause of inaction. Not even the oldest of traders can recall a set of circumstances as complex and baffling as those which now confront them. Attempts to forecast the trend by reference to, or comparison with, previous periods are futile because of the points of difference. The nearest approach to similarity is probably to be found in the year following the civil war. But then the country was in great measure undeveloped. Its industries were still in the [illegible] and its foreign trade the needless lavishness of the Government purchases, an average of less than 40 per cent. of capacity was needed to supply them. A little more exact figures as to the output of boots and shoes are available, because of a report made the other day by the Census Bureau. These cover the great producing months of June, July, August, and September of last year when the output for military purposes was at its peak. In those four months the domestic factories turned out a total of 119,012,484 pairs of boots and shoes. Of these, the total for Government use was only 10,907,580 pairs, or less than 10 per cent., and this was ever so much

TALK OF A BUYER ABOUT FURNITURE

Prices to be More Reasonable and Period Styles Are Favored by Customers.

"Since the restrictions placed upon the furniture trade by the War Industries Board have been removed, conditions are far more favorable for both the manufacturer and retailer." This statement was made yesterday by a furniture buyer for one of the department stores in an interview with a TIMES reporter. He added:

"We intend to hold our annual February furniture sales as usual, and we will be able to offer some good values

FACING PROHIBITION.

Soda Fountain Manufacturer Satisfied with the Outlook.

With peace and the prospect of national prohibition, the sun is beginning to shine upon the soda water fountain manufacturer whose business has been one of those the hardest hit by the war. He is as happy as many of the corner saloon keepers who are about to turn their places into ice cream and soda parlors say they are.

"War made a big difference to us," says the head of the New York branch of a big New England manufactory. "Tin, which we get by the pig, went up from 12¼ cents a pound or so to $1 and beyond. The close-grained hard white marble, which is not easily stained and which comes from Italy, was not to be had, and the onyx, a good quality of which now comes from Southern California, was almost as difficult to obtain. We could ship to the West, but get nothing from there. In addition, there was the loss of our skilled workmen

THE CLOTHIERS' POSITION.

Why They Believe Next Fall's Prices Will Not Be Lower.

Ludwig Stein, of B. Kuppenheimer & Co., president of the National Association of Clothiers, said yesterday that the position of the manufacturers concerning future prices had not been fairly presented. His detailed statement follows:

"The clothing men have never attempted to keep up prices to the consumer, nor have they at any time stated that a readjustment was not in process. What the clothing men have said was this: That the prices for next Fall on all wool clothing would not be less than they were last Fall. The reasons for this are as follows:

"1.—The prices of heavyweight cloths a year ago were made by the mills prior to the German offensive, and our expanded military program following this offensive was responsible for the latest and most violent advance in the cost of fabrics. Manufacturers at that

wanted by an established concern manufacturing a NUT LOCK. It is not a split ring. The device is simple, inexpensive to make, and is an absolute lock. Requires no special bolt or nut; does not injure thread of nut. Amply protected by basic patents. It is no experiment, as the device is now in successful use by a number of leading concerns. The market is almost unlimited for a good nut locking device.

This concern desires to secure the services of a live man, familiar with the manufacturing line, who can invest $25,000. To the right man it offers a splendid opportunity. Write for full particulars to P. O. Box 556, Springfield, Mass.

PARTNERSHIP.

An exceptionally good opportunity is offered to reliable party, preferably one having the knowledge of developing a selling organization (but this is not absolutely essential) and who can invest about $5,000 in a going manufacturing business that has been selling its product for the last few years to some of the largest concerns in the United States. War brought on restrictions, and, now that there is peace, we have wonderful possibilities for developing the domestic market as well as a worldwide business. Investment will be amply secured, and right man is offered substantial interest in the business and a good salary from start. B 702 Times Downtown.

MANUFACTURING CONCERN DESIRES PLANT AND POSSIBLY MORE CAPITAL.

Large manufacturing concern, now employing several hundred people, earning more than normal return on its capital, with business increasing rapidly, has no debts, and plenty of money to discount bills current on present volume, would consider selling an interest to individuals or Chamber of Commerce who could provide 100,000 ft. fireproof plant and $100,000 of new capital required to keep pace with its increasing market; principals only will please answer. The Merchant's Point of View

ANY review of existing business conditions would be inadequate which failed to stress the prevailing uncertainty of mind as the principal cause of inaction. Not even the oldest of traders can recall a set of circumstances as complex and baffling as those which now confront them. Attempts to forecast the trend by reference to, or comparison with, previous periods are futile because of the points of difference. The nearest approach to similarity is possibly to be found in the year following the civil war. But then the country was in great measure undeveloped, its industries were still in the formative stage, and its foreign trade was comparatively trivial. The aggregate of its imports and exports in the fiscal year 1865—the latter including foreign goods re-exported—was only [illegible]84,774,882, which is much less than the exports alone of any one month during the last year excepting February, 1918. After the civil war, moreover, the depreciated paper currency helped for a long time to keep up the nominally high prices, and contraction came by degrees as the value of the greenback dollar approximated that of the gold one. Elements of this kind are wanting now, just as is the opportunity of providing desirable homesteads for the men mustered out of service, which helped so to solve the labor problem in 1865 and thereafter. As it happens that, before a general readjustment of values can be brought about, traders are confronted with an insistent demand from the public for lower prices in the principal commodities, with the alternative hinted at that otherwise buying will be restricted to the barest essentials. Justification for caution, and perhaps something beyond, would seem to be afforded by this state of facts.

Good Grounds for Hesitation.

In the fiscal year 1865-1866 the total domestic exports of this country were $337,[illegible]102 in value. The one great item sent out was raw cotton, whose value was $281,385,223. This left remaining a little over $56,000,000 for all the other things exported. Aside, therefore, from cotton, the country's business was almost exclusively domestic. In the fiscal year which ended just before the war began in Europe the domestic exports of this country had risen to a total of $2,329,684,025, although only $724,944,416 of this represented manufactures ready for consumption. In the fiscal year ended with last June the domestic exports were $5,847,159,678, of which $2,191,[illegible]7,089 were of manufactures ready for consumption. This last-mentioned item was almost as large as the entire exports four years before. What this implies in the way of an expansion of the industries of the country may readily be conceived. Their productive capacity has far outgrown all domestic needs, and foreign outlets are absolutely essential. Export trade in manufactures, which was negligible fifty-four years ago and was not controlling a half century later, has now become vital. The sudden check to it following the armistice, as well as the abrupt cancellation of Government contracts, has not only restricted production, but has unsettled values. Nor has the situation been helped any by the barrier against imports just set up by Great Britain. Taking into account all these circumstances, the uncertainty, with its resultant inaction, is quite logical.

Increase of Domestic Animals.

In one form or another the so-called domestic animals have been exported in tremendous quantity to Europe since the war. Horses and mules were sent over alive in great number, and the carcasses of millions of cattle and other livestock went the same way to feed the legions of fighting men and the hungry civilians of belligerent and neutral countries. Before the war, statements were issued from time to time showing that food animals were not increasing in proportion to the increase in population, and that, as a result, the time was approaching when exports of meats would cease. Bearing this in mind, many have been of the impression that the enormous exports of animals and meats have cut materially into the amounts available in this country. But the estimates just published by the Department of Agriculture effectually dispose of this notion. As compared with 1914, the number of milch cows in 1918 shows an increase from 20,737,000 to 23,467,000; that of other cattle from 35,855,000 to [illegible]239,000; that of sheep from 49,[illegible]19,000 to 49,863,000, and that of swine from 58,933,000 to 75,587,000. Even the number of horses and mules, despite the large shipments abroad for the use of the various armies, shows a gain. Of the first named, the estimated number is 21,534,000, as compared with 20,962,000, and of mules [illegible]25,000, as compared with 4,449,000 in 1914. Clearly, this country is by no means near the end of its tether in these regards as some have believed.

Shoes the Government Bought.

While on the subject of misapprehensions, it may not be amiss to refer again to the one concerning the productive capacity of industries and the proportion of such capacity which went into war needs. As is well known, people in general were informed in the vaguest kind of way while the war was in progress of the vast demands made on mills and factories for the use of the military forces. Producers apparently sought to create the impression that the Government was taking practically all of their output, and this was used as a pretext for hoisting the prices of what was graciously permitted to go to the civilian trade. Yet, in the textile trades, it has been shown that, despite the needless lavishness of the Government purchases, an average of less than 40 per cent. of capacity was needed to supply them. A little more exact figures as to the output of boots and shoes are available, because of a report made the other day by the Census Bureau. These cover the great producing months of June, July, August, and September of last year when the output for military purposes was at its peak. In those four months the domestic factories turned out a total of 119,012,484 pairs of boots and shoes. Of these, the total for Government use was only 10,907,580 pairs, or less than 10 per cent., and this was ever so much more than was needed. Perhaps, if this information had come out a few months ago, it would have been more difficult to boost the prices of footwear to the extent that it was done. Justification certainly could not have been found in the plea of the inability of the factories to attend to civilian needs as well as to those of the armed forces.

Powers of Traveling Salesmen.

More than the army of traveling men are interested in a decision just rendered by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in this department. The point involved in the case decided was whether an order for the purchase of goods was effective when taken by the traveling salesman. The court holds that such an order must be accepted and ratified by the principal before it can be binding on the latter. Its reasoning is that the salesman is merely a solicitor of business without power to bind his principal. The latter is not bound to accept the business thus offered, nor is it his duty on receiving the order through the salesman to notify the buyer within a reasonable time that the offer will not be accepted. In other words, affirmative action by way of acceptance is essential. How far this decision will tend to modify present ways of doing business is a question. In most cases, especially now, when it is once again a buyers' market, the question is not apt to be raised very often, as sellers will be only too glad to fill orders received. Then, too, the instances are likely to be few in which salesmen will take orders that are not acceptable to their employers. While the decision will tend to secure employers against the acts of careless or too eager salesmen, it may give the unscrupulous among the former a weapon to use to their own advantage when opportunity offers. Still, this situation will be checked by the fact that it pays in business to be "square," and by the further circumstance that buyers may secure themselves by insisting on prompt acceptance of orders from the principals.

Cotton Quotations and Cotton Goods.

One happening which gave a great, though temporary, spurt to cotton quotations during the week was the drastic cut in shipping rates from Atlantic and Gulf ports. This meant a decided reduction in the cost of cotton landed at Liverpool, and would naturally act toward increasing purchases of the article. What more natural, therefore, than that part of the saving in cost should be added by the exporter here? But the upward tendency refused to stay, and the quotations dropped again. By and by, it may occur to some that the greater use of cotton in a continuous way can best be achieved by having the prices more moderate and in accord with only a reasonable profit. This does not seem to be the notion of some, however. A Southern Congressman the other day was predicting 40-cent cotton, and announced his purpose of organizing growers to reduce the acreage to be planted this year in order to produce a scarcity. Meanwhile, the goods market seems to be reflecting a cheaper cost for the raw material in the reduced prices for fabrics. Even at the reductions there has been no great rush on the part of buyers to purchase, and what transactions were reported were merely for this month's delivery. Instability is shown in the refusal on both sides to enter into commitments ahead. In knit goods the situation shows little change. Buying has not been large, and some selling agents have withdrawn their lines to await more settled conditions.

Position of Wool and Woolens.

No marked change occurred during the week with regard to wool supplies on prices. Further, auction sales of Government owned wools are to take place this week in Boston. These will include both domestic and foreign varieties, the total being about 19,500,000 pounds. Increase of shipping facilities will doubtless soon bring in larger imports, particularly as these are now unrestricted by any regulations. The tendency will be to reduce the price of wool, and this seems to be worrying the sheep growers out West, who have been only partially placated by the Government's announcement that it will stop its auction sales of competing wools while the domestic clip is being marketed. Not much life is shown in the goods market. The mills are not yet prepared to fix prices, and buyers who came to town some time ago left without leaving orders. They will be back in a few weeks, when matters are more clarified. Retail clothing dealers in different parts of the country are trying to clear their shelves of goods, and are, in instances, offering substantial price reductions. The mildness of the Winter has had some effect in preventing as large a distribution as was expected, and the dealers are not anxious to carry over stock until next Winter. Even the sellers of fabrics are in pretty much the same position, although they are vigorously combating the idea that prices of staple woolens and worsteds will be lower next Fall than they are now.

TALK OF A BUYER ABOUT FURNITURE

Prices to be More Reasonable and Period Styles Are Favored by Customers.

"Since the restrictions placed upon the furniture trade by the War Industries Board have been removed, conditions are far more favorable for both the manufacturer and retailer." This statement was made yesterday by a furniture buyer for one of the department stores in an interview with a TIMES reporter. He added:

"We intend to hold our annual February furniture sales as usual, and we will be able to offer some good values in spite of the prevailing prices. The price of furniture is not going to advance; in fact, the wholesale prices will be reduced during the next six months. There has already been a reduction of 10 per cent. on metal goods. This applies mainly to iron beds, couches, and folding divans.

"One of the most important things that are taking place in the furniture trade at the present time is the cooperation between the retailer and the manufacturer in trying to produce and create a demand for furniture in period styles that can be purchased for a reasonable sum of money. As an example of this, I have made arrangements to purchase some dining-room suites in Italian Renaissance. Formerly these goods would retail at $850, but the ones I will have on the floor shortly can be bought for $350, which is a considerable reduction in price.

"There are many people today who realize that styles in furniture are equally as important as in clothes. There was a time, however, when little interest was taken in the designs of furniture, but now people are becoming more educated to this, and when they come into the store they ask for certain styles, such as Adam, Chippendale, or Louis XV.

"It may be of interest to know that if a room is not properly furnished it is bound to be most nerve racking to the occupants. Harmony in furnishings is an all-important factor and many family jars could be avoided if people could be made to realize this fact. Take, for instance, the furnishings of many homes about twenty years ago. On the floor were a couple of small rugs, one showing Admiral Dewey sailing up Manila Bay, and another picturing a flower garden through which a green dog is chasing a red cat. In one corner of the room stood a freshly painted fire shovel with a big pink ribbon tied around the handle. In another corner was the old family rum jug which had figured in many wild nights, now resting peacefully and studded with bits of broken colored glass.

"The old what-not or catch-all, bearing a large collection of sea shells, was considered a very important piece of furniture. Then there were the old stiff-back chairs, coverd with haircloth, which were never designed for comfort. On the walls were the enlarged family portraits in heavy gold frames, with Ma resting her hand on Pa's shoulder, and pictures of the rest of the family, including Aunt Lizzie and Uncle Jake.

"The contrast of such a home with the one of the present time is amazing. Today the keynote of furniture designs is simplicity, beauty, and comfort, and everything is in harmony with the surroundings.

"Very few changes have been made in the styles for this year. For the bedroom Louis XV. and Colonial are among the prevailing styles, while for the living room mission, Adam, Louis XVI., and Queen Anne are still popular in mahogany, walnut, and oak. For the dining room William and Mary, Chippendale, and Sheraton are much in favor. I might add that mission is coming back very fast. One reason for this is that it is plain in its design, yet it is strong, durable, and comfortable.

"Of late we have received many calls for willow and reed furniture in the natural finish, painted or stained. The demand for decorative furniture appears to have lost its popularity to a great extent.

"In order that our salesmen may become better acquainted with furniture both as regards construction and the various styles, we have a lecture once a week on the subject and go into great detail. We are doing this so that all of the men in the furniture department will be able to tell at a glance one style from another. This probably appears easy to the average person, but it is really not so, and requires much time and study.

"The one thing that I want to bring out mostly is that when the moderate priced period styles are placed on the market it would be to the advantage of the public to buy furniture of this kind. Then they will have something that will always be good, and the design will be in keeping for years to come, whereas in some furniture the styles are good for a year or so and then out they go. If people would only bear this fact in mind, I feel sure that they would derive more benefit from their furniture and be better satisfied with it in the end."

SALES OF PLAYING CARDS.

Plenty of Them Have Gone Abroad for Use of Soldiers.

At the exhibitions by different firms which have obtained designs from Metropolitan Museum of Art collections, now being shown at the Museum, one is from a big playing card manufacturer. The latest card back of the company is not, however, one from the Museum designs, but is a patriotic one showing the Bedloe's Island Goddess of Liberty surrounded by the flags of the Allies. These cards have been going over to the other side in immense quantities during the war to the Young Men's Christian Association, the Knights of Columbus, and most of the other organizations, a part of whose business has been keeping the soldiers amused during their leisure hours.

There has been practically a cessation of card making on the other side of the water, and America has had to make good. The foreign sales have been balanced to some extent by a less amount of card playing in this country where many women players have devoted themselves to war work. The war has kept the card man hustling to fill his orders, even with Federal taxes amounting to 7 cents a pack. At the same time he will not admit that he is doing more business, considering pros and cons, than he would be in normal times with the usual increase of the population.

Sales of Gray Goods.

For a Saturday, and considering the present mill conditions, there was a fair amount of business done yesterday in the local gray goods market. There is a disposition all around to wait for the labor situation to define itself before larger trading is indulged in, and the climax is expected during the present week. Among yesterday's printcloth sales were 39-inch 80 squares and 68-72s at 15 and 11¼ cents, respectively; of 38½-inch 64-60s at 9¼ cents and 32-inch in the same construction at 8½ cents. In sheetings sales were had of 36-inch four-yard goods at 13 cents and of 6.15-yards at 8¾ cents. Sales of poplins, twills, and venetians at prevailing prices were also made.

Change in an Old Firm.

The estate of Simon Sterns & Co., Inc., makers of muslin underwear, has sold its entire interest in the corporation to William S. Sterns, Benno Cohen, and Maurice S. Samuels, who will continue the business, which has been established for more than half a century. W. Monroe Weiss, Jack Grabschrift, and Thomas J. Atkinson will continue as representatives, while Mr. Sterns will look after the Boston trade and Mr. Samuels after the Middle West, as heretofore. Gustave Wertheim will attend to the local trade in New Jersey and Long Island. The showrooms of the concern are in the Wilson Building at 1,270 Broadway.

FACING PROHIBITION.

Soda Fountain Manufacturer Satisfied with the Outlook.

With peace and the prospect of national prohibition, the sun is beginning to shine upon the soda water fountain manufacturer whose business has been one of those the hardest hit by the war. He is as happy as many of the corner saloon keepers who are about to turn their places into ice cream and soda parlors say they are.

"War made a big difference to us," says the head of the New York branch of a big New England manufactory. "Tin, which we get by the pig, went up from 12¼ cents a pound or so to $1 and beyond. The close-grained hard white marble, which is not easily stained and which comes from Italy, was not to be had, and the onyx, a good quality of which now comes from Southern California, was almost as difficult to obtain. We could ship to the West, but get nothing from there. In addition, there was the loss of our skilled workmen—men not to be picked up on every corner—and with that many of the soda water places went out of business. Others lost men, and in the small concerns in drug stores, where they didn't understand making application for sugar, they could obtain only enough for use in their regular business and they gave up soda entirely.

"We are now already doing four or five times the business we did last year, and it is practically at the point where it was before the war. It is hazardous to say what it will be with national prohibition. The drinking of soda and the fancy ice cream varieties has increased to a great extent. I can remember, thirty years back, when men would go into a big place down on lower Broadway and get a phosphate or calisaya, but if they were seen taking an ice cream soda they would be guyed about it at the club. People considered it effeminate. Now, quite as many men as women take them—the soldier is a big patron. I take them myself, and I am not a teetotaler.

"With national prohibition the soda habit will largely increase. There are at least half a dozen hotels in New York which are talking over with us the pros and cons of turning their bars into soda water fountains, and this is going on all over the country. We have a photograph from a Salt Lake City hotel which has turned its bar into a very attractive soda fountain. A number of the corner saloon men are also considering the change. One Third Avenue man said he would be very glad to do it, and his family would be equally pleased. Their customers are often unpleasant and make trouble, and he will be glad to be forced out of the business. I stopped into a little roadhouse down on Long Island one day, and asked the man what he thought about the change, and he was looking forward to it:

"'The change can't come too quickly for me,' he said. 'All I have to do is to take down the stained glass in the front windows so that people can look in, change the bar into a soda fountain, get new tables, a little more modern, for the accommodation of the women guests, and I will serve a light lunch.'

"The corner saloon man will do much the same thing. There will not be much trouble for some of them where it will be necessary to make only a few alterations to the bar. It will not be the innovation it would have been some time ago. There is one large firm down town which has a dozen places in different office buildings where it has put in soda water fountains and sells sandwiches."

GIFT GOODS SELL WELL.

Demand Continues in the Trade for Seasonable Trinkets.

Gift shop specialty houses report a first-class business for January. Buyers for the shops were doubtful about the Christmas trade and did not lay in a great stock, and a big holiday trade depleted their shelves. Gift specialties do not miss a season or a holiday. None is of too little consequence for it to meet with appropriate novelties, and the trade is one for the entire year.

It is a business that has developed and grown largely within the last three years and, for the last two, has made a step in advance in getting into the department stores. These found they could not compete with the gift shops with the same goods in different departments. Now they have special buyers for the gift department who may duplicate with impunity the goods of any other department—stationery, toys, &c.—any kind of a novelty, provided it looks good for a gift.

Quaint trinkets are ready for the Easter trade, one of these being a little maiden with a sunbonnet riding a big egg from which protrudes the head of a chick. It is on rockers—an Easter rocking horse.

Nenette and Rintintin Jewelry.

Nenette and Rintintin, the little French mascots, have run through different trades and materials and are now out strong with the jewelers. There is no doubt about the luck which one pair will bring, for they are set solidly with fairly good-sized diamonds, each mascot about an inch long and swinging from a ring attached to a platinum chain. There is more variety in the little pair, as they appear pendent from enameled bracelets, flexible, oval pieces linked together, they wear polka dots, stripes or solid, bright hues in the enamel, one in one color and one in another. They are variously finished as to coiffeur, with red or green hair. On another form, very tiny in the original wool, they are set in crystal lockets. A pair of these is worn on a decorous black ribbon, or the two together in one locket.

Garment Salesmen to Dine.

Preparations are being made for the annual banquet and dance of the Garment Salesmen's Association, which will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on Feb. 11. At least 1,500 people are expected to be present, including buyers from all parts of the country who will be guests of manufacturers and salesmen. The demand for tickets has exceeded all expectations; in fact, the Entertainment Committee had decided to stop the sale of tickets on Feb. 5, but it now appears as if the date will have to be set forward a few days. One of the attractions will be a vaudeville show, taken part in by the head liners of all of the Keith theatres who will be in the city on that date. Four orchestras have also been engaged, including the famous Dixie "Jazz Band."

Fur Auction Begins Tomorrow.

Starting tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock and continuing until Saturday, a stock of $6,000,000 worth of furs will be placed on sale at the Masonic Hall, 71 West Twenty-third Street, by the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation. Included in the offerings are at least 66,000 pounds of rabbit skins, which it is believed will be of much interest to the hat industry in view of the shortage of suitable furs for this purpose.

Velvet and Velveteen Colors.

There is a reaction from strong colors in velveteens and corduroys, dealers in those goods say, and the black velveteens are going strong for sport jackets, pony coats to wear with sport skirts, &c. Browns, navys and taupes are other good colors. There is a soft army blue which is good in both velvets and velveteens. Browns run into the henna, which goes to the millinery trade, and the grays run into the castor shades.

Spring Business in Men's Hats.

The Spring business in men's soft hats has been very satisfactory, despite the fact that many retailers keep looking forward to lower prices. It was said yesterday that some of the cheaper lines have already been reduced. Hats that formerly sold for $21.50 are now being offered for $19 a dozen. No immediate reduction is expected on the higher-priced lines for some time, because of the high price of fur, of which there is still an apparent scarcity.

Sale of Belts Slackens.

The present prices of men's leather belts have, according to the makers, greatly interfered with the sale. Very few orders are being placed by the retailers who are apparently waiting for a reduction in prices. One of the firms in this trade said that up until last December his business had shown an increase of $40,000 over that of the previous season. Since then, however, business has not been quite as satisfactory.

THE CLOTHIERS' POSITION.

Why They Believe Next Fall's Prices Will Not Be Lower.

Ludwig Stein, of B. Kuppenheimer & Co., president of the National Association of Clothiers, said yesterday that the position of the manufacturers concerning future prices had not been fairly presented. His detailed statement follows:

"The clothing men have never attempted to keep up prices to the consumer, nor have they at any time stated that a readjustment was not in process. What the clothing men have said was this: That the prices for next Fall on all wool clothing would not be less than they were last Fall. The reasons for this are as follows:

"1.—The prices of heavyweight cloths a year ago were made by the mills prior to the German offensive, and our expanded military program following this offensive was responsible for the latest and most violent advance in the cost of fabrics. Manufacturers at that time, too, were all in the possession of large quantities of woolen cloths carried from the preceding year on a very much lower cost basis, and averaged these with their new purchases. As a result the opening prices of clothing for the Fall and Winter 1918-19 were on a much lower basis than the market prices of woolen cloths warranted, and considerably below the prices of Spring goods for 1919.

"2.—In order to be able for next Fall to meet the average prices of last Fall it is necessary that all wool fabrics should show a decline of about one-third from the prices prevailing during the months just preceding the armistice. Thus far the Government raw wool sales have been at a very moderate concession on good quality wools, and in no instance have they been as much as a third off. New fabrics in all wool and worsted goods brought out now for next Fall in no case show a decline of 33 1-3 per cent., and as a matter of fact nothing approaching that percentage. It is for this reason that clothing manufacturers at their recent convention were well within the facts when they stated that trustworthy clothing for next Fall would not be sold on a lower basis than the opening prices of last Fall.

"3.—When it comes to cotton mixed or shoddy goods, the situation is a different one. The high price of cotton, due to war conditions, and the general scarcity of woolen cloth, due to the same conditions, caused cotton mixed or shoddy cloth to be ofttimes used as a substitute for wool cloth, and the great demand naturally caused a much higher range of prices than would ordinarily have prevailed. On the release of wool and the possibility of a larger amount of wool cloth it was possible that there might be some reduction in cotton mixed or shoddy clothes to a point which will be below the prices of last Fall.

"4.—While this Spring's clothing represented the peak so far as price is concerned, and there has been some readjustment in the price of the lower qualities, new offerings of better quality goods have been few and at very moderately decreased prices, and in view of the forty-four-hour week throughout the clothing industry, it is unlikely that manufacturers of good clothing can make any reductions in price for the Spring."

RAW SILK MARKETS.

A General Lack of Animation Now Marking All of Them.

A general lack of animation marks all the raw silk markets at present. In Japan, owing to the threatening strike in the silk mills, Sinshiu No. 1 has eased down to 1,350 yen, and latest cables received by A. P. Villa & Brothers, Inc., state that there are hardly any transactions of importance. The visible stock is estimated at 28,000 bales.

In Canton the market remains lifeless, reelers appearing to be indifferent and awaiting developments. At Shanghai all grades of silk are quiet, with a slight recession in price of steam filatures and tsatlees, while tussahs are held on the same basis. The Italian market shows no buying for Europe or this country.

Locally there is very little doing, as the manufacturers, in view of the great probability of a strike at Paterson, are preparing for that event and are not buying silk.

BUSINESS NOTES.

T. N. Winslow of the former firm of Ahrens & Winslow, resident buyer, will continue in business in the quarters of the old firm, at 1,170 Broadway.

The annual meeting of the Textile Color Card Association of the United States, Inc., will be held at the rooms of the organization, 354 Fourth Avenue, on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

George Flatto, for seventeen years with E. & H. Levy, has gone into the ribbon business on his own account at 1,161 Broadway under the trade name of Flatto Ribbon Company. His brother, Arthur C. Flatto, is associated with him.

George W. Jones, formerly buyer of boys' clothing and furnishings for R. H. Macy & Co. and recently manager of the men's and boys' wearing apparel stores of the Charles William stores, has resigned the latter position to open an office as resident buyer at 1,133 Broadway.

ARE YOU GOING ABROAD IN SEARCH OF FOREIGN BUSINESS?

If you are planning a selling campaign or going abroad in search of business in England, France or Belgium, you can obtain the best information and suggestions as to method of procedure, class of merchandise desired and merchandise available by getting in touch with me quickly. I returned last week after an extensive visit to these countries and know just what is to be done. This information will cost you $250.00 for a nominal interview, but may be the means of saving you a great deal of time and much more money. Address B 285 Times.

—DO WE BUILD OR DESTROY?

The following letter from one of our customers speaks for itself.

"January 6th, 1919.

Commercial Credit Co.
Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen:—
We are in receipt of your letter of Dec. 26th and in reply would say that for the year 1918 our total net sales figured approximately $250,000. We feel confident that we could not have handled this amount of business without your financial assistance. Since we commenced doing business with you we have taken advantage of every cash discount and our ability to do this has enabled us to make profitable connections with sources of supply for raw material. During the year just closed R. G. Dun & Co. increased our rating from $5000 to $10000, High to $10000 to $20000, High.

The year 1918 was the most profitable one in the history of our business, and we feel that you aided us very materially in bringing this about."

We benefit larger concerns as well,—in fact about three-fourths of our volume of $55,421,258.63 in 1918 came from concerns rated $35,000 to $1,000,000.

THE ADVANTAGE of CAPITALIZING IDLE ACCOUNTS

LOST MOTION is wasteful.
IDLE CAPITAL is lost motion.
IF all your capital was tied up in one account, your resources would be idle until your customer decided to pay.
THE PRINCIPLE is the same if your accounts are numerous.
CASH PAYMENT by customers would eliminate the idle time and enable capital to work all the time.
OUR PLAN of cashing your accounts as created ends idleness of capital.
RESULT You create additional sales by eliminating the Idle Periods—your volume enlarges—your profits increase—your importance in your industry grows.
A NOMINAL COST of 1-30 of 1% per day (1% per month) figured to the exact day is the price of this increasing of the working efficiency of your Capital. On a 30-day turnover you can increase your volume $100,000 in a year at a cost of $1,000.
QUERY What will be your profit on $100,000 additional sales with no increase in overhead or fixed expense?
NON NOTIFICATION service is extended to concerns of $35,000 capital and upwards.

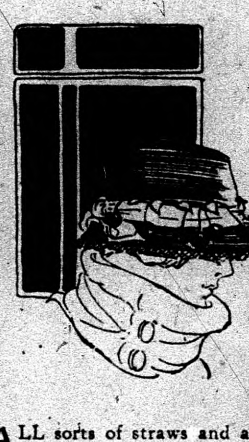
There's a Refreshing Youthfulness About THESE $8.50 HATS

Artfully trimmed with Fruits, Flowers, Wheat, Vegetables



MARY, Mary quite contrary, how does your garden grow? The answer is, obviously, "On my hat, Sir." And whether it be a fruit or vegetable garden matters not at all—Dame Fashion smiles on both.

"THESE can't possibly be the $8.50 hats" was our first thought when we peeped into the workroom—they had such a very "specialty shop" air. But they were the $8.50 hats—and quite an achievement we think them.

ALL sorts of straws and all sorts of chic trimming touches. The one pictured is of glistening black straw in a poke effect. Cherry red ribbon and gracefully nodding cherries encircle the crown. A band of black maline has an intriguing way of half-concealing the wearer's eyes.

Book Worms: Attention! Here's a Book Sale

to Lighten Your Hearts—and Your Purses

Come, all ye booke lovers! Let each one of you take his nose from between the pages of his latest favorite and add some new friends to his library. There are more than 15,000 volumes—practically every one of them at less than half a dollar—many for less than a quarter.

Be it understood that these are altogether desirable books—most of them offered at less than the cost of binding. We cannot possibly give you an adequate idea of the scope of this sale—do come in and have a look at the convenient tables on which the books will be displayed.

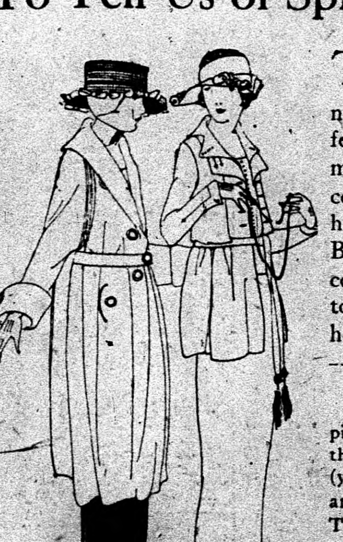
Newnesses Come In To Tell Us of Spring's Nearness



THERE'S such a breezy youthfulness about the new Spring Toggery that every feminine heart must flutter a message of welcome to it. Of course, the slender woman will have the best of it—as usual. But there is a tendency to consider the woman of "too, too solid flesh"—and to give her the long lines that her soul—and her body—craves.

We might take the two garments pictured here as characteristic of the season's showings. The Suit (yes, it is navy blue) has the new and altogether fetching blouse back. The tan vestee has diminutive buttons that make up in smartness what they lack in usefulness. A polka dotted lining will overcome any woman's reluctance to take off her coat. Priced $45.

As for the Coat—fabric, color and line combine with unusual effectiveness—it's an ideal raglan coat-wrap. Hats off to the designer who conceived the graceful raglan sleeves that change to a yoke in the back. The lining is exquisite. Priced $59.50.

COATS $15 TO $110 SUITS $19.75 TO $95 DRESSES $14.50 TO $89.50

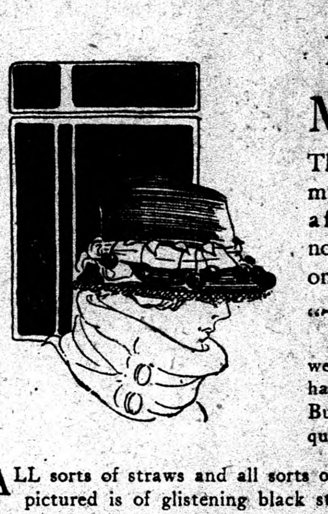
BLOOMINGDALES

Lexington to Third Ave.

There's a Refreshing Youthfulness About THESE $8.50 HATS

Artfully trimmed with Fruits, Flowers, Wheat, Vegetables



MARY, Mary quite contrary, how does your garden grow? The answer is, obviously, "On my hat, Sir." And whether it be a fruit or vegetable garden matters not at all--Dame Fashion smiles on both.

"THESE can't possibly be the $8.50 hats" was our first thought when we peeped into the workroom—they had such a very "specialty shop" air. But they were the $8.50 hats—and quite an achievement we think them.

ALL sorts of straws and all sorts of chic trimming touches. The one pictured is of glistening black straw in a poke effect. Cherry red ribbon and gracefully nodding cherries encircle the crown. A band of black maline has an intriguing way of half-concealing the wearer's eyes.

Book Worms: Attention! Here's a Book Sale

to Lighten Your Hearts—and Your Purses

Come, all ye booke lovers! Let each one of you take his nose from between the pages of his latest favorite and add some new friends to his library. There are more than 15,000 volumes—practically every one of them at less than half a dollar—many for less than a quarter.

Be it understood that these are altogether desirable books—most of them offered at less than the cost of binding. We cannot possibly give you an adequate idea of the scope of this sale—do come in and have a look at the convenient tables on which the books will be displayed.

LITTLE LEATHER LIBRARY CLASSICS
10c

4,000 hurt volumes—all by famous authors. Selected works of Kipling, Shakespeare, Emerson, Stevenson, Poe, Tolstoi, Ibsen, Shaw, Dickens, Irving, Merimee, Longfellow, and many others.

SCIENCE, LITERATURE, MISCELLANEOUS
15c & 25c

3,500 volumes from the presses of well known publishers. Hundreds of interesting subjects—only two to five copies of a title.

3,000 VOLUMES OF FICTION
33c

Every one of them new and readably printed. Popular volumes from the pens of Ward, Locke, Chambers, Williamson, Glyn, Carey, Orcutt, Gerry, Deland, Lewis, Forman, and over a hundred others.

ODD VOLUMES OF STANDARD SETS
45c

1,200 good books, artistically bound in cloth with gold stamping. Dickens, Hugo, Thackeray, Ruskin, Bulwer, Shakespeare, Scott, Carlyle and others.

45c

Classics bound in three-quarter leather. 12mo. Dickens, Eliot, Bulwer, Holmes, Spencer, Mulock, Darwin, Fothergill, etc.

STANDARD SETS

in most charming bindings—worthy of your heart's own favorite. And prices are not as high as you would expect.

69c to $2.00

Hundreds of Miscellaneous books on the Arts, Travel, Poetry, Science. All of them listed at many times these prices.

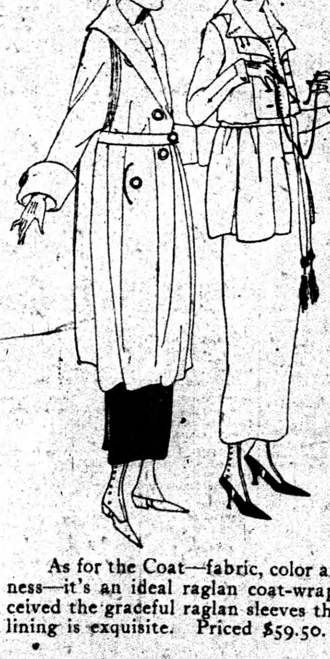
Newnesses Come In To Tell Us of Spring's Nearness



THERE'S such a breezy youthfulness about the new Spring Toggery that every feminine heart must flutter a message of welcome to it. Of course, the slender woman will have the best of it--as usual: But there is a tendency to consider the woman of "too, too solid flesh"--and to give her the long lines that her soul--and her body--craves.

We might take the two garments pictured here as characteristic of the season's showings. The Suit (yes, it is navy blue) has the new and altogether fetching blouse back. The tan vestee has diminutive buttons that make up in smartness what they lack in usefulness. A polka dotted lining will overcome any woman's reluctance to take off her coat. Priced $45.

As for the Coat—fabric, color and line combine with unusual effectiveness—it's an ideal raglan coat-wrap. Hats off to the designer who conceived the graceful raglan sleeves that change to a yoke in the back. The lining is exquisite. Priced $59.50.

COATS $15 TO $110 SUITS $19.75 TO $95 DRESSES $14.50 TO $89.50

THE LABOR SITUATION.

The wish and purpose to maintain the wages of labor at the highest standard compatible with continued industrial activity was never more general and sincere among employers than at the present moment. High wages are the natural accompaniment of prosperity; there is a perfectly obvious reason, therefore, why employers are content to pay them. At the present moment capital is seeking not less earnestly than labor to find means whereby the wage level may be kept as high as the conditions of trade will permit. In great industrial concerns serious study has been given to the problem in the hope of devising ways through economies in other directions or through efficiency methods to avert, or at least postpone as long as possible, the necessity of wage reduction. American shipowners are trying in good faith to work out methods of operating their ships under the high wage schedules and other crew conditions of the seamen's law which put them at a serious disadvantage in comparison with the merchant marine of other countries. The great mass of the employers of labor are not open to the charge of hard-heartedness which agitators recklessly bring against them. They take account of the present high cost of living, they would gladly continue the present scales of wages, they will consider reductions only as a last resort, as the only alternative to the closing of shops.

Good-will and generous purpose, however, can have no absolute control over the wage situation in the future. The price of labor is somewhat less subject to the control of economic law than other prices, but it is not and can never be, as some false guides of labor would have it, quite independent of the laws that govern trade. If the excessive or unreasonable demands of labor close the shops, then the law begins to work with a good deal of sternness. For that reason it is as unwise for leaders of labor to insist now that there should be no reduction of wages below the war standard as it would be for employers to order sharp and arbitrary reductions. One labor paper has insisted that if demobilization creates a great surplus of labor, hours must be shortened to the end that all may find employment at the wages paid during the war. It is unnecessary to point out that the business of production cannot be carried on in that manner. The problems of reconstruction are as yet unsolved. We cannot clearly foresee future conditions. It is, therefore, highly desirable that calmness and reason guide the counsels of both labor and capital, which in the end have a common interest.

Mr. William B. Wilson, the Secretary of Labor, in an address delivered recently in this city, said that "if there is any attempt to force down wages unduly, it will be met with a resistance of sufficient strength and duration to frustrate it." The Secretary's words of warning are uncalled for, because the provoking cause of the "social upheaval" he fears is unreal, exists only in his imagination. We may be very sure that there will be no attempt "to force down wages unduly." Employers will not unduly reduce them, but neither they nor anybody can maintain the wages of all classes of labor at the war level; that would be as impossible as it would be to maintain all profits at the war level.

Secretary Wilson said upon this occasion that "there is a shortage of 3,200,000 laborers and there is not only a possibility of a shortage of labor but a possibility of an increased demand for labor." These figures are surprising, since the newspapers of Jan. 26, which published a report of Mr. Wilson's remarks, published also an official report or announcement of the Department of Labor, of which he is the head, in which it was declared that conditions of unemployment in many parts of the country were "rapidly becoming serious." We quote one paragraph from the department's statement:

> On Dec. 3 there was reported a total shortage of labor of 34,000 and surpluses totaling only 12,000. During the following eight weeks this shortage was reduced to 12,000 while the surpluses reported reached the figure of 210,000.

Subsequent local reports indicate an increase in unemployment, making it plain that instead of a "shortage of 3,200,000 laborers" in the country there is in many localities and in many trades a surplusage, indicating that men are seeking jobs, not jobs seeking men. Plainly, this is not a condition which warrants anything like an unqualified demand that wages be maintained at the war standard. Demobilization of the nation's great army lately in service abroad or in training at home would ordinarily mean serious conditions of unemployment, when the country's concern would be not so much about wages as about relief measures. It is too soon to conclude, however, that there will be a great surplusage of labor. That depends upon several conditions. One is whether the country's industries are to be continuously active, as Secretary Wilson expects, or whether there is to be a slackening of trade. Another condition is that respecting immigration. A measure is pending in Congress to exclude foreign immigrants. The enactment of that measure would obviously have an influence upon the market of common labor. On the other hand, there is from this port and doubtless from other ports a notable current of emigration; the natives of several countries lately engaged in the war are returning to their old homes in increasing numbers. All these are factors in the wage question, and some of them are not yet determinable. Plainly, it is not the time for dogmatism about the future wage situation. It is no less true that strikes against a reasonable lowering of wages or to enforce shorter hours would be the sure way to destroy the hope of continued prosperity, to close factories and make unemployment a serious condition.

WATER POWER WASTED.

At the conference of the National Conservation Congress in Washington in 1916 one of the speakers said that "it will be hundreds of years before we can maintain anything like the development that God Almighty has planted in these hills of ours and that is running down these valleys." But it "has not been going to waste." It will be there for "ten thousand years to come"; and so on. Of course, it is being wasted every day it is not used. Immense potentialities of production are neglected, coal and oil are squandered, so long as the water power of the country is not developed.

Fifty-five million hydraulic horse power is absolutely wasted because the conservationists were so long afraid that somebody would make too much money out of it, that the "interests" and the "trusts" would profit excessively in one of the most uncertain and costly enterprises which private capital can undertake. The United States under the influence of rigid conservation doctrines has discouraged, made most difficult and hazardous, the development of water-power plants which at the start cost from twice to five times as much as steam plants of the same size. The compensation comes in the much smaller cost of maintenance, fuel, labor.

In 1917, the year of our entry into the war, when everybody was crying for more productiveness and less waste, the new water-power plants completed amounted only to some 250,000 horse power. In the thirteen Western States where about four-fifths of the undeveloped water power is the United States owns about two-thirds of the land. To develop that water power the use of some of that land for the dam site, the flowage, the right of way, is usually indispensable. That use could only be obtained by revocable permit. Not always, as the course of a sometime Secretary of the Interior showed, was flagrant misuse the sole cause of revocation. Who could afford to invest in such a ticklish speculation? Capital was frightened away from water-power enterprises in the West. Of water-power sites not on public lands, or in the West, many are on navigable streams. A special act of Congress must be passed to authorize the development of any one of these. Such an act has been hard or nearly impossible to obtain.

In short, for years conservation for conservation's sake has been the rule. Just as the Government long sought to make Alaska a sort of hermit country sealed to the world of capital, locked up its great mineral resources, warned the accursed capitalist against trespassing or indicted him, prevented or retarded a natural railway growth in order to build with the people's money, really seemed to be conserving Alaska for posterity, so it has practically kept American hydroelectric energy at a standstill, at what expense of oil and coal, what sacrifice of mechanical power, the breath of industrial life, with what detriment to manufacturing and agriculture and the most productive use of labor, let the statisticians estimate.

Last year the Government waked up or was waked up. A water-power bill, which originated in the Departments of Agriculture, Interior, and War, was introduced into Congress, where Senate and House had long been hopelessly at odds about water-power development. This bill, approved in principle even by stern conservationists, consolidates all water-power jurisdiction, whether relating to navigable streams or public lands, in a Federal commission consisting of the heads of the three departments named. It has been amended, not always for the better, in its passage through Congress. It has been passed, but is still conserved in conference. Made law, it would authorize and give security to a long-delayed work of increasing the productive energies of the United States. Water-power development will both create and save. In that development this supposedly progressive nation lags. Last September President Wilson called it of "capital and immediate importance as a war measure." It is now of capital and immediate importance as a peace measure.

GLORY ENOUGH FOR ALL.

By degrees, as different units get a hearing, the achievements of American divisions, brigades, and regiments that served at the front in France are seen in their true proportion and in proper relation. In the great war, more than in previous wars, it has been difficult for commanders to know what any other force but their own was doing under fire, and naturally there has been a tendency to make much of its exploits, and perhaps underestimate the services of other units in the same organization. In accounts by correspondents, especially when the line of battle is far flung, performances that came within the range of their observations, or about which they heard from officers engaged, may figure too prominently. The work of a regiment in another part of the field does not get into the picture at all, and yet it may have contributed more to the success of the operation than what was done elsewhere.

There is a well-known British example. In one of the Ypres battles Sir Charles FitzClarence, a Brigadier, acting upon his own responsibility, rushed a Norfolk battalion into a widening gap, routed the enemy, and saved the day after Field Marshal French had given the order for a general retirement. At first the Norfolk men did not get credit for their gallantry, and not until FitzClarence fell in action was it generally known that it was he who had thrown the enemy back at Gheluvet and turned the tide of battle. It is with no design to claim undue credit for an organization, or to neglect the merits of others, that chroniclers of the war, combatants and noncombatants, have often told only half, or less, of the story of an action that reflected lustre upon American arms in the great war. Something must be allowed for local pride, for enthusiasm of the moment, for hero worship. It is true that extravagant estimates of a unit's accomplishment have sometimes been made when it should share the glory with other units no less efficient and aggressive. This want of perspective may be attributed to the kind of partisanship not uncommon in the British Army, which is rather famous for the loyalties and rivalries of its regiments; but it is a healthy and stimulating condition after all.

To comprehend what was accomplished in France by the American forces at the front and to measure the merits of units most heavily engaged will not be easy when the complete official record is made up. The old style battle was hard enough to understand, reports of it running to an intricacy of detail, and yet it was fought in comparatively small areas. Thirty years after the civil war controversy raged over the part played by corps and divisions in the greater battles, and through misunderstanding of the meaning of orders given and the manner of their execution the reputations of commanders often suffered. Far more difficult it will be to understand the strategy and master the details of battles in the great conflict of nations. Years must elapse before history can pronounce the final verdict and blame and praise can be justly apportioned. First there must be official reports of every movement and its result. After the campaign in Cuba regimental officers were called upon for their experiences in the skirmish at Guasimas and in the decisive fight at San Juan. It was a small stage for military operations and the method was feasible, since San Juan was a go-as-you-please affair. But it could not be applied to the vast struggle in France without causing endless complexity. Reliance must be placed only upon the official reports of army, division, brigade, and regimental commanders, and it will take a long time to co-ordinate them and evolve the truth.

At the present time the American people have an imperfect understanding of the performances of their troops in France, and as first impressions may prove the strongest they should not take accounts from unofficial and partisan sources too seriously. To illustrate, an officer connected with a division that fought in the Argonne Forest is full of its prowess, and in telling his story he may honestly believe that the victory there was won by that division, when the fact is that other units contributed to it in equal measure. General March told the House Rules Committee the other day that 300,000 American soldiers fought in the Argonne Forest. It is undeniable that in the earlier narratives of what the Marines accomplished at Château-Thierry justice was not done the Regulars. In a recent issue of The Stars and Stripes, the official organ of the American Expeditionary Forces, "the first complete and detailed account" was printed, with the following conclusion:

> We find final judgment is simple. The 9th and 23d Infantry, the 5th and 6th Marines, and the infantry units of the 3d Division played equally important, equally gallant, and equally difficult parts. These eight regiments, with the other units of the 2d and 3d Divisions, stopped the boche at Château-Thierry.

The work of the Marine Brigade at Château-Thierry was brilliant, and nothing could have been finer than its exploit at Belleau Wood, but in the acclaim it excited the no less effective valor of some of the Regulars, notably the 9th and 23d Infantry, has been overlooked. Both these regiments had a shining record, and they lived up to it in France. Like the Marines, they were units of the 2d Division, which fought gloriously, with heavy casualties, on every occasion in France. And the same story can be told of other organizations at the front, some of which have had more than their share of glory and others less than they were entitled to, National Guard, National Army, and Regulars. Credit to whom credit is due; there is glory enough for all!

WORLDWIDE ECONOMICS.

The Versailles Interallied Conference is passing through evolutionary phases toward something different from expectation. It was military in its origin. In its second phase it was political, an organization to make the world safe for democracy. To this succeeds a phase as yet vaguely defined, but based upon objects and methods neither racial, nor national, nor territorial. Lord Robert Cecil hinted at this when he said that the economic machinery extemporized for war should be preserved for peace. The same note was struck by Professor Field in his interview in The Times on his departure last week to resume his duties as statistician for the Interallied Maritime Council. Professor Field's specialty is economics, and his duties were associated with the preparation of a program for exports, imports, and shipping. The Conference was obliged to take note of the world's commodity surpluses and shortages, and to devise ways and means for supplying them, including the means of transport. The duty was neither political nor military. It was big business, done in a new way, and worked so well that it created an appetite for more co-operation in management of what has hitherto been left without management in peace, and has degenerated into a struggle for the necessaries of life in a manner resembling war, and promoting actual war.

If the nations would escape a war of economic factors, thought should be given to organizing the world for that purpose as well as for making it peaceful politically. The two organizations logically are parts of one organization, and the economic organization of the world need not be more difficult than the political. Indeed, it might be easier, for there is not the same antagonism between those of like economic interests as there is between peoples differing in their language, race, and customs of life. There is proposed no domination of any nation, or of any economic factor, in a combination of all who wish for the benefit of those of like minds and interests. The world's nations have been organized heretofore for the preservation of law and order, for the regulation of conduct, and not for the promotion of commerce.

Alliances between political Governments have been partial and based on antagonisms rather than on interests. The war against Germany was an example of political combination for military purposes. It has accomplished its end, with loss of life and destruction of treasure beyond expression, but perhaps sufficient to produce the frame of mind necessary for establishing an economic as well as a political settlement. There are offenses not less vital because economic rather than political. We have heard something of a "raw material" war; it was possible only because there was a Government which preferred to steal rather than to buy the supplies for its factories. More than one nation has been forced into economic relations with that nation on terms prejudicial to other nations. There are countries which have the power either to starve other countries or to throw their industries into disorder, and that without breach of any present obligation.

It would make for stability of trade and peace if there were an organization for social and economic discipline of any who affronted its sense of what is right and fair in trade. The world is more alike in its trade than in its governments. The political organization of the world is based upon those like-minded in their common law between man and man. It would be simpler to make an organization of those like-minded, and with like interests, in trade. The law of bills of exchange was the first reduced to anything like cosmopolitan uniformity. The time is ripe for introducing order into processes of buying and selling for the purposes of production and distribution throughout the world. Compulsion is not the idea. Freedom of lawful action through restriction of unlawful is a better phrase. Multitudes who did not see how the breach of the neutrality of Belgium concerned them would see their interest in supporting the regularity of the production and distribution of food, the equalizing of the conditions of international competition, and so on in endless variety of the functional activities of the world's daily life.

AUTOMOBILE PROGRESS.

Automobiles used in the United States during the last year showed an increase of more than 1,000,000 over the preceding year. Nearly 6,000,000 motor vehicles were registered in all of the States by the first of the present year—5,945,422, to be exact—while the registrations on Jan. 1, 1918, were 4,941,276. This is a highly interesting fact, particularly so because the factory production was so severely curtailed during the year in which the country was actively engaged in the world war. It indicates that the unsold balances of the big productive year of 1917, when the high record of more than 1,740,000 passenger cars was achieved, were readily taken up, in great part for transportation and other essential uses during the period of railroad and freight congestion.

Production of passenger automobiles fell off by more than 800,000 from the 1917 schedule, the total being 926,388 cars. This was due not only to the restrictions placed upon the industry in respect to steel and other materials, but because a large majority of the motor plants placed their factories at the disposition of the Government for the manufacture of a great variety of war munitions, and at the time of the signing of the armistice the value of war contracts assumed by the automobile makers aggregated more than one billion dollars. Many factories, making some of the best-known cars, were entirely engaged in war work. The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce estimates that the total production for 1919 will probably not be in excess of 1,500,000 motor cars, and it is interesting to note that the President of the National Chamber predicts that, in view of the present demand, there should be a potential market for nearly 3,000,000 cars.

An instructive fact in American automobile development is that, although passenger cars were very properly limited in production, the restrictions on commercial car manufacture were less severe and there was an actual increase of nearly 80 per cent. in the output of motor trucks. Never before were so many commercial motor vehicles made in the United States as in 1918, the number being 227,251, as against 128,157 for 1917. This enhanced production was due primarily to war needs. More than 50,000 motor trucks were sent overseas for the American Expeditionary Forces and several thousand army transport wagons were used here. Motor trucks were also used for home transportation to a greater extent than ever before, and the organization of many express and rural motor lines has opened new opportunities of quick delivery from the producer to the consumer. The highways of the country will be used more freely than in previous years for transportation. Within the last few months the Post Office Department has opened many new parcel-post routes, and their success has stimulated the establishment of privately owned motor traffic routes. This has opened up the problem of a comprehensive system of national highways and better State roads, and the efforts already started to accomplish some of these objects are practically certain to result, in the near future, in providing a system of well-connected highways far superior to anything the country has had in the past.

THE NEW HELLAS.

Consideration of the claims of Greece at the peace table should start from the fact that they are based on the principle of nationality—that in practically every case except the discussion of Constantinople, which few Greeks expect to get, they are dealing with places where the majority of the population actually is Greek. The Times has previously commented in detail on the memorandum submitted by Mr. Venizelos to the Peace Conference, dealing with Greek claims in Northern Epirus, Thrace, Constantinople, Western and Northwestern Asia Minor, and the islands. It may be that some of these questions will be settled by private negotiation with the other Powers concerned, with the Conference being asked merely to give its approval; this is suggested by the statement made in The Liberal, a local Greek newspaper, that the Archbishop of Cyprus and the Greek members of the Legislative Council are in London, presenting to the British Government the claim of the inhabitants to that reunion with Greece which the British offered in 1914 if Constantine would join in the war. This and the question of the Dodecanesus might very properly be settled by private arrangements with England and Italy respectively. In the question of lands belonging to the old Turkish Empire the Conference will doubtless have immediate jurisdiction.

If the Greek claims rest in the main on the principle of nationality, it must be remembered that in some of these questions there are other interests to be considered. This is the case in the main because the Greeks in some districts—Western Asia Minor is a notable exception—are inclined to congregate in the seaports, and to a somewhat less extent in the inland cities, of regions where the rural districts may be largely populated by another race. Here arises a difficulty of the same sort as is presented by the Italian cities east of the Adriatic, and a solution is difficult in either case. But if the League of Nations is to have the authority which we suppose, the difficulties hitherto connected with the possession of a single city, with perhaps a narrow stretch along the coast, when the hinterland belongs to another Power, will be much less than in the past. A decision on the basis of self-determination can more nearly be approximated. It would be unjust to bring large numbers of other European races into the Greek dominion, but likewise would it be unjust to subject to another dominion Greeks of the coastal cities who are not immigrants, but the descendants of a Greek population three thousand years old.

That this arrangement would not involve economic injustice is indicated by the statement made last week by a Greek spokesman that Mr. Venizelos is willing to place all Greek ports at the disposal of other Balkan States on equitable terms. If, then, the recovery by Greece of Greek coastal cities cuts down the Bulgarian coast line, it will not mean a change of sovereignty for many Bulgarians, it will involve no economic hardship for the Bulgarian people. Saloniki is the natural port of Macedonia, and friendly arrangements with the Serbs have given Serbia a favorable position despite the fact that the port is Greek.

The unification of the Greek race will give a powerful impetus to the commercial and cultural development of a people which is destined to play in the economic life of the Near East as great a part in the future as it played in the distant past. The letter from Dr. Metaxa, former Governor of Saloniki, which The Times published last Sunday, showed how ambitious Greeks flocked to that city the moment the burdensome handicap of Turkish rule was removed. The Turk was a deadening influence everywhere; despite him Greek commerce and industry made enormous strides even in Turkish dominions, and with the Turk out of the war Ionia should begin to recover the prosperity of twenty-five hundred years ago. It is among Greeks of the dispersion, of the new lands liberated in the Balkan wars or still to be liberated, among the business men of world vision, that Mr. Venizelos and his liberal policy found much of its strongest support. Thanks to him and to the movement which he led and embodied, the Greek spirit has shaken off the parochialism which till lately prevailed in some circles of Continental Greece, and the culmination of his policy will be the establishment, materially as well as spiritually, of a Greater Hellas which will be a world Power in a sense that cannot be claimed by some larger States.

THE KAISER AS HE ALWAYS WAS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The verses on the Kaiser to which your correspondent Frank M. Chandler of Troy refers in your issue of Jan. [illegible] were written by myself in 1898, and was published in Harper's Weekly during that year.

It required little Seeing on the part of a Seer even at that remote period in the history of the world to penetrate the camouflage of divinity with which the great Maniac had clothed himself, and get at the true inwardness of what I think I may properly call without indulging in vulgar slang the Imperial Nut. He was as cracked then as he is now, and I lay claim to no gifts of vision for having perceived the fact twenty-one years before he realized it himself.

CHINA'S CLAIMS.

She Wants a Complete Revision of Her Relations with the Powers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The interview with President Hsu Chih Chang by your Peking correspondent, published in your paper on Jan. 16, reveals the real and only basis for permanent peace of the world, if there can ever be anything as such. For at least three-quarters of a century China has been the target of international rivalries and intrigues. Non-militaristic and peace-loving as China is, she has been mercilessly and helplessly treated as an inexhaustible prey of "Secret Treaties," "Spheres of Influences," "Balance of Power," and other immoral policies hithertofore upheld by European nations and other ambitious countries. The events of the last few decades in the Far East are dark records, shameful to humanity and civilization, incompatible either with Kultur or with culture.

Your correspondent is right when he prophesies, "While one war is over in Europe, another is rapidly getting under way in the Pacific." As long as the Far Eastern problem is not rightly and justly solved the clouds of another world struggle will gather as quickly as the ending of the one just passed, for the remains of past immoral acts of the powers still exist in China, and also the signs of further rivalries and intrigues among the nations in Asia. Regardless of the natural opposition and resistance on the part of the Chinese people, the conflicts among these nations over their interests and policies alone, if not uprooted, will cause another catastrophe as disastrous as the last one.

"If, unfortunately, the League of Nations fail to become a fact, the result will not only be that the world's aspiration will remain unrealized, but that the Far East may become the first region dangerously affected." These words of President Hsu voice the sentiment of all China. The world is tired of wars, and China is tired of humiliations. The spirit of the glorious victory of the war indicates the birth of a universal feeling that imperialism of any description must be totally condemned and cast away as a dead theory of the bygone generation; the goal of the Peace Conference now assembled in Paris, exemplified by President Wilson's lofty ideals and enlightened principles, promises to mankind to usher in an upright new régime of nationalism and internationalism, based on right and justice. With this spirit and toward this goal China has the ample justification to claim an international readjustment that would give her an honorable place among the family of nations. Such a readjustment China claims not only in her own interests, to which she is legally and morally entitled, but also in the interests of the world peace.

THE 166TH AERO SQUADRON.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to correct an error which appeared in the papers in regard to the First Day Bombardment Group, which concerns the 166th Aero Squadron in particular. The error lies in the date which this squadron joined the First Day Bombardment Group.

It is with pride that the members of this squadron wish to inform their friends that the 166th Aero Squadron joined the First Day Bombardment Group on Sept. 21, 1918, and opened successful operations against the enemy Oct. 18, and continued to operate until the armistice was signed. During the period of operation the 166th Squadron did not lose a machine over the enemy lines, dropped more bombs per raid during that period, and had more enemy machines to its credit than any other squadron of the First Day Bombardment Group.

THE REGULARS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Thanks for the kind words you had for the regulars in this morning's issue. They certainly are due. "They are the backbone of the army," as you say, and do "great things as a matter of course," and see no special reason for being made heroes of. Some day, let us hope, the history of the regular regiments in this war will be written, and if it isn't a glorious history, then all the reports of other parts of the army we have been reading about so much had better be revised. The regulars say and try to feel that they don't want any praise or glory and all that. "We're only volunteers, you know," is the way they pass it off; but underneath it all they really wouldn't mind a little recognition now and then during these days of glorification. I know, for I was, until the other day,

SONNINO'S MOTTO.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you add to your editorial article on Sonnino, to complete the portrait of the great Italian statesman, his motto that appears in his library: "Nitor in adversum" of Ovid, which means: Try every effort against the contrary current.

EPICEDIUM

(In Memory of America's Dead in the Great War.)

No more for them shall Evening's rose unclose,
  Her Dawn's emblazoned panoplies be spread;
Alike, the Rain's warm kiss and stabbing snows
  Unminded, [illegible] upon each hallowed head.
But the Bugles, as they leap and wildly sing,
  Rejoice . . . remembering.

The guns' mad music their young ears have known—
  War's lullabies that moaned on Flanders Plain;
Tonight the Wind walks on them, still as stone,
  Where they [illegible] huddled close as riven grain.
But the Drums, reverberating, proudly roll—
  They [illegible] a Soldier's soul!

With arms outflung, and eyes that laughed at Death,
  They drank the wine of sacrifice and loss;
For them a lifetime spanned a burning breath,
  And Truth they visioned, clean of earthly dross.
But the Fifes—can ye not hear their lusty shriek?
  They knew, and now they speak.

The lazy drifting cloud, the noonday hum
  Of vagrant bees, the lark's untrammeled song,
Shall gladden them no more, who now lie dumb
  In Death's strange sleep, yet once were swift and strong.
But the Bells that to all living listeners peal,
  With joy their deeds reveal!

They have given their lives, with bodies bruised and broken,
  Upon their Country's altar they have bled;
They have left us priceless heritage a token
  That Honor lives forever with the Dead.
And the Bugles, as their clear notes rise and fall—
  They answer, knowing all.

AN ANTI-RED FORCE

Rumania as the Country Best Prepared to Stop the Bolshheviki

By CAPTAIN VASILE STOICA,
President of the Rumanian National League.

NEWS has reached us that the Bolsheviki are getting stronger, that they are not only invading the western countries and even South America with their insidious propaganda, but at the same time they are trying to invade the West also with their military forces. Undoubtedly the military forces of the Bolsheviki are much stronger than they were seven or ten months ago. Trotzky understood that he had to create a new and strong army, and it seems that he is on the way to create it. Bolshevist troops have reoccupied Riga and are advancing to Warsaw, and it seems that the Poles have not yet the necessary forces to stop them. At the same time other reports tell about the advance of the Bolsheviki into the Ukraine and even of great Bolshevist disturbances in that country.

Undoubtedly the Bolshevist movement is a great menace. The war has brought every country of the world misfortunes and discontent, and noisy, half irresponsible cliques can be found everywhere. The West may be threatened from now on even by military forces sent by the Bolshevist Government or organized by their comrades in Germany, in Poland, or in the Ukraine. The strength of this movement is Muscovy. In order to defend the West we have also to stop the advance of their troops. Foodstuffs, it has been pointed out so many times, are not sufficient. Foodstuffs falling into the hands of the revolutionists would only increase their power. It is absolutely necessary that military steps shall be taken.

In order to prevent the invasion of the West by the bands of Trotzky, we have to do something more. The Bolshevist movement has brought a new "social order"—if the Russian anarchy can be called by this name. This new social order can live but in a world which will be of the same kind: the Bolsheviki can live but in a Bolshevist world. They know that no nation in the world would enter into any relations with them and consequently they want to destroy everywhere the present conditions and to impose their own views and their own kind of organization. The same thing happened with the French Revolution with the difference that the healthy ideas of the French Revolutionists were adopted everywhere in the world and were supported by well-organized and masterly conducted armies, defying all the combined powers of Europe. The Bolsheviki, with their army of today, are undoubtedly destined to be defeated, but they can cause much trouble to the Allies, and, who knows, perhaps in order to defeat them again, thousands and thousands of lives may have to be sacrificed.

To prevent the invasion of the West by Eastern anarchy, as it is impossible in the actual situation to occupy the whole of Russia, we have to build up a wall, Poland, the Ukraine and Rumania. By strengthening these three countries and establishing there strong military forces, the Bolshevist invaders will be repulsed, and as soon as the leaders of this Russian anarchy will have their first defeats, Bolshevism itself will also be of a very short life. But the conditions in these three countries are different, and therefore we have to take into consideration the special situation of each of them.

Poland has a very patriotic population. What the country needs is political and military leaders. Allied pressure has to be brought to unite all the Polish factions into one strong Polish Government. With the help of this Government, then, allied military missions would be able to organize a considerably strong army which, supplied with the necessary materials of war, would be able to restore order and prevent any attack on the side of the Russian anarchy.

The Ukraine is less organized than Poland, and even the Ukrainian patriotism of many of its leaders is very questionable. Still, there are a few reliable elements. With their help allied military forces will be able to organise and to occupy the country. The occupation of this country is of very great value, as the Ukraine, is the richest part of the former Russian Empire, and thus these riches will be held at the disposal of the Allies and will not be left in the hands of the Bolsheviki.

The best organized country in the east in the present circumstances is Rumania. Rumania had a good army, and even after the great tragedy through which she passed she still had more than 500,000 men disciplined after the most modern system of the allied armies. Last April Bessarabia united again with Rumania, from which she had been taken by the Russians in 1812. Bessarabia added new forces to the Rumanian Army. The Rumanian Government immediately started to organize Bessarabian regiments, and thus the number of the Rumanian Army could be increased by 200,000 men. On Dec. 1, 1917, the Austro-Hungarian Rumanians in their national assembly of Alba Iulia, in Transylvania, also voted union with Rumania, and they also organised immediately a certain number of Transylvanian-Rumanian regiments. Transylvanian - Rumanian regiments were fighting as Rumanian legions in Italy and France—there were more than 20,000 men—and four regiments have been organized in Siberia and are today with the Americans and Japanese on their way toward the Ural Mountains.

The territory inhabited by Rumanians is today entirely in the hands of this nation, with the exception of a little part which is occupied by the Serbian Army in Southwestern Banat. The nucleus of the forces of the Rumanian nation is the Rumanian Army, which, with its officers, is able to organize in Transylvania, Banat, and Bucovina a new army amounting to 300,000 men. Thus, in increasing the power of the Allies in the east and in stemming the Bolshevist invasion, the Rumanian Army and Rumania, with all its provinces united now with the mother country, is of greatest importance. She will be able to raise an army of over 1,000,000 men inspired by the highest patriotism and self-sacrifice. But this new Rumania of 15,000,000 people needs foodstuffs, arms, and ammunition. That has to be supplied by the Interallied Council of Versailles.

By strengthening Rumania and helping her in the present difficult situation by occupying the Ukraine with allied troops, by organizing Poland politically and morally, the Allies will have built up a wall against which all the Bolshevist attempts to penetrate with their brutal forces toward the west will prove in vain.

THE JUGOSLAVS DEFENDED

Washington, Jan. 28, 1919.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am very much averse to newspaper polemics regarding international matters now pending before the Peace Conference, as I believe as a rule they only envenom the situation, but I cannot let the article by Captain Tozzi and Lieutenant Pecorini in yesterday's TIMES pass unanswered as it is calculated to lead public opinion astray on a very important question.

The writers start off with a comparison which must revolt every fair-minded man or woman in allied countries. "The Italian people," they say, "do not see why there should be such a difference between the treatment accorded to Germans and that accorded to the Southern Slavs of Slavonia, Croatia, Bosnia, and Herzegovina." Does this mean that the Italian people make no distinction between the Southern Slavs and the Germans as enemies in the war? If so, all further discussion of the question would be useless.

Can any fair-minded Italian for one instant pretend that the Southern Slavs were loyal subjects of Franz Josef, desiring the triumph of Austrian arms? The records are public. Month after month the South Slav members of the Austrian Parliament registered one impassioned protest after another against the imperial régime. It is notorious that the whole of Jugoslavia was seething with revolt, that thousands of Jugoslavs were hanged or imprisoned and that open insurrection was only prevented by the fact that the entire male population of military age had been mobilized and sent to the front.

The Jugoslav regiments surrendered "en masse" to the Serbs and to the Russians because they would not fight against the Allies. Captain Tozzi and Lieutenant Pecorini must know that, after the Congress of Oppressed Nations was held in Rome and the Jugoslavs were led to believe that Italy had abandoned her pretensions to annex Jugoslav territory, the Jugoslav regiments also surrendered "en masse" on the Italian front. Serbia proclaimed from the very first that she was fighting to free her brothers in race from the Austrian yoke, and every Jugoslav saw in Serbia the liberator, and Serbia was one of the allied powers.

Captain Tozzi and Lieutenant Pecorini complain that the Jugoslavs fought fiercely against the Italians. Can they, however, pretend that the army of King Victor Emmanuel was an army of liberation coming to free the Jugoslavs from the Austrian yoke?

According to the document signed on behalf of Italy by Marquis Imperiali, territories inhabited by 750,000 Jugoslavs were to be handed over to Italy without being consulted and against their will. What is this but annexation, naked and unashamed? What becomes of the much-vaunted self-determination of peoples? Is it astonishing that when the Jugoslavs learned the fate reserved for them they fought the invading Italian army to the death? The Jugoslavs look to the Allies for liberation. Can Captain Tozzi and Lieutenant Pecorini for one moment pretend that the Italian army was an army of liberation? I trow not. It was an army of invasion coming to seize Jugoslav territory and enslave 750,000 Jugoslavs.

To suggest that this resistance meant that the Jugoslavs preferred Austrian to Italian domination is utterly unjustified. But even if they did, what right has Italy to sit in judgment? The appreciation of two tyrannies must be left to the victims, not to the tyrants.

Captain Tozzi and Lieutenant Pecorini reproach Jugoslavia with accepting from Austria the admission of her independence. Why not? The Jugoslavs for four years past have been in revolt against Austria-Hungary and when that empire was beaten to its knees and accepted their demands, why should they not accept them? Captain Tozzi and Lieutenant Pecorini further ask, "Why did the Jugoslavs accept the birth certificate of their new nation from the Hapsburgs instead of obtaining it from the Allies, as the Czechoslovaks had done?" I have yet to learn that the Allies have recognized the new kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes. The reproach they make the Allies is that they have not accorded to them the recognition they gave to the Czechoslovaks.

Captain Tozzi and Lieutenant Pecorini further declare that "Italy is made to appear by unscrupulous propagandists as an aggressive and imperialistic nation, desirous only to supplement Austria in her rôle of oppressor of smaller nations." But, in the light of the secret treaty of London, is she anything else? She is trying, in defiance of the universally admitted principle of the self-determination of peoples, to enslave 750,000 Jugoslavs without their consent and against their will. This is a fact, and no amount of special pleading will get away from it.

The reproach of the secrecy of the treaty of London is completely justified. It was kept secret, not from the enemy, but from the Serbian Government, which was an ally, and from the Jugoslavs. The reason for its secrecy is not far to seek. All the parties to it had no desire for publicity, as they knew the disastrous effect its publication would have on the Serbs and Jugoslavs, whose interests it betrayed.

Fortunately for the world, the United States and the Jugoslavs are not bound by this document, and, in all probability, the first demand the American delegation will make at the Peace Conference will be that it be declared null and void, and that the whole question of the rival claims of Italians and Jugoslavs be debated on their merits, free from any trammel, diplomatic or otherwise.

The duty of the Allies is to find means completely to safeguard the interests of the Italian minority in Jugoslavia. Surely, if both sides are animated by good intentions, this should not "pass the wit of men." What Italy should strive for is a close alliance with the new States. With the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes as a buffer State between Italy and the Teuton powers Italy's security is assured. On ne passera pas.

TIME FOR A LEAGUE.

The Most Favorable Occasion Now at Hand.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with interest your editorial article in a recent edition entitled "The International League," evidently occasioned by Mr. Beck's address before the Bar Association on the same subject, which was reported on another page. I very much regret Mr. Beck's attitude. I was a lawyer before the war, and hope to be again. I recognise Mr. Beck's legal ability and have had a great admiration for his power of oratory, his statesmanlike vision, and his splendid Americanism. I therefore regret that his influence, which is great, is being exerted in opposition to the creation at this time of a League of Nations to have for its primary object the prevention of future wars. He finds an analogy between the present conditions and those existing immediately after the Revolutionary War. It does not seem to me that such an analogy can properly be drawn. The Constitutional Convention was convened three years and nine months after the treaty of peace with England was signed. It undoubtedly would have been called immediately after our independence had been obtained if the necessity for such action had then been apparent. Although the Revolution demonstrated elements of weakness in the old Confederation, however, it was not until 1787 that it was fully recognized that the existing conditions were intolerable. On the other hand, it has, for the last three years, been apparent to the civilized world that a repetition of the horrors of this war was unthinkable and could not be endured. Our forefathers sought to establish a permanent form of Government for a union of States. Such a federation of the nations of the world, or any of them, is not at the present time advocated by any one. The sole purpose is to prevent future wars through the instrumentality of a League of Nations.

Mr. Beck calls this a "mere abstract theory," a "visionary problem." Similar terms were used by the opponents of our Federal Constitution. The Constitutional Convention convened on May 25, 1787, and adjourned on Sept. 14 of the same year, having in less than four months accomplished their formidable task. And this in spite of their having no precedent to guide them, for it is a striking fact that, although Madison drew up for the use of the convention an abstract of all ancient, mediaeval, and existing Federal Governments, yet it is impossible to find that this document had the slightest influence on the actions of that body or that a single provision of the Constitution can be traced to any statement therein contained. Although it is hardly a debatable question, it would seem that, where the peoples of the world have lived under some form of legal system for so many years, the task involved in applying some of those principles, for a limited purpose, to relations between nations, is certainly no greater than the establishment of a new nation, under new principles, without precedent, and with conditions as they existed in 1787.

Mr. Beck urges delay because he says the world is now "torn with strife and hatred." There is, to be sure, internal strife in Germany and Russia, and possibly hatred on the part of Germany toward her conquerors. On the other hand, however, there probably never was a time in history when the nations, comprising most of the great freedom-loving peoples of the earth, were so united by bonds of mutual admiration, gratitude, and respect—bonds wrought from the sacrifices made by each for the good of all. There never was a time when the peoples of the world as a whole were so drawn together, so sympathetic, and so capable of great unselfish action for the common welfare. Let us not lose this unique opportunity. Let us not even postpone our efforts for a League of Nations until the end of the conference and thereby run the risk that discord may arise in the conference itself to prevent the formation of such a League. Civilization has, in the words of your editorial, "proceeded with leisure" in this matter for five thousand years. If during this period the world has been "sane," a little insanity (like General Grant's whisky) might be desirable! If we wait five years, as Mr. Beck suggests, we will probably wait fifty or five hundred. "Now is the accepted time."

NEED FOR DIET KITCHENS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

General Gouraud, writing with enthusiasm and appreciation of the work of the "Bien-Etre du Blessé," asks to have diet kitchens at Metz, Strasbourg, and at Pont de Kehl, where French, British, and American prisoners arrive every day. These men have been half starved for months, and some, alas! for years. What food they have had has been either revolting soups or artificial substitutes. In consequence their digestions are wrecked, and it is General Gouraud's hope to build them up (when they are not beyond hope) with our nourishing dietary before they return to their homes; otherwise they will be in no condition for work. The death rate among these returned prisoners is nine a day per hospital.

Moreover, in all these frontier hospitals there are men with wounds that will take months to heal, or with fever, incipient tuberculosis, and gastric troubles. All of our diet kitchens are running, and we are asked every day to establish others.

The American people have been wonderfully generous to "Bien-Etre du Blessé," and we are determined that their money shall be employed judiciously, therefore kitchens are only installed where the need is imperative. The following statement as a sample of our work may be interesting to our patrons:

On Dec. 28, 1918, we shipped to the kitchen of Hôpital temporaire Rollin, where there are many returned prisoners under treatment, 70 cases weighing 1,511 kilos, value 4,509 francs. This diet kitchen distributed during the month of December 11,552 portions and 1,100 special régimes. On Dec. 3 we shipped to the kitchen at Hôpital militaire, Royallieu, 110 cases, weighing 1,820 kilos, value 5,708 francs, and we will supply 1,200 hospitals. A great many military hospitals have been evacuated, but many more have not. The Ministère de l'Instruction publique et des Beaux-Arts has asked for all of the official records of the "Bien-Etre du Blessé" regarding this oeuvre as unique among war relief organizations and as having done a great and efficient work. He is to place the records in the archives of the Bibliothèque et Musée de la Guerre.

We must continue our work until May with increasing demands, and, therefore, beg that our friends will remain interested and generous for these few months more.

Checks should be made out to Le Bien-Etre du Blessé and sent to James A. Blair, Jr., National Allied Relief, 27 West Forty-fifth Street, New York.

THE DISPOSITION OF SYRIA

A Single Protectorate Preferred to a Division Among Many Nations

By PHILIP HITTI.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The question of Western Asia in general, and of Syria in particular, has loomed high in the political horizon of the recent weeks. That the question is of more than a momentary international interest and passing importance is evidenced by the fact that the eastern shore of the Mediterranean Sea holds a strategic position in the map of the Old World. It is the link between three continents, Europe, Asia, and Africa. Its military history has been rightly pictured as the procession of nearly all the world conquerors. Every Emperor who dreamed of a world kingdom from the time of Alexander and Julius Caesar down to the time of Napoleon and William Hohenzollern had a covetous eye set upon that narrow strip of land.

One of the discouraging features of the dispatches from London and Paris dealing with the settlement of the problem of Syria is the fact that such phrases as "legal aspirations"—used in connection with certain European powers—"rightful claims and ambitions," "spheres of control," &c., have been freely used. Evidently the problem is not being approached from the standpoint of what is most helpful to the people concerned and of what is conducive to the best interests of the world at large, but from the standpoint of what is good for this or that particular European nation. Those of us who were led to believe that such terminology has, as a result of the war, become obsolete, must have been still more shocked to discover that, according to certain "secret treaties" made by England and France at London in 1916 and by England, France, and Russia at Petrograd in 1917, Syria has been carved out into three or more spoils that go to almost as many victors. The inconsistencies of such treaties with the various declarations of statesmen with regard to the aims of the war and the principles of democracy and self-determination are easy to prove. This, however, is not the issue before us. The question is, are the provisions of these secret treaties, if carried out, likely to settle once for all the knotty "Eastern Question," or are they likely to disturb the even course of future events?

The provisions of the treaties and recent announcements show that a part of Northern Syria will be incorporated with Mesopotamia in the English sphere of influence. The southern part of Syria will be under international administration, whatever that may mean. The Lebanon and the littoral will go to France. Since the conclusion of those treaties, and to add to the complications of an already complicated situation, Damascus and Hauran have been granted to the King of al-Hijaz, whose son, Amir Faisal, has already established himself in the oldest capital of Syria and proceeded to appoint governing representatives over the region allotted him. Whatever intentions the British and French may entertain with regard to the future relationship of Damascus and Arabia, the fact remains that to dislodge Faisal from Syria is not going to be an easy job—in spite of the fact that the Arabs have nothing whatever to do with any part of Syria.

This disposition of Syria is bristled with difficulties and fraught with dangers of local and international character. Internationally viewed, here are all the elements necessary for a future explosion that will disturb the peace of the whole world. Locally viewed, this division of Syria will deal a death blow to Syrian national life and will hinder the progress of the newly liberated land.

The different parts of Syria are economically interdependent. To detach from Syria the fertile plain of Hauran, which is the granary of Syria, is nothing less than a calamity. Those of us who lived in Syria remember the long strings of camels which every Summer carried the wheat of Hauran to the Lebanon and the littoral. The people of Lebanon have undoubtedly preserved and manifested a more marked national consciousness than the rest of the people of Syria, but the lamentable experience of the last four years, in which the Lebanon, through starvation, lost about one-third of its population, ought to convince us of the dependence of Lebanon upon the plains of Syria. The massacre of the Armenians having shocked the whole civilized world—except the Germans—the Turks, intent upon the destruction of the Lebanese, resorted to a more subtle method than massacre. They simply cut off the food supply of the mountain and left the inhabitants to their fate.

If this disposition of Syria is destructive of the best interests of the Syrians and has in it the seeds of future strife, what, then, is the solution of the problem?

Without claiming the possession of a patent remedy, does it not seem from a perusal of the above facts that the safest solution lies in the direction of keeping the unity of Syria as a federated State, with each component part free to administer its own local affairs, but all united in a central Government under the trusteeship of a Western democratic power that will help the people to govern themselves and that will withdraw from the land as soon as its inhabitants can perform the function of full self-government?

Let us hope that when the League of Nations is formed as a result of the Peace Conference it will designate as a trustee over Syria a power that will keep the geographical entity of the land and that will enter the land primarily for the good of its inhabitants and that will thus help straighten out the tangle which unless satisfactorily straightened will continue to disturb the peace of the world. No power is better qualified to perform this service than the United States of America.

A JOB FOR A FIGHTER.

Not in Big Business, but the Teaching Professor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was very much interested in your article in the issue of Jan. 12 about former officers looking for "jobs," but I was very sorry to read what your "young Captain once a teacher" said. I fully agree with him that it is his "duty to help his country in these days, just as much as it was in the days of fighting," and that in order to do this he must "throw off the old mental and physical lassitude." He says: "Life and movement and the spirit of fighting are now in my blood and a part of my nature. I must have them, and I believe there is enough adventure in big business to satisfy me. I am willing to try anything that is offered, if there is fighting in it, and if it leads to something with a future." But why should he turn to big business for the fighting he wants? That looks more like fighting for one's self than for one's country. And where can a man find a better field for a fight than in a campaign against the forces of ignorance and inertia which must be driven out of our boys if we are to have the future leaders in all the arts and sciences, in social, technical, and political progress which alone can give us and hold for us a place in the forefront of civilization?

To go into big business is to increase the material wealth of our nation, a task which is only too attractive to most men, as well as to gain wealth for one's self. To go into teaching, not as a soft job but as the greatest fight on earth, is one of the highest patriotic services a man can do for his country. If the war has taught us anything, it is that we need for our defense in war as well as for our growth and progress in peace a large number of men and women trained to use their minds, to think, to invent, to keep up with all the latest scientific and technical ideas and to develop them and apply them in our own national life. During the whole course of the war the country was combed to find such men. They were taken from every line of life, and our college faculties were depleted of their best men and women to do war work. We all know how inadequate our supply of physicians and nurses proved to be when the great influenza epidemic found half our available stock overseas. Many families are mourning today deaths which need never have been had more of our boys been stimulated to a deeper interest in science and the intellectual life, to a stronger sense of social obligation. Then we would not have found so large a proportion of the best powers of the country in "big business."

These business men have been most valuable during the war. They have worked unselfishly for the common welfare and the country owes them a debt of gratitude. But the war has proved that, though an excellent army with an adequate number of officers can be turned out in a brief time, scientific and technical experts are long in the making. We have seen in thousands of cases that teachers of mathematics, of chemistry, of languages can become officers and good ones. What training can be better than the long habit of directing, inspiring, and controlling bodies of young men? Is not a whilom professor now doing more than any one man to consolidate and make permanent the efforts of our hard-won victory? But no power can make out of the business man a physicist or a physician, however eager he may be to render such service. If we are to progress in time of peace in technical arts, in public health, in inventions; if we are to be ready in time of war to take advantage of every possible means of victory, we must keep constantly increasing the body of men and women who are willing to devote more time and money to their education, to put off the period of earning and to find their main satisfaction, not in personal gain, but in intellectual interest in the work they are doing and in looking forward to a future made better by their efforts, though they themselves will probably never live to see it.

There can be no nobler or more patriotic service than to bring up such a generation of live intellectual workers and experts for our country, but it can only be done by live, intellectual teachers, men who can prove to our young folks that the things of the spirit are more fascinating than any material gain and that to use one's own powers and talents to the full is the greatest joy that life can give. And to whom can we look to give us such teachers if not to the young men who have been trained intellectually in our schools and colleges and then have had their moral and intellectual fibre hardened in the stern school of war? The teaching force of our country has already been depleted by the war. Our whole educational system has been shaken and dislocated. If our young Captain wants a job with fighting in it which leads to something in the future, let him go back to teaching, not in a spirit of "mental and physical lassitude," but with the feeling that he is going into the biggest manufacturing business in the world and that his product—good citizens and expert leaders of men—is the commodity which is most needed by his country and the world.

CARDINAL O'CONNELL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Since the lamented demise of Cardinal Farley in September the general public has awaited with considerable interest the choice of his successor to the Archbishopric of New York. A most searching consideration of the different candidates has occupied the advisers of the Papacy, but the most important See in America has remained vacant in the first and critical months of a new era. The visit of the Papal Under Secretary of State to America combines with the interesting rumor that Cardinal O'Connell may be invited to leave Boston. If that is so, Boston's loss will be New York's gain. During his remarkable clerical career William Henry O'Connell has combined some of the enthusiasm of youth with the love of responsible duty. In a Roman College or at the Mikado's court, upon his Cardinal's throne, or on the platform of Madison Square Garden he has shown that genial strength, which is typical of a risen leader of democracy.

In days of threatened Bolshevism an independent Archbishop who can touch and yet control the crowd is an asset to the Republic. His own dicta on the subject are scholastic in their precision. "Long live the people. The law is not the people. The people is not the law. The law is the principle of justice governing the people." Like most men of strong principles and unmeek ways the Cardinal is as much criticised as he is admired in his own church. He is a disciplinarian of a type that is needed in a world let loose. As a democrat he is less attractive to the interests and the wealthy than to the man in the street, for whom he conceives his church was founded. His world politics have been as wide as those of the Papacy and as often misunderstood. His distrust and dislike of the Russian Czardom as the last great persecuting power was due to his long training in Rome. He welcomed the relief which the Russian Revolution brought to both Catholic and Jew, while he remains one of America's effective protagonists against Bolshevism. The truly American relations which showed themselves at Cardinal Farley's elevation between the Jewish Protestant and Catholic communities of New York will not be impeded, if the popular desire is fulfilled by the translation of Cardinal O'Connell to the greatest see in the new world.

A CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR

He Gives His Views on Accepting Pay from the Government.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There has been much criticism of the fact that conscientious objectors released from prison have been given back pay. In justice to the objectors, will you print the following facts? I myself am a conscientious objector, having been released from prison on Jan. 14 because of some technical error in my court-martial.

The 113 objectors released by Secretary of War Baker's order of Jan. 22 were all men whom the Board of Inquiry not only regarded as sincere, but who would have taken alternate service in the form of a farm furlough or Friends' reconstruction work had they had the opportunity of doing so before they were court-martialed. In other words, they should not have been sent to prison at all, according to the War Department's own ruling.

The fact that these men were given back pay was no fault of theirs. Most of them had refused to sign the pay roll while they were in camp. This accounted for the fact that they had back pay to their credit up to the date of their court-martial, and the red tape of the army required that when discharged they receive the pay. The men themselves had no choice about accepting it unless they did what two men are reported to have done—refused to accept their discharges. Some of the men returned their pay to the War Department direct.

Had these men been less uncompromising in their stand most of them could have had perfectly safe and comparatively easy jobs in the camps. They refused to be soldiers, but they asked no favors.

In addition to the men released, there are over 200 objectors still retained at Fort Leavenworth. These men are either classed as insincere by the Board of Inquiry or they refused all work—even that on farms—because of their objection to conscription by the State. In spite of their refusal to be conscripted, some of these men were held in camps for four and five months waiting court-martial.

These men were ready to take the consequences of their protest. They felt that it was honorable for the Government to give men their choice between accepting conscription and going to prison. But the desire of the War Department to evade the issue—to keep the objectors under military authority and yet accord them liberal treatment at the same time—caused constant misunderstanding on the part of both army officers and objectors, resulting often in the most ridiculous situations. This accounts in large measure for the brutalities to objectors in some cantonments, notably Camp Funston, Kansas.

The C. O. when finally court-martialed was not tried or sentenced as a conscientious objector but as a disobedient and recalcitrant soldier, and then sent to a military prison, where he was still required to serve the military machine. When some of the men refused to do this they were kept in solitary confinement for over nine weeks.

These objectors do not ask for back pay nor honorable discharges. They refused to be soldiers, and if the War Department insists on keeping up the farce and requires them to accept pay for the time they spent in camps, that is not their business.

These facts may be more illuminating when compared with the policy of the English Government in regard to the C. O. In England the conscientious objector is tried by a civil tribunal which is open to the public. If found guilty, as he of course is, the objector is sentenced to not more than two years in a civil prison. After his first six weeks in prison, if found sincere, he is then offered alternate service under civilian authorities. If he prefers to stay in prison as a protest against all conscription that is his privilege. There is a definite, clear-cut policy. In this country the objector to military service spends most of his time speculating as to what will happen next.

INDIANS OF MEXICO.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The general tendency of your editorial article of Jan. 18 entitled "Conditions in Mexico" is so sound that it almost seems ungenerous to quarrel with any of its parts. At the same time it contains some errors which even though they will pass unnoticed and innocuous in Mexico are calculated to create in this country fresh elements of misconception as to "conditions in Mexico."

Except as an academic issue, the existence there of such a thing as "Indianism" cannot be taken seriously. It does not come into the realm of practical politics. It may be the pet dream of an occasional archaeologist; it may even lurk in the brain of one or two Indian students fed on the histories of Mexico that glorify the ancient Aztecs; it certainly is not the "slogan" of Zapata. Manuel Gamio, Director of Archaeology, (whatever that title may mean,) shows by the words quoted in the editorial that men in Mexico may be quite as mistaken regarding "Zapatism" as they may be in Washington. Their theories would surprise no one more than Zapata, who is not an Indian and would resent the insinuation. The writer has lived for thirty years in Morelos; knows Zapata and all his family.

There is another mistake contained in the editorial under notice to the effect that the Indians "were ousted from their lands by convenient legal process" in Morelos. This is an utter fallacy without the shadow of foundation in the history of the conquest of Mexico or of the colonial epoch. At the time Cortes discovered and conquered Mexico (New Spain) the Indians, who then populated the district very sparsely and who increased fourfold under Spanish rule, did not till the lands now in possession of the great plantations; neither did they graze cattle on them, as they did afterward, for the conquerors found no cattle at all in New Spain. Their agriculture was limited to small plots, irrigated only along the low-lying beds of the rivers. All this is a matter of history. The first irrigation systems were built by Cortes; others followed, and some were still in the making when the revolution stopped everything. To claim proprietorship in these lands for the Indians of Mexico would be as fanciful as maintaining rights for the redskins in the ground of New York. Besides the Aztecs themselves had taken them from the Toltecs.

The only struggle going on in Mexico is one for political power and riches.

Spoke Only Gaelic.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just read the article by Padraic Colum with interest and appreciation. When I visited my native place, Arisaig, Highlands of Scotland, in 1908, I found persons who could speak Gaelic only and many others who spoke Gaelic and English.

MEXICAN LAWS

Complaints of American Investors Against New Carranza Decrees

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Association of Producers of Petroleum in Mexico, in the interest of truth, asks you to publish the following. Its remarks upon statements made by Signor Manuel Carpio upon the present Mexican Government's attempt to confiscate American-owned oil fields in Mexico, which appeared in your issue of Sunday, Jan. 19:

Mr. Carpio was reported as saying:

"Mexican officials * * * could not fail to see the folly of confiscatory legislation, for the reason that it could not be made good without a mammoth array of power."

He makes no admission that confiscation is wrong or even inexpedient. His point is that Mexico is too weak to confiscate American oil fields, desirable though such spoliation might be. He proceeds to prove Mexico's weakness by a statement of school teachers unpaid and of lack of resources, in spite of the fact that Mexico receives income 50 per cent. in excess of the Diaz Government's budget, and of the present-day failure to pay Mexican bond interest which Diaz met with promptness out of his lesser income.

He continues:

"On the other hand, the flow of oil out of Mexican territory has taken place in such tremendous quantities that it represents untold wealth, leaving the Mexican nation practically nothing as the product of this gigantic industry."

What are the facts? In 1918, according to Mexican figures, 57,797,000 barrels of petroleum were exported from Mexico. On the basis of the statistical valuation of 1917 (no such valuation has appeared for 1918, but prices are no higher) this oil was worth not over 55,000,000 pesos. But on this amount Mexico, also on official statement, received 12,000,000 pesos in export taxes alone—or over 20 per cent. of the oil's value. The export tax charges at Tampico and Tuxpam, through arbitrary assessment, amount to over 20 per cent. of the selling price of oils loaded there. Is this "practically nothing"? It is even now over two-thirds of the total amount of dividends paid by all the companies together. What would Mr. Carpio call practically something? What would he call a just participation by the Mexican Government in an industry developed by the energy, brains, and capital of persons other than the Mexican Government and in the face of harassing acts and restrictions of that organization?

"Practically nothing" is misleading and thoroughly untrue. Mexico has received up to date far greater income from taxes on oil development than the developers have recovered for their efforts. One company in this association, for example, pays and has paid over 100,000 pesos a month in export taxes alone, and on account of this very tax has never earned a dividend for its shareholders. Only two oil producing companies in Mexico have ever paid dividends. Export and other taxes have consumed returns from operations.

So great is this taxation that the Mexican Government itself realized that not only could no increase of it be defended, but that as it now stands it is excessive; and from the realization of that fact was developed the new scheme of attempting to increase the revenue of the Government by claiming ownership of the oil itself, it being thought that in this way, since a reasonable taxation had been more than exhausted, a new bonanza would be opened for development for the Carranza Government.

Mr. Carpio states:

"The plan of nationalizing the Mexican oil fields was resorted to in the new Constitution with the view of raising a reasonable revenue for the benefit of the country, but there has been no [illegible] * * * to 'grab American millions' * * * there is really no purpose in the Mexican mind * * * to take away from the owners the thing that belongs to them."

Let us see: Oil lands were acquired by American companies through purchase and lease exclusively from private owners under the admitted legal enactments of the Mexican Governments from Gonzales to Madero. The title of these companies was not disputed until, in 1917, the Carranza Government's Constituent Assembly adopted a constitution reading in part:

"In the nation is vested the ownership of petroleum and all hydrocarbons, solid, liquid, and gaseous."

Petroleum in Mexico belonged, and of right belongs, to owners or lessees of the lands above, who acquired it for value in the only legal way. The newest constitution declares it does not belong to its owners, but belongs to the nation. Decrees dating from Feb. 19 to Aug. 12, 1918, provide:

1. That the nation owns the oil everywhere.

2. That the nation may license Mexicans and Mexican corporations only to develop its oil.

3. That present owners must file their title deeds as the first step toward recognizing their loss and the nation's acquisition of petroleum deposits.

(4) That if present owners and lessees are Mexicans or Mexican companies they may continue in possession by making special contracts on terms fixed by the Government with the nation and paying the nation's rentals and royalties on the lands in recognition of the nation's ownership.

And no American or foreign company may do more than file its titles and give up its lands. No foreign company may acquire the new license right to develop oil lands.

Mr. Carpio's statement that there is "really no purpose * * * to take away from the owners the things that belong to them" cannot be reconciled with the very real spoliation provided by the constitution and these decrees. How can he explain the effects of the proposed petroleum code presented before Congress providing for exactly the same results?

Mr. Carpio's allusion to "concessions" in this connection is adroit. It would lead your readers to believe that American companies' claim of title is based on Government concession or privilege. No American company has any such claim. All, without exception, have bought and leased their land in Mexico from individual owners. Mr. Carpio says: "Mexico is not an enemy, but a friend that expects justice." May we not add that we are not enemies, but friends, who have, as he admits, developed Mexico's natural wealth, which his own countrymen can not and do not develop, and that we expect justice from Mexico? In this case, the sole justice to be expected is recognition of legally acquired rights and titles. We cheerfully admit the right of Mexico to tax the production of oil. We have never denied it. But we do deny the right of Mexico to confiscate property for the purpose of raising revenue, and we may be permitted to add, as does our President, to whom Mr. Carpio pays a graceful and deserved compliment, that friendship depends on mutual respect for right and justice.

A friendlier feeling is sought, but cannot come while Mexico insists on despoiling American investors and dividing properties they developed among favored Mexicans.

RACES IN THE REVOLUTION

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 27, 1919.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with great interest the letter written to THE TIMES by Hon. Morgan J. O'Brien, appearing in the issue of Sunday, Jan. 19, under the heading "Loyalists in 1776," and in which he criticises certain statements made in a previous letter written by Mr. Justice Russell of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia.

The contentions made by Judge O'Brien in the latter part of his letter in regard to the number and proportion of Irish troops serving in the American armies during the Revolution deserve attention.

Without the slightest wish to take away from any Irishman any honest glory to which he may be entitled, much less the glory of having aided in the immortal struggle which effected our independence, I take the liberty of saying that I do not believe Judge O'Brien's claim of the large part played by the Irish in the Revolution can be upheld—I mean upheld by the best evidence—to which he so earnestly appeals in his letter.

Throughout his letter Judge O'Brien draws a clear distinction between the "Scotch-Irish" from the North of Ireland and the "Irish" from the South of Ireland. He takes exception to Justice Russell's reference to certain patriots of South Carolina as "Scotch-Irish from Ulster," and strenuously objects that "there is no justification whatever for so describing the immigrants from Ireland who took so valiant a part in the achievement of our independence, not only in the Carolinas, but in all parts of the colonies." He then proceeds to make calculations as to the relative number of Scotch-Irish and Irish who emigrated to the colonies previous to the Revolution and also as to the number of Irishmen enlisted in the American armies during that war.

Having satisfied himself as to the immigrants, Judge O'Brien next takes up his estimate of the number of Irish troops in the revolutionary armies. Here his knowledge was gained from "an examination of 'the names on the muster rolls of the various bodies of men raised in defense of the Colonies, and in numerous cases also the enlistment papers which show the 'countries of nativity' of the men.' From these sources he arrives at the conclusion that at least '38 per cent. of the revolutionary forces were either of Irish birth or were American-born sons of Irish immigrants!'"

It is generally known that the total number of troops employed on the American side during the eight years of the Revolution was about 300,000. The World Almanac for 1917, page 610, gives the number as 309,781. Judge O'Brien has determined "on a most conservative computation" that 38 per cent. of this number, or 117,716, were of Irish birth or extraction.

The most authoritative and trustworthy figures which we have as to the number and composition of the population of the United States will be found in "A Century of Population Growth From the First Census of the United States to the Twelfth, 1790 to 1900," prepared under the direction of the Bureau of the Census of the Department of Commerce and Labor of the United States, and printed by the Government Printing Office at Washington in 1909. The statistics presented in this book were prepared by an adequate force of skilled men and women from the only official and authentic records in existence, mainly the census returns, and, though not perfect, undoubtedly set forth the facts as nearly as can be done.

On Page 80 of "A Century of Population Growth," Table 17, the total population of the United States in 1790 is given as 3,929,625, composed of 3,172,444 whites and 757,181 negroes. On page 121 is printed Table 48, showing the number and per cent. distribution of the white population according to nationality, in 1790, as follows:

	Number.	P. C.
English	2,605,699	82.1
Scotch	221,562	7.0
Irish	61,534	1.9
Dutch	78,959	2.5
French	17,619	0.6
German	176,407	5.6
All other	10,664	0.3
All nationalities	3,172,444	100.0

The returns of the First Census did not show directly the source of origin, or nationality, of the population, and the numbers of each nationality in this table were determined from the nationality indicated by the names of heads of families. As explained in the first part of Chapter II. of "A Century of Population Growth," the results obtained by this method doubtless give a reasonably accurate analysis of the nationality of the population, and Judge O'Brien seems to have used the same method in some of his calculations. It is also true that the figures used are those for the year 1790, the year of the First Census, but it may be conceded that the Irish population did not decrease in the seven years following the surrender at Yorktown. It will also be conceded that the total number of Irish troops in the American armies could not have exceeded the total Irish population.

The great tide of Irish immigration did not reach the American shores until after the colonies had achieved their independence. Of the total white population of 3,172,444 in 1790 the Irish numbered only 61,534, or 1.9 per cent., and if every man, woman and child of Irish birth or extraction had been enrolled in the American armies they would still have lacked some 56,000 of the alleged 38 per cent.

This letter is not written in the spirit of controversy, but only "in the interests of historic truth."

WOMEN WAGING WAR AGAINST CHILD LABOR

Scholarship System Keeps Many Children in School, Thus Fitting Them Better for Future Work

SCHOLARSHIPS are quite the accepted thing in college. Why not in school? That is a question that is being agitated just now. We hear many rumors of work being done, of scholarship funds being gathered together, of vocational advice being administered in connection with scholarship payments.

There are a number of women at the Henry Street Settlement who for years have been perfecting and distributing a scholarship fund. They started in a very small way, as much as twelve years ago, in response to an individual demand, and from that nucleus of an idea has grown an organization which takes care of two hundred or more scholarship payments every year.

The whole idea of the scholarship work is this: Children may have their working papers at the age of fourteen, but more often than not they are illy fitted at that age to take their places in the working world. Sometimes, because of bad health, or because of an imperfect education, they should not be allowed to add to the illiterate quality of New York's working forces. The school system does what it can to impress upon the minds of the children the fact that an initial education counts largely toward their ultimate success, but the schools cannot supply the wherewithal to pay for car fares and lunches, and to help the struggling mother of a large family eke out her meagre income.

That is just where the scholarship fund comes in. It talks to the child and to the family in the language that makes the highest appeal. It says: "I will supply for you $3 a week—not, perhaps, as much as you will earn if you are working, but enough to help considerably, and enough to allow you to make the effort to educate yourself." It is the college idea all over again applied to these miniature specimens of society. A successful business man said when he heard of the scheme: "I wish something like that had been done for me—then perhaps I would have more health today, besides the money I have succeeded in earning."

A child who starts to work at 14 is losing something. That is an absolute fact. It may not be apparent just at the start, but it will surely crop up in after years, and it surely is the duty of every one who is bent up on bettering the civic conditions of the community to see that this vital subject has close attention.

How Children Are Helped.

The smoothly running scholarship organization goes into the subject of the children's problems with much more thoroughness than merely to pay them money. It first takes note of the individual home problem, and if the difficulties there prove too great for the child to struggle against steps are taken to relieve that situation. Then the child is asked to come on a certain specified day each week to collect the weekly installment of its scholarship. At that time someone who is familiar with the question is ready to listen to the tale of any new and unforeseen obstructions in the stormy path of acquiring knowledge. Added to all this, the Scholarship Committee goes very exhaustively into the matter of vocational guidance. From the time the child comes under its care its mind is guided and directed toward making a decision with regard to a specific vocation. Often this is a work of some labor and love, for the subject is a new one, difficult to understand. However, by means of science and a large portion of human interest wonders have been accomplished.

Many are the interesting stories which prove that the standard of home visiting and investigation are necessary details in the work of administering scholarship payments. For instance, there were two little children who, though they started out at school with the highest of marks and reputations, seemed, for some unaccountable reason, to be going down, down, down, so far as their reports were concerned. The scholarship expert was greatly puzzled. No questions of hers seemed to bring forth any satisfactory explanation.

She visited the home, and there it developed after a circuitous amount of pleasant conversation, that the father of the children, being afflicted with tuberculosis, was using all of the milk that the family could afford. In consequence, the children were going to school in the mornings with little or no breakfast to fortify their young systems for the strenuous work of the day. Immediately an additional supply of milk was provided and the grades on the report cards automatically rose.

Another point which arises again and again in the midst of the child's family is a lack of sympathy from the mother and father. Most of them, being foreigners, fail utterly to understand why there should be all this hue and cry about schooling. They have managed very well from their points of view; what have the children to gain from such quantities of education?

Once it was even necessary to resort to the means of taking to one family a successful business woman who told how she never could have gained her present success without a high school training. It was a pretty story, graphically illustrated, which made a mighty appeal and did the work. It was as good as an educational "movie."

The child's weekly visit to the scholarship office constitutes a strong element of educational influence in its developing mind, for there everything is keyed to give it a personal boost. The boys arrive with shining faces to tell of their latest accomplishments in athletics as well as in the important field of lessons. One of them exhibits his growing muscles while, at the same time, he proudly points to bright achievements in his algebra.

If an all-pervading gloom is apparent when the child makes one of these weekly calls, then the investigator knows full well that there is something wrong somewhere and, if her tact fails to disclose the cause, she makes a note of it and follows it up in other and more effective ways.

Also, this regular personal contact with the child enables those who are interested to guide it in its social activities, to help it make its fun count toward the best fulfillment of its life.

Vocational guidance, as every one realises, is in its infancy, but for that very reason the child should benefit by all the latest accepted discoveries and standards. As a part of the school curriculum it has not by any means been perfected, although much is being done in that direction. It is, however, in the intimacy of the scholarship work that much in the way of vocational guidance can be accomplished.

Guiding Children Aright.

The first big step in any method of vocational guidance is that the individual shall realize what it is he would like best to do and what he considers himself best fitted to do. After the mind once awakens to this necessity there is a long and weary road to be traversed before a decision is arrived at. Now, the sooner the germ of the idea is planted in the child's mind the better and more accurately will he be able to decide the question for himself.

The provision of an adequate trade training for those whose inclinations run in that way is one of the first duties of the Scholarship Committee. Then, for those who wish above everything else to enter the commercial and business world, courses of study must be outlined which will best fit them to take up the first duties to which they will, in the ordinary course of events, be assigned.

They are imbued with the idea that, even after they leave school and go to work, their educations are not finished. Schools for the continuation of their chosen field of work are recommended and a follow-up system for graduates sees that they carry on the continuation work at night, where that is at all possible.

Americanization—that subject about which we hear so much nowadays—is greatly helped by the activities of this scholarship committee.

A child can be educated within an inch of its life and never fully realize the contributory principles which will make him and his family a good American. But here, where his individual little soul is looked after, the big question can be explained to him in terms which he can readily absorb and understand. And he, in turn, can take the information home and retail it after his own fashion for the benefit of his parents, who are as anxious and interested as he. He can make things clear to their foreign minds where an outsider would be quite helpless.

During the war and now, when the results of the war are being so keenly felt in the families of the soldiers, the Red Cross has given hearty and effective co-operation to the Henry Street Scholarship Committee. Their social service workers realized at the beginning that the brunt of the hardship was to fall upon the frail shoulders of the children. They would be forced to work before they were at all fitted to undertake the responsibility simply because their families had been deprived of such large portions of their support. Therefore a Red Cross fund was added to the existing fund, and whenever a family coming within the ken of Red Cross workers needed this sort of help, the child was referred to Henry Street, where those trained to handle such cases immediately took charge. In this way war suffering has been in some measure alleviated, and the more efficiently because the work was handled by an organization giving to it the benefit of its long experience.

Benefit to Employers.

From the employer's point of view this scholarship idea is tremendously valuable. He has been tearing his hair because the help that he has been able to secure has been most inadequately prepared for the duties which he must have accomplished for the good of his business. He has wondered how he could ever adjust himself to the existing lack of direction in education, and here comes a plan which takes all the burden from his shoulders and offers to turn out for his use employes possessed of a higher standard of working capital.

Any employer would rather have an educated than an uneducated employe, but it is not always his luck to be able to secure exactly what he knows is so necessary to his business. He is the man who, above all others, wishes to further the advancement of this scheme, which every one acknowledges to be good, but which he knows to be a grave necessity.

If we start with the children, we can accomplish untold wonders. That the necessity of this scholarship idea is being recognized is proved by the fact that all of a sudden endless societies for the raising and distributing of scholarships are being formed all over the country.

The Federal Government itself has organized a "Back to school" drive, because the fact has become so apparent that, during the war, more children than ever have been forced into industry.

CRIPPLED SOLDIERS AND SENTIMENTALITY

Women Must Meet Mutilated Men Sanely and as Comrades, Says Mrs. Rupert Hughes—Hope for Success

By ADELAIDE HUGHES.

HOW will they be received by their women, these wounded of ours, when they come home? Or, rather, how are they being received, since some hundreds of them are already here?

On these women and on all women is placed another mighty responsibility; and on their reaction to it rests their own future happiness as well as their men's happiness and a measure of the nation's prosperity.

That our permanently disabled may be few is our wish and prayer, yet the percentage, whatever it may be, great or small, must be faced in the same way.

The war machine which as in a few months placed hundreds of thousands of men on battlefields thousands of miles away is preparing on the same scale to salvage its returned men. They are to receive every advantage that science in its most advanced stage can give them. The work of reconstruction, rehabilitation, and re-education in America is to lack nothing that America can give.

Further, our men are to be paid to help themselves. In our civil war a humane but mistaken Government paid its disabled men to stay idle, or, what amounted to that, since the average human cripple, getting no re-education and no encouragement to help himself, and being deprived of his pension if he were able to support himself, naturally fell back on a life of idleness and dependence on his Government.

Economy of Lives.

In the war of today a crippled man is re-educated by his Government, enabled to follow the trade or career he himself selects, and, no matter how much money he may earn in the new life, he still receives his lifetime pay from the Government. Thus the economy America will practice in her enlightenment is not in coin of the realm but in human life, industry, and self-respect.

The man who was illiterate when called to defend his country, and returned disabled will, during convalescence, be educated. The man whose disabilities unfit him to follow the trade he was taken from by the war will be re-educated to a new trade. The college boy whose education has been interrupted will receive during convalescence the necessary instruction from his own college to complete his course.

The hospitals are to be managed in the zone system so that the man from Oklahoma may be treated in Oklahoma, the Californian in California, and so on.

And meanwhile that greatest mother of them all, the Red Cross, will house the relatives and friends that they may be within constant visiting distance of their men.

There remains only the mental, sentimental and psychological part of the situation. But how big a part it plays! and how useless the rest without it!

Women's Responsibility.

This part belongs to our women, and our women alone. Not only on the woman whose man is disabled, but on all women this rests, the friend, acquaintance, passerby. One of the first thoughts of the average mutilated man on his return from the valley of the shadow is: "How will my girl take this? How will my wife take this? How will the women take this?" That we may take it wisely, sanely, comradely and without undue emotion of one sort or another must be our utmost aim. And so this clarion call of women to arms.

No hero-worshipping, no pitying, no gushing, no sentimentalizing! Instead, we shall say to each and every mutilated man, our own or other women's own: "The Germans took your arm, your leg, your eye, didn't they? They couldn't take your soul, could they? They couldn't take your spirit, could they? They couldn't ruin your life, could they? They couldn't spoil you for work or for play?"

One young girl of my acquaintance has married rather in haste, and under the glamour of the "forward march" order, an officer in our army. Discussing the possible event of his returning to her as a cripple, she exclaimed: "Oh, if he comes home without an arm or a leg, or otherwise deformed, I can't live with him. I simply can't. I'd do anything I could for him because I love him, but I could not live with him."

Shrinking from Deformity.

This sounds as if the girl herself were distinctly unworthy, and her love for the young officer a decidedly fair weather arrangement; yet that is not the case. She is a girl of strong and splendid character, and I believe she really loves her husband. She simply has not been prepared. Her mind and body are normal and have the normal shrinking from mutilation of the body.

The mutilated themselves have at first a great abhorrence of their own as well as other people's mutilation. One of our crippled soldiers, when asked if he would care to see some motion pictures depicting the accomplishment of American crippled men, said: "Show me anything but stumps—I cannot look at stumps."

He himself has an arm off at the shoulder and a leg off at the thigh.

But a merciful Providence sees to it that we become, in time, used to anything; and a revulsion of that sort, if felt, can be, and is, quickly overcome.

The only question concerning our women is that the proper frame of mind be achieved before they see their men; for the least revulsion or attitude of pity on the part of a loved woman will create a permanently harmful effect on the man, will leave a real scar.

Supposing all humans to have been born with only one arm and one leg or no eyes, our lives and loves would have contrived to exist in just the same way.

Successful Cripples.

Successful cripples, and there are many startling cases now in our own country, usually become just a litttle better and more expert and efficient in their own trades or professions than are their whole, able-bodied competitors.

Possibly, and very probably, the handicap itself acts as a stimulant. The half body works with all its soul, the whole body in most cases with only half its soul. And it is the soul alone that moves to success in achievement. Milton was blind. Vierge made his famous illustration for "Don Quixote" when he had lost the use of his right arm and had to learn to draw with his left.

Countless other cases of bitter obstacles brilliantly overcome might be cited. And so to our present day, when one of England's most distinguished novelists is in an anguish of unconquerable rheumatism and makes literature that will live.

A banker in an American city conducts a big business and has no legs. A news dealer with an arm off at the shouder and the other arm off above the forearm sells papers and makes change more swiftly than another on the busiest corner of New York City.

A purchasing agent, with one arm and one leg, in a Western city allows no attendance or help whatsoever to his disabilities. And a Judge, with no arms, sits on a bench in a Texas court, yet writes and successfully practices law.

Doubtless each successful cripple has won his fight with the help of some wise woman, a mother, a sister, a sweetheart has been there to encourage and inspire. So now we women of America must do our utmost for the men who have given their utmost to our protection. We must continue to look up to our disabled in pride, not down upon them in pity; do not let our souls and mentalities become crippled, nor our sympathies misdirected or maudlin.

With fortitude, no matter how crushing the blow, with ever-enduring patience, and, above all, with love and understanding to match the love and understanding that have made our men willing and anxious to go forth and make this great sacrifice of their bodies, let us help them the while they are being recalled to life.

FARMERS WANT OLD TIME

Not long after the clocks were moved ahead an hour last spring in the attempt to steal sixty minutes of time each day, the fact that farmers hereabouts were complaining of the hardship which such action worked to them, and how in many instances they were ignoring the change entirely, keeping their clocks running under the normal system, were made the subject of comment in these columns.

It appears that the disapproval then displayed is to be continued and a strong fight made against a repetition of the so-called daylight saving scheme for the coming summer. In the West, where the farmers have more formidable organizations than are found here in the East, a plan of action has been outlined. How they have formulated their objections and what they intend to do are set forth explicitly in the following excerpt from an article on the subject:

"The farmers do not want to see the clock turned ahead next spring. They complain that the change of time makes them lose an hour's work during the haying and wheat harvesting season because of the heavy dews that do not dry in time for them to start the day's work until 9:30 o'clock in the morning.

"Under the old system it was possible for them to begin work in the fields at 8:30 o'clock, but under the new scheme they cannot start until an hour later. This, they say, causes them the entire loss of an hour, because no matter at what time they start work the hired hands insist on quitting for the day promptly at 6 o'clock in the evening. They urge that instead of forcing them to lose this hour during the most important season, it would be better for the workers in the cities, who wish to save the hour of daylight, to report for work an hour early. They propose to fight a re-enactment of the time-changing law in Congress."

This is the identical argument made last year, and its force has lost nothing by what transpired during the first season of experiment.

WOMEN'S SUCCESS AT FARM LABOR

FARM work by women in the United States not only will continue as widely as during wartimes, but may increase, according to the officers of the Woman's Land Army of America. The New York State branch of the organization has been holding a convention here, and it was decided that there should be no let-up in the business of sending out units of young women to help remedy the labor shortage.

Mrs. Robert C. Hill, who probably knows more than any one else about enlisting city girls for country work, is authority for the statement that farmers all over the State have become enthusiastic backers of the Land Army. At first they were skeptical, insisting that women could not do the heavy work of men. The hundreds of girls who went out with the units, however, have shown that industry and skill could make up for mere strength in most farming activities, and there are some kinds of work in which on the average they even excel men.

A farmer who owns several hundred acres near Poughkeepsie was among the speakers at the convention. He told in detail how he had done his work through the last season with the help of the young women, after he had been unable to get men. The results were better than in former years, and he has notified the Land Army that he will take the girls as long as they want to come to his place.

A three-reel moving picture, with professional actors in the leading rôles, photographed among the hills and valleys of Dutchess County, has been launched by the Land Army to let the public know what it is doing and how its work progressed in the last two years. The film tells the story of a farmer who wouldn't believe women could be of any use to him. His wife persuaded him to give the sex a trial. He got nine girls and their director—if the scene were not on a farm, she might be called a chaperon—and kept the group at work from June to late October. The pictures show the workers in bloomers and short skirts, planting, hoeing, plowing, driving teams, running tractors, harvesting fruit on tall ladders, operating reapers and doing all the other things men do on a big profitable farm.

Martially speaking, you are a brave man. You can receive the Croix de Guerre without flinching. Military strategics are as simple and inevitable to you as the plot of a movie. You feel yourself the easy equal of presidents, prime ministers, captured German counts, grizzled Irish top sergeants. But at home, on the firing line—at a tea, a dance, the opera—

Kamerad! Kamerad! Kamera-ad!

Can you camouflage smart conversation? Can you deal—by direct and ricochet fire—with topics of the day?

Are you casual, convincing, brilliant, when the talk drifts through Italian drama, unmarried financiers, South American pugilists, dogs for well-dressed bachelors, metropolitan tenors, Jascha Heifetz's bowing, and the views of the Jugo-Slavic protagonist?

Are you charming, airy, irresistible, with timid butterflies, ex-kings, second cousins, East Indian dancers, Kansas senators, divorced sopranos, stout heiresses, worried earls? . . . Or do you spend most of your evening searching for an inconspicuous funk-hole among the palms?

And yet—it's so easy, so simple, to be a social hero as well as a dress-uniform; a wit as well as a salute; to get the Distinguished Service Cross from your hostess; to be mentioned in dispatches by blonde debutantes——

All you need to do is to go to the nearest news-stand and spend 35 cents for the one magazine that keeps you in touch with every new movement; with every new tendency; with every new sport; with every phase of artistic, social, and intellectual American life; the magazine that makes you a social asset instead of a social liability—

INDUSTRIAL TESTS AT CANTONMENTS

Novel System to Test Trade Ability of Drafted Men Was Successfully Applied by Experts

By NEIL MACNEIL.

NOW that the war is won, the story of a great American achievement may be told—the story of how the American Army got the right man for the job.

The fact that the army measured its men physically and intellectually is well known. What is not known is the fact that the army also measured its men industrially. This is a secret that has been guarded jealously, for nothing like it had ever been attempted before, and it was a great success. Not only was there the danger of the information proving of great value to the enemy, but there was always the danger of antagonizing the labor unions of the country—and, anyway, there was no need for publicity, for the importance and success of the work was recognized by the Government and the army, and there was the possibility that men coming into the army through the draft might prime themselves for the tests.

In our army there was no time to develop specialists. They had to be found ready-made, and found quickly. Divisions of many thousands of men were built in a few week, and in a few months were taking their places in the firing line. Yet, in every hundred men in a division, twenty-five had to be specialists. The old method in the army for getting these specialists was to make them to order, and any intelligent man was considered good raw material. But this, in our new army, was impossible; the specialists had to be found in the thousands of men from every walk of life pouring into the cantonments through the draft, and this presented the problem of measuring the men industrially and determining the capabilities and skill of each man at his trade.

Task Seemed Impossible.

It has always been considered impossible to determine a workman's degree of skill in his trade in a test which would take but a few minutes to give. Several weeks was thought a short time for a foreman to observe the skill of a man, and when it was proposed further that those who should be the examiners should know nothing of the trades themselves, it was thought all the more impractical. But this, nevertheless, was what the army had to do. Upward of 3,000 men were pouring in a steady stream through the larger cantonments daily, men with every degree of skill, from every walk of life, and these would have to be measured industrially that same day, and by men who knew nothing themselves of the trades, for there was a dearth of the specialists needed, and those who were available could not be spared to be examiners.

Yet this was actually accomplished. The tests were formulated, and it was found that they actually did determine to a nicety the industrial skill of a man, and the American Army, as a result, got the right man for the job. Every man was measured physically, intellectually, and industrially on entering the army, so that a glance at the files later would show the number of capable men available for a position and the exact calibre of each. It was not a matter of getting a job for the man, but of getting the man for the job, and the army took no chances.

Early in the war the need for some record of a man ability was recognized, and the Committee on Classification of Personnel in the army was organized. It at once revolutionized army methods. Where before appointments were largely haphazard and often a man could not be found at all, the qualification card system was adopted, which showed every man who claimed to be capable of filling the position. Every man in or entering the army was interviewed; his whole life was investigated; his education, proficiency at any trade, years of experience, and much other information of value in judging men was recorded.

Later still, psychological tests were introduced by the committee. These tests determined the alertness, power of concentration, common sense, general knowledge and mental development of every man in the service, all of which was added to the qualification cards. The army was now able to classify its men according to their civil life occupations, their years of experience, their mental development, and the degree of skill that each man claimed to have at his trade. But the committee had to accept each man's word—and this proved a weakness.

Bitter experience later proved that these records were only about 40 per cent. correct. It was found that few men minimized their own ability, that the average man was inclined to exaggerate and did not measure up to his own opinion of himself. The man who was an apprentice claimed to be a journeyman, the journeyman to be an expert.

For instance, in the Spring of last year, when the movement of American troops to France on a large scale began, the docking facilities of France were overtaxed. Hundreds of thousands of men were arriving monthly; equipment, supplies, and ammunition could not be unloaded. General Pershing cabled for 175 electric crane operators to relieve the congestion. Never was there a greater need for men. The Germans were driving down on Paris; it was a dark hour for the Allies.

The War Department turned to the qualification cards and picked out 175 crane operators, who were listed as experts. They were rushed to France on the first ship available, arrived in record time, and were set to work. It discovered that only 25 of the 175 could do the work.

Test Division Organized.

It was decided there and then that some means would have to be taken to measure the ability of the men in the army who claimed to have had technical and mechanical training and experience, and it resulted in the organization of the Trade Test Division of the Committee on Classification of Personnel in the army.

Theirs was a difficult task. More than [illegible]00,000 men were being called up in the draft monthly, men of every grade of skill and ability and representing every trade. There were no precedents to follow. Nothing like it had ever been attempted before, excepting on a small scale in the British Army. Standard tests would have to be drawn up, which would actually tell whether a man claiming trade ability was an expert, a journeyman, or an apprentice. The tests would have to be a measure of his abilitay, and, at the same time, be fair to men of different grades of skill and to men from all parts of the United States, so that when the army called for experts or journeymen they would be given experts and journeymen in a national sense, and not merely men who were considered such in their particular locality. The great problem was, of course, the formulation of the tests themselves, and to this end the committee opened offices in Newark, the centre of many great industries. It called in the assistance of psychologists with experience in measuring mental development, the employment experts of some of the large corporations, and a staff of statisticians, and the work began.

They eventually overcame all difficulties and formulated tests which met three requirements: (1) they differentiated between the various grades of skill; (2) they produced uniform results in various places and in the hands of persons of different characteristics; (3) they consumed the least amount of time and energy consistent with the best results.

The tests were of three classes—oral tests, picture tests, and performance tests. The oral test was the most used, for it was the easiest to give, and because in most cases the result was so definite and so convincing that further tests were unnecessary. The process of development of an oral test will indicate why it did its work so well and why so much faith was placed in it.

The Personnel Office in Washington from time to time submitted to the Newark office of the Trade Test Division a list of the trades most urgently needed in the army, and, on the basis of this list, the assignments were made to the experts working in the building up and standardization of the tests. The field force, first of all, made an inquiry into the conditions of the trade, to determine the feasibility of a test in it, and if it was a recognized trade. It was found, for instance, that there was no such thing as the gunsmith trade, although there were gun repairers. They then inquired into the elements which required tests and which would permit of testing; whether men could be graded in that trade, according to their skill. In some trades they found that the trade consisted of a simple set of operations and that there were no gradations of skill among those working at it.

Finally they determined the kind of tests that could be used. In some trades, such as typewriting and truck driving, it was found that they were solely a matter of skill and that performance tests were preferable to oral. In other trades, such as interior wiring and power plant operation, it was found that the trade was a matter of knowledge, so that oral and picture tests would have to be used.

Preparation of Tests.

When it was discovered that the trade was a recognized one and could be tested, the field force collected information about it from experts, trade union officials, literature of the trade, trade school authorities, employers, and from other sources, and the work of formulating the questions began. From forty to sixty questions were drawn up, each of which would call for an answer showing knowledge of the trade, and, meeting the following requirements, it would have to be in the language of the trade; it would have to be a complete unit in itself and require no explanation; it would not be a chance question that could be answered by a good guess; it would have to be as short as possible and require a very short answer, preferably "yes," or "no," and the meaning would have to be clear to everybody.

The questions thus compiled were then tried on a number of tradesmen, usually from nine to twelve, whose replies, it was assumed, would indicate whether the questions were easy or difficult to answer. In this sampling, men from different shops and plants and from different sections of the country were tried, to keep specialized methods or modes of expression confined to one shop or locality from influencing the standardization of the test. At least two examiners were used on each test at this stage, to get the benefit of more than one point of view in the revision that was to follow. As a result of this sampling, they learned whether the test was applicable to trade conditions, whether it represented good trade practice, whether any questions could be modified, improved or eliminated; whether the test would cover the whole range of the trade from novice to expert, and whether the test was a representative sampling of the whole range of trade processes.

In the light of these answers the questions were revisced and the test itself drawn up and limited to the number of questions that could be asked in the time available in the actual tests at camps, and to questions representing every possible degree of skill in the trade. Then the questions were tried on twenty known experts, twenty known journeymen, twenty known apprentices, and twenty known novices. Men were chosen who were typical of their groups, and the tests were given under conditions similar to those under which they would be given in the cantonments. Among the novices tested would be several men of high intelligence and of mature age, but with no trade ability.

Three testing stations were used, in Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Newark, to get the benefit of a wide geographical distribution. The reply made by each man to each question was recorded, and the result of this final sampling was turned over to the Statistical Department of the Trade Test Office. The experts in this department made a close study of each question and of each reply, determined relative values, and then settled upon the selection of questions which would make a balanced test.

The test was so arranged that a known expert would be able to answer all, or nearly all, of the questions, a journeyman a majority, an apprentice less still and a novice practically none. This does not mean that each question would be answered correctly by all the experts, a majority of the journeymen, some apprentices, and none of the novices. A few of the questions would show this general result, but the other type of question would be more common.

Some would show a great difference between the novices and the apprentices, and some would be answered by all the experts and journeymen and by none of the apprentices and novices. Each test usually included a question or two which could only be answered by an expert. A question of this sort might, for instance, concern a certain nut or part of a machine which, when not properly adjusted, would affect the machine slightly, and which would be noticed and known instinctively by the expert through his years of experience with the machine, but would not be known to the journeymen and the apprentices.
